....31 Arrested In Newark Area

NEWARK, N.J.(AP) — Roving bands of Puerto Rican youths threw firebombs and looted stores in a 12-block area of Newark on Tuesday night, police said. Seventeen persons were injured and 31 arrested.

Twelve of those hurt were policemen, but the extent of injuries was not known.

It was the third day of disorders for the city of 400,000, New Jersey's largest.

Police Director Hubert A. Williams said 30 adults and one juvenile were arrested on a variety of charges including disturbance of the peace, burglary, theft and assault on a police officer.

Williams, at a news conference, said despite the violence a "relative calm" prevailed in the city.

Tuesday night's disorders centered around Columbus Homes, a city-owned housing project where most residents are Puerto Rican. About 200 police patroled the area near the project.

The housing project is in the predominantly white North Ward, about a mile from City Hall and the downtown commercial district.

Police used tear gas to chase the hit-and-run bands of youths from storefronts in a 12-block area. A dozen stores along Seventh Avenue and a half-dozen more elsewhere in the North Ward were looted, police said.

At least seven firebombs were thrown, Williams said.

Williams, a black, denied police radio reports that officers were fired on at the housing project. He said what sounded like gunfire was in fact truck backfires.

However, an officer at the housing project said: "I definitely heard at least one shot and it was not from anyone I was with. We do not know the source of the shooting. It came from the general direction of the project."

On Tuesday afternoon a brief outbreak of firebombing and looting was reported only hours after Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson imposed a ban on street demonstrations. Heavy rain ended those disturbances.

He also met with community leaders in an attempt to quell the disorders which began on Sunday at a Puerto Rican festival in a county park.

About 10 per cent of the city's population is Puerto Rican.

Before the meeting, some 75 persons demonstrated outside City Hall in defiance of the ban Gibson imposed on street protests. Three attempts by the group to storm City Hall were rebuffed by police cordons on the steps.

The building was declared off-limits Tuesday to all except city employes and "those with legitimate business," one policeman said. Newsmen were denied entrance.

Sigfredo Carrion, a spokesman for the People's Committee Against Repression and Police Brutality and one of the community leaders who met with Gibson, said, "If the city does not provide proper avenue for redress, the people will take out their anger on those institutions around that bring about their plight."

The noontime trouble occurred near Seventh and Clifton Avenues, in a low-income residential area of the North Ward. The North Ward is predominantly white, but also includes a Puerto Rican community.

Police used tear gas to disperse looters.

The mayor said his primary goal in imposing the ban was to protect the city's 400,000 residents, about 10 per cent of whom are Spanish speaking and 50 per cent of whom are black.

"Any attempts to picket, carry signs, gather or congregate in any form of protest will result in immediate arrest," declared Gibson, the city's first black mayor.

State Fair: Up And Down

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Nebraska's State Fair is still having its ups and downs.

The up is in attendance, over 30,000 higher than last year; and the down is at the midway rides and at the grandstand where trumpeter and Tonight Show showman Doc Severinsen drew half the expected crowd.

The longest line at the fair on Tuesday was in front of the Food Science Club's ice cream stand.

The huge double-dip ice cream cones were selling for 40 cents but it took up to 15 minutes of waiting to get one.

Gone Or Upstairs

4-H exhibits are either leaving or going upstairs in the youth complex as the Future Farmers of America exhibits take over the lower level and the livestock barns.

A representative 4-H exhibit will remain on display in the upper level of the fair building throughout the remainder of the fair while the FFA exhibits occupy the rest of the building.

Sheep exhibitors were moving into the upper part of the beef barn and the Charolais, Polled Hereford and Galloway cattle were moving into the lower part of the same building.

The primary livestock activity was in the open class swine barn, where Landrace, Duroc, Chester White and Spotted hogs were judged.

Hungry Jack, a Duroc boar owned by Gentry Brothers of Polo, Mo., was named the Grand and Junior Champion Duroc.

The Reserve Junior Champion was Red Profit, owned by Krivohlavek Durocs of Dorchester.

Transition Smooth

The changeover process from the first half to the second half of the fair went so smoothly that fair manager Henry Brandt said he would shorten the period of time allowed between the release of the first half exhibits and the time exhibits for the second half of the fair have to be in place for the 1975 fair.

Fair News, Results

Dan Siebold, president of the fair board, said he was very pleased with the fair thus far. "We are down about 2½% in the carnival but we have made that up at the gate, so I am very happy thus far. We have had very few complaints this year. Blacktopping and paving much of the area has gotten the fair out of the mud which was a problem in years past," he said.

Brandt edged his crowd estimate up to 17,500 for Tuesday, bringing the total attendance at the fair this year to 387,500, 32,500 above the same day last year.

The Doc Severinsen show in front of the grandstand had a disappointing crowd of 3,000 Tuesday night. Brandt had expected a crowd double that size.

Dr. John Orr of the University of Nebraska Extension Service, helping register 4-H horsemen at the Fair, described it as "the best fair I have been at in 30 years. This man Brandt has been working wonders here at the fairgrounds."

Youngsters said goodbye to a lot of work and in many cases to animals that had become pets as the cattle, hogs and sheep went off to be slaughtered the the carcass contests.

A good market price plus the hope of additional cash prizes from the carcass contest did help ease the pain of parting.

Some truckers found backing into the loading chutes a bit tricky because some carnival equipment was located close to the loading chute. This delayed livestock loading.

A few 4-H youngsters were still giving demonstrations in the 4-H building to fair-sized crowds of observers.

Others were working on horses for the various 4-H horse shows. A parade of halter classes, Green Hunter, Dressage and English classes plus the county team trials were on the schedule Tuesday evening.

A lively show with pole bending, barrel racing, calf roping and team roping is scheduled for Wednesday evening.

By noon Wednesday all livestock classes will once again be in place, crowds will pick up and the second half of the State Fair will be in full tilt with a horse-pulling contest in front of the grandstand beginning at 1 p.m.

Parts Of 72 Bodies Unearthed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Turkish troops digging in a garbage dump at the deserted village of Maratha unearthed by nightfall Tuesday parts of the corpses of 72 Turkish Cypriot men, women and children.

In Istanbul, Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit warned that his country would take "serious measures" in Cyprus if Turkish Cypriots continued to be massacred.

In an apparent effort to diminish the threat to future Cyprus peace talks caused by evidence of major atrocities, the Greek Cypriot government in Nicosia again asked the Turks to accept impartial investigations of all atrocity reports on the island.

The Turkish prime minister said the mass grave near Maratha was a "concrete and bloody" example of atrocities by the Greek Cypriots against their countrymen of Turkish blood.

Ecevit told a news conference the Greeks were making "illogicial and unreasonable demands" from Turkey as preconditions to return to the conference table for a Cyprus settlement. He said they included withdrawal of Turkish troops from Cyprus before settlement.

He forecast "double Enosis" or annexation of one part of the island by Greece and another by Turkey if Greece would not negotiate.

The bodies exhumed at Maratha, 12 miles northwest of Famagusta, were so broken and decomposed that a count was impossible, but Swedish chief inspector Lars Hakansson of the United Nations police said: "I am counting the heads. So far I have seen 72 and there are more bodies still visible in the earth."

"There are at least seven heads definitely identified as children," he said.

Survivors said the victims were massacred 20 days ago by Greek Cypriots from neighboring villages.

The government of President Glafcos Clerides, speaking for the Greek Cypriot side, said Monday that a medallion found on one of the bodies showed some might be Greek Cypriots killed by the Turks.

"It is a lie, a lie," said the religious chief. "These are our villagers."

Raouf Denktash, the Turkish Cypriot vice president, postponed key talks with Clerides on Monday after the mass grave was found.

The Clerides government called for an independent investigation of the Maratha massacre and other atrocities with the U.N. peace force and the Red Cross checking evidence. Denktash said he welcomed an impartial inquiry.

Informed sources at Nicosia said Tuesday that Clerides has purged the Greek Cypriot police of 700 members of the EOKA-B underground that deposed Archbishop Makarios last July.

In Athens, former cabinet minister Andreas Papandreou on Tuesday announced he had formed the Panhellenic Socialist Movement party to compete in Greece's general elections which are to be held sometime after the Cyprus crisis passes.

Indian Delivers History Lesson

By GORDON WINTERS

"I'm proud to be here for my Indian people, but I'm scared," a Wounded Knee defendant told his all-woman jury Tuesday.

Roger Iron Cloud, one of four Indian men on trial in the second Wounded Knee case to be heard in Lincoln, said after court that he spoke because it became evident during selection of the jury that "nobody knew anything" about Indians.

In an interview outside the courtroom Iron Cloud, 25, recounted what he told the jury.

Beginning with the landing of the Pilgrims, he said, whites have had a standing policy of genocide, to exterminate Indians and their cultures.

When the Pilgrims landed, Iron Cloud said, they saw a "land of golden opportunity, all the land they could take."

"The country was founded on greed and exploitation."

The Dawes Act of 1887, he said, "ripped off" about 90 million acres from Indians. He said that under the law 135 million acres were set aside for Indians, but each Indian was allotted only 160 acres. The remainder, the 90 million acres, was opened to homesteaders, he said.

Another example of white greed cited by Iron Cloud was the Treaty of 1868, a document that spokesman for the American Indian Movement have said was the reason for Wounded Knee.

The treaty was abrogated, or repealed, when gold was discovered in the Black Hills. The new treaty greatly reduced the land area guaranteed to the Indians.

An example of genocide, Iron Cloud said, is the 1890 Wounded Knee massacre. Iron Cloud noted that it is one of the few, or the only, time a U.S. Cavalry "victory" became known as a massacre.

Battle Or Massacre

"Every other time," Iron Cloud said, a Cavalry victory was known as a battle. Indian victories, on the other hand, were called massacres.

At Wounded Knee in 1890, Iron Cloud said, women and children doing the "ghost dance" were gunned down. Their bodies are buried in a mass grave at Wounded Knee.

The 1934 Indian Reorganization Act, or the Wheeler-Howard Act, Iron Cloud said, was passed so the government could get away from treaties.

The act, he said, sets up democratic tribal governments — a form of government alien to Indian culture — that makes it easier for the government to set up puppet governments.

The present tribal government at Pine Ridge is corrupt, he charged. Iron Cloud said ballot boxes were stuffed at the last election (won by Richard Wilson) when Bureau of Indian Affairs police removed them from polling places.

"Goon squads" organized by Wilson, Iron Cloud claimed, are like the Gestapo of Nazi Germany.

These tactics, he said are supported by the government through the BIA, established under the War Department in 1819 and moved to the Interior Department in 1949.

Concentration Camps

The kind of qualities sought by the BIA, Iron Cloud said, are exemplified by a director during the 1950's. That man, Iron Cloud said, ran concentration camps for Japanese in the United States during World War II.

Iron Cloud, Wallace Little Jr., Beau Little and Dale Red Boy are charged with impeding federal officers, using a firearm in the commission of a felony and assaulting federal officers.

Grain Warehouse Program Rapped

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska's grain warehouse program, celebrated as a model for the nation, fails to meet the benchmark of an exemplary program in the eyes of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

A copy of a draft report by USDA's agricultural marketing service estimated that between 25% and 35% of Nebraska's licensed grain warehouses and elevators have been operating with grain shortages.

However, the Nebraska Public Service Commission, which handles elevator inspections, said the USDA is splitting hairs over technicalities and that no real problem exists.

The draft, obtained by The Star, said the commission's inspectors seldom recognize the shortages or seek disciplinary action.

An accompanying table of elevators visited in June, 1974 listed shortages or inadequate records at 12 elevators and no problem at four. One of the elevators cited is owned by Sen. Jules Burbach of Crofton; the report said Burbach Elevator was short, 12,597 bushels of corn which should have been caught by commission inspectors.

The report indicates similar criticism was leveled at the commission in December, 1973, and that as of April, 1974 "there was no noticeable improvement in the quality of examinations."

A commission spokesman said the USDA is being unreasonable and is accusing the state of violations which are condoned under federal regulations.

The problem, the spokesman said, centers around cash flow problems caused by the shortage of boxcars for the movement of grain.

When elevators are able to get boxcars, he said, they ship as much grain as they can due to the uncertainty when boxcars will be available next. Sometimes, he said the farmer cannot be paid for the grain until the elevator is paid. Normally, he said, the shortages are small and promptly corrected.

That lag time is when a technical shortage occurs — in other words, the elevator can neither pay the farmer nor return his grain.

Under federal regulations this is alright, the spokesman said, but under Nebraska regulations it is not.

He said the USDA is being unreasonable in accusing the state of violations which are condoned under federal practice.

Commissioner Eric Rasmussen said, although he has not read the report, he is sure, "It's just part of a running battle."

Haig Expected To Be Named

Washington — Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., chief of the White House staff, is expected to be appointed supreme commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and of U.S. forces in Europe by President Ford, two authoritative administration officials said Tuesday.

To take the post he will be recalled to active duty as a four-star Army general, a status from which he retired in August 1973, three months after he replaced H. R. Haldeman as former President Richard Nixon's top White House aide, the officials said.

The White House said through a spokesman that it could not comment on the report. Another high administration official said that Ford was exploring several options concerning Haig and that he wanted him to stay on for awhile. This official said that the decision was not imminent. But the NATO post was the most likely one for Haig, he added.

Haig, who will be 50 in December, would succeed Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster, 59. Nixon named Goodpaster supreme Allied commander in Europe in 1969.

The commander has the double function of overseeing the 15-member Atlantic defense community and the more than 300,000 U.S. servicemen stationed in Europe.

Ford Inflation Proposals Likely To Be Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An economic policy coordinator for President Ford said Tuesday long-range major legislation deemed necessary to fight inflation will probably be deferred until 1975.

In a telephone interview, White House aide L. William Seidman said any legislative proposals growing out of Ford's Sept. 27-28 economic summit would probably come too late for congressional action this year because of the likelihood of a mid-October adjournment.

But he said legislation of this kind would probably deal with longer-range aspects of the country's economic troubles.

As for administrative moves Ford can make on his own, Seidman said these would be made as required — even before the summit meeting if necessary.

Businessmen taking part in a pre-summit session were given a series of questions Tuesday to consider in pondering solutions for the nation's economic problems.

White House officials disclosed the contents of a letter mailed to the participants as President Ford met twice with economic advisers.

Because Ford will spend so much time this week on the economy, Press Secretary Jerald F. terHorst said, a decision on granting conditional amnesty to Vietnam war deserters and draft resisters "just may not occur until Monday or Tuesday of next week." Ford had hoped to make an announcement this week.

Before the economic summit Sept. 27 and 28, several hundred persons, representing various economic interest groups, will take part in 12 preliminary sessions across the country.

A letter to those invited to a Sept. 19 Detroit meeting of business and manufacturing leaders was expected to be a lot like letters sent to other participants, officials said.

In it, Ford wrote: "We are asking participants to come prepared to discuss the present economic situation, its causes and the most appropriate policies the government can adopt. We are also anxious to listen to your advice regarding the problems faced by your particular sector of the economy and how you can best contribute to controlling inflation.

"The Conference on Inflation is a bipartisan national effort to deal with our number one domestic problem. Your participation will be a real service to your country, and I do hope that you will be able to give us the benefit of your thinking."

Ford sent along "a series of questions that will focus the discussions" at the preliminary sessions and at the Washington summit.

The questions embraced the expenditure and receipts side of fiscal policy, the best course for monetary policy, government regulations that have an economic impact and economic conditions.

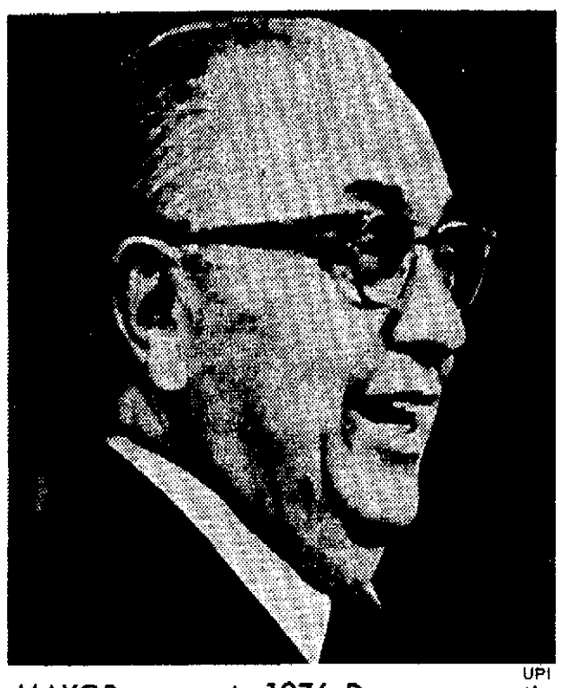

Questions concerning government regulations at all levels centered on their effect on productivity, the impact of environmental protection requirements and invited discussion of "wage and price controls, guidelines or initiatives."

Ford, at this news conference last Wednesday, flatly ruled out imposition of controls.

In the international area, the businessmen were invited to discuss the availability of raw materials and "current international economic developments and international arrangements for financial stability."

The list of questions concluded by asking what actions summit participants would recommend that Ford and Congress adopt on both a long-term and short-term basis. The phrasing suggested short-term recommendations might well focus on dealing with "hardships and inequities" while longer term suggestions should be realistic.

Ford met Tuesday morning with chairman Alan Greenspan of the Council of Economic Advisers, economic counselor Kenneth Rush and L. William Seidman, executive director of the summit sessions. Among those at the afternoon meeting were Budget Director Roy L. Ash, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon and Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns.

MAYOR . . . wants 1976 Demo convention.

Daley Returns, Says He May Run For Sixth Term

Chicago (UPI) — Mayor Richard J. Daley returned to his desk Tuesday after a 120-day absence, told reporters he may seek a sixth four-year term and said the 1976 Democratic National Convention should be held in Chicago.

Daley has been recuperating from arterial surgery performed last June. He said he had lost 25 or 30 pounds but is feeling fine.

Aside from a new softness to his familiar raspy voice, Daley seemed unusually strong for a 72-year-old man who just recently suffered from what physicians said was a slight stroke. The surgery was undertaken to prevent a recurrence.

Daley said the operation was a success, but that he wants to determine precisely how strong he is before committing himself to a political campaign. Several Democrats, none of them closely identified with Daley's inner group, have said they will seek the Democratic nomination. But political observers say that barring a major medical problem, Daley can have another term for the asking.

During the 14-minute news conference Daley's answers added to his oft-repeated comment that his administration has served Chicagoans well.

He declined to speculate on whether he would seek another term as chairman of the Cook County Central Democratic Committee, but said the Democrats' chances for a sweep of the White House in 1976 "look good." He said he would like the nominating convention to be held in Chicago but refused to say if he had a favorite presidential candidate.

Chicago has had more political conventions than any other city. But after their 1968 convention many Democrats said they never wanted to return because of police handling of unruly demonstrators.

East Germany May Pay

Washington — State Department officials disclosed that East Germany has agreed to discuss possible compensation for Jewish and other victims of Nazism following the establishment of diplomatic relations. In contrast with West Germany, the East Germans previously refused to pay, but Washington made it clear during recent talks that unless the matter was formally negotiated there would be no diplomatic recognition from the U.S. — and no trade relations.

Cyprus Settlement Progresses

Nicosia — Progress toward a Cyprus settlement was indicated when the leader of the Turkish Cypriote community said that Greece and the Greek Cypriot government had privately acknowledged that the island might become a federated state divided into two autonomous zones, one Greek and one Turkish. Raul Denktash, the Turkish Cypriot leader, said formal negotiations concerning such a solution could begin in a few weeks.

Leftist Movement Launched

Athens — A new leftwing movement was launched in Greece by Andreas Papandreou, who sharply rebuked the civilian government of Constantine Caramanlis for not acting quickly enough to purge public offices of the remnants of seven years of military rule.

Japanese Relations Threatened

Tokyo — The South Korean ambassador to Japan warned that relations between his country and Japan had reached a "dangerous" stage and left no doubt that a diplomatic rupture was possible. American interests are involved in the increasingly quarrelsome situation between Seoul and Tokyo because Washington has security bonds with both, and American troops in South Korea depend on U.S. bases in Japan.

Shortage Angers Italians

Rome — A scarcity of pasta, caused by government attempts at controlling the price of the national staple food, is angering housewives throughout Italy just as many families have returned from vacation and are bracing for what threatens to be a difficult autumn and winter.

Board To Appeal Ruling In Favor Of Medical License For Dr. Finch

KANSAS CITY (AP) — An appeals court ruled Tuesday that Dr. Bernard Finch, who served a 10-year prison term in California for slaying his wife, should be granted a Missouri medical license. But the state Board for the Healing Arts said it would appeal the ruling.

Finch had appealed to the Missouri Court of Appeals after the board turned down his request for a license.

John Hailey, the board's executive secretary, announced plans for the group's appeal and added: "The board is on record as saying it will take it as high as necessary."

Since he was paroled, Finch has been working as an X-ray technician at the community hospital in the community of El Dorado Springs in southwest Missouri.

The Missouri Board of Healing Arts had ruled that Finch was not qualified for a license because of the murder conviction in 1961.

"Since that time, Dr. Finch has conducted himself in an exemplary manner, and according to the evidence he appears to have sincerely repented and has accomplished a solid rehabilitation," Judge Solbert M. Wasserstrom wrote in the Missouri Court of Appeals decision filed Tuesday.

Finch recently remarried. His third wife is a rehabilitation worker he first met at a California prison. She had returned to Kansas, her native state, and taken a job as a social worker at Pittsburg, Kan.

Barbara Finch, whom Finch married in 1951, was shot to death July 18, 1959, on the front lawn of their home at West Covina, Calif.

Finch was arrested the next morning. He and Carole Treghoff, his secretary, were charged with first-degree murder and conspiracy.

Bank To Raise Interest Rates

NEW YORK (AP) — New York's First National City Bank, citing the high cost of money, said Tuesday it was raising interest rates on most categories of consumer loans effective immediately.

The country's second-largest commercial bank said new rates for consumer loans would vary according to the length of the loan. The annual percentage rate for a 12 month loan would be 11.58 per cent, the bank said, while a 36-month loan would cost 13.38 per cent annually in interest.

Loss At Lloyds Bank May Be Near $1 Billion

©The New York Times

London — A new wave of uncertainty spread through the European financial community Tuesday following the disclosure of heavy foreign exchange losses at a Swiss branch of Lloyds Bank Ltd., one of Britain's leading banks.

Sources in London said unauthorized exchange dealings in Lloyds Lugano branch may have approached $1 billion and certainly amounted to many times the $75 million in actual losses reported by the bank Monday.

The atmosphere of distress spread through all European financial centers and was heightened by the failure Tuesday of another London investment house, along with the disclosure that a small Viennese bank might be forced out of business.

The investment house, Tustain and Lestrange, announced that it was unable to meet its obligations and was shutting down its operations. The firm is not large by British or American standards, but it is the fourth British brokerage house to fail this year.

The British investment community has experienced major strains this year because of sharply declining prices and volume in the stock market due to the uncertain outlook for the economy. At the same time, the banking community has come under pressure partly because of economic dislocations arising from the sudden increase in oil prices.

In Vienna, Austrian Finance Minister Hannes Androsch announced that the Allgemeine Wirtschaftbank, a relatively small institution, had requested a six-month moratorium on the payment of its debts after several major depositors decided to withdraw fixed-term deposits.

Androsch said the bank's offices were closed after a government-appointed inspector had moved in to investigate the situation to determine whether the bank could survive.

He said the Wirtschaftbank's liquidity problems were not connected with foreign exchange transactions and there was no reason for concern about the Austrian banking system in general. The bank's balance-sheet assets were estimated at between $43 million and $70 million.

However, all difficulties experienced by banks everywhere in the world, in recent months, have been regarded as symptomatic of the stresses under which the international banking system has been operating under conditions of sharply fluctuating currency exchange rates.

The collapse of the Herstatt Bank of West Germany two months ago, the losses experienced by the Franklin National Bank of New York, and the reported losses of other major banks in the foreign exchange market have raised serious doubts about the stability of the system.

In most cases the root of the problem has been the system of floating — rather than fixed — exchange rates that has prevailed for some time. Floating rates have resulted in wide swings in currency values. Such swings are tempting to traders because they contain the potential for enormous profits — as well as losses.

In several of the cases that have come to light so far, the traders have used their positions at their banks to deal extensively in the market in the hope of earning big profits for themselves through putting the funds of their banks secretly at risk.

The parties dealing on the other side of an unauthorized transaction have no way of knowing that the trades are being made strictly on a speculative basis by individual bank dealers, rather than on behalf of the banks themselves.

All banks customarily engage in foreign exchange trading as a service to their customers. When an individual or a company or another bank wishes to convert pounds into dollars or French francs into Deutschmarks, for example, it must enter the exchange market.

However, such transactions normally are executed entirely at the customer's risk and at little or no risk to the bank. At the same time, however, the banks themselves can legally speculate on changes in currency valuations if they wish to undertake the risk.

Dean Surrenders

Wearing dark glasses, John W. Dean III, former counsel to former President Richard M. Nixon, arrives at U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., to surrender to U.S. marshals to begin a one- to four-year prison term for his role in the Watergate cover-up plot. Reporters asked Dean if he thought Nixon should go to jail. Dean replied with a terse "no comment."

FTC Orders Developer To Refund $3 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission announced its final acceptance Tuesday of a negotiated settlement requiring a Miami land development company to refund nearly $3 million collected for parcels of land in Florida and Arizona.

The settlement, which some other law enforcement officials viewed as too meager, requires GAC Corp. to refund $2.8 million to buyers who stopped payment on parcels of land and to offer buyers still paying on lots in certain subdivisions the chance to swap for $14 million worth of lots in other subdivisions.

FTC officials view the settlement, originally proposed in March, as the opening wedge in an investigation which already covers about 30 companies in the $6 billion-a-year development industry.

Substantial portions of the land eligible for exchange is under water in Florida or is in areas where GAC has no plans for providing roads or other utilities. Under the agreement, FAC also promised to provide basic facilities in the developments where the land is being offered for exchange.

The FTC originally had complained that GAC used misleading tactics to sell land in Florida and Arizona.

The prices of the parcels were generally $1,500 to $2,000.

Under the agreement, people who stopped paying rather than sink more money into waterlogged land will have to give up the down payment and the first 30 monthly payments, or about a third of the full price.

The FTC said the money GAC will be permitted to retain represents the company's selling costs.

Iowa Atty. Gen. Richard C. Turner had complained that the formula "allows GAC to keep millions of dollars from those who defaulted because of deceptive practices."

Turner had urged full restitution.

Close Vote Ends Strike Against Western Electric

NEW YORK (AP) — A 33-day strike by 61,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers against Western Electric Co. rolled to an end Tuesday after a very close vote on a new contract.

Pasquale Gino, president of the Electrical Manufacturers Council of the IBEW, announced in Reading, Pa., that, with over half of the strikers voting, a new agreement was ratified nationally by about 80 votes.

Gino said in a telephone interview that he ordered his members to return to work Tuesday morning except where there was still disagreement on local supplements to a national contract.

While a final count of ballots was not available and the preliminary margin of acceptance was close, Gino said approval of the contract probably would stand, according to Edward Brobst, secretary-treasurer of the council, in Allentown, Pa.

The vote announcement prompted Western Electric, the supply and manufacturing arm of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., to restore production at most of the 16 plants that had been struck across the nation.

"We will resume full production as rapidly as possible," a spokesman said.

Meanwhile, there was announcement of ratification of new contracts covering 70,000 other IBEW members employed by Bell System units of AT&T and 50,000 members of various independent unions, linked together as the Alliance of Independent Telephone Unions.

Attention switched to the Communications Workers of America, which was expected to announce Friday the results of mail balloting among 500,000 members employed by the Bell System nationally. The CWA and IBEW are units of the AFL-CIO.

The pattern-setting CWA tentative agreement rached in unified Bell System national bargaining was for wage increases of 7.1 to 10.7 per cent in the first year of new three-year contracts, with additional raises of up to 3.3 per cent plus cost-of-living adjustments in each of the following two years.

Prior wages had ranged from $108 to $166 weekly for telephone operators and $148 to $260 for craftsmen, according to skills and time on the job.

Quota Meat Imports 44% Below Last July

WASHINGTON (AP) — July imports of quota-type meat, mainly low quality beef used for hamburger, were at the lowest level for any month since November 1969 and 44 per cent below the previous July, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

"Over 80 per cent of the decline was due to smaller imports from Australia and New Zealand, the two leading overseas suppliers of meat to the United States," the department said.

Officials said the July total put meat imports for the year at 615.2 million pounds, down 12 per cent from January-July 1973.

USDA has estimated meat imports would total 1.21 billion pounds for all of 1974, down from nearly 1.36 billion in 1973. Official said lower world meat prices and excellent grazing conditions in Australia were contributing to substantial holdbacks of cattle from the export market.

More than two years ago the Nixon administration suspended import quotas to help entice more foreign beef into the U.S. market. Earlier this year, however, as U.S. cattle prices plunged, the administration was under pressure to reimpose quotas to protect domestic livestock producers.

But officials, including Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, insisted, there would be a voluntary cutback on the part of foreign suppliers and that quotas need not be resumed.

Quota-type meat includes primarily fresh, frozen and chilled beef, but also veal, mutton and goat meat.

Imports of canned and other processed meat are not subject to quotas.

Euromart Ag Ministers Split

Brussels (UPI) — European Common Market agricultural ministers, meeting in private emergency session, split Tuesday over whether to give Europe's angry farmers more money.

At least 40 Dutch and Belgian farmers picketed the meeting with signs reading "justice — we are not beggars" and "respect the oldest profession on earth."

Nearly twice as many police watched them, but there was no sign of the mass demonstrations by farmers that have erupted regularly around Europe this summer.

At issue was a proposal by the Common Market's executive commission for an interim 4% increase, effective Oct. 1, in support prices for most farm produce.

After three hours of talks, the nine ministers appeared badly split. Spokesmen said West Germany, Denmark and Britain opposed the increase to varying degrees. Holland backed it, Italy and Ireland supported it with reservations, and Belgium, France and Luxembourg felt that even more was needed.

"This split makes it almost imperative that it (a formal decision today) is out," a British official said.

Common Market Agricultural Commissioner Pierre Lardinois, who wrote the proposal, said the most he hoped for was a "certain agreement in principle," with possible firm decisions on more money for the farmers at the next meeting Sept. 23-24.

But common market sources said they doubted Britain could agree on anything until after its general election, which London political observers expect in mid-October.

Local 1974 Returning To Work

Omaha (AP) — It was back to work Tuesday for striking members of the Omaha Local 1974 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers at Western Electric's sprawling plant.

A spokesman said a national vote of workers approved a three-year contract offer by Western Electric.

The Omaha local, composed of about 2,200 workers, voted Monday to reject the contract offer, but go along with the slim national approval vote.

GM Head Says Price To Go Up

Milford, Mich. (UPI) — General Motors Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg warned Tuesday of another round of price hikes on top of the average increase of nearly $450 just imposed on 1975 model cars.

"There are many cost pressures," Gerstenberg said. "How long we will be able to hold our present prices is a big question."

Speaking to newsmen at the 50th anniversary celebration of the GM Proving Ground, Gerstenberg said one way to hold down prices would be elimination of some government-ordered safety and emission control equipment.

If the government allows removal of some equipment, Gerstenberg said, "we would cut the prices based on the cost savings that were achieved."

GM last week began selling 1975 cars early because of shortages of some larger 1974 models.

Gerstenberg, who this past weekend predicted 1975 model sales would be up by 500,000 cars over gas-short 1974, said a primary concern is continually rising costs and shortages of some basic materials.

Coal Miners List Desires

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Mine Workers presented the coal industry Tuesday with a list of costly contract demands that union President Arnold Miller said would guarantee miners a fair share of the energy profits and avoid a crippling strike.

Miller said it took the country a long time to realize that coal is a major source of energy, and that while miners "have always responded to the nation's demands in time of war and peace ... we're not going to respond at any price."

"Coal miners," he said, "didn't bring on the inflation that we're suffering from now."

The union chief commented at a news conference shortly after handing industry negotiators an inch-thick list of bargaining proposals that called for, among other things, substantial wage increases, cost-of-living raises to keep pace with inflation, sick pay, improved pensions, grievance machinery and a host of safety measures.

Loss At Lloyds Bank May Be Near $1 Billion

©The New York Times

London — A new wave of uncertainty spread through the European financial community Tuesday following the disclosure of heavy foreign exchange losses at a Swiss branch of Lloyds Bank Ltd., one of Britain's leading banks.

Sources in London said unauthorized exchange dealings in Lloyds Lugano branch may have approached $1 billion and certainly amounted to many times the $75 million in actual losses reported by the bank Monday.

The atmosphere of distress spread through all European financial centers and was heightened by the failure Tuesday of another London investment house, along with the disclosure that a small Viennese bank might be forced out of business.

The investment house, Tustain and Lestrange, announced that it was unable to meet its obligations and was shutting down its operations. The firm is not large by British or American standards, but it is the fourth British brokerage house to fail this year.

Congress CAN Act

Congress would achieve a legislative grand slam of sorts if it passed a national health insurance plan before adjourning this fall. Legislation to help people meet the stratospheric costs of health care plus the landmark pension reform bill President Ford just signed into law would add up to a social welfare package of magnificent proportions. Each on its own will make life better for millions of Americans.

But time is short for Congress this session. Before quitting in time to campaign for the elections this November, the House and Senate need to investigate and act on the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller as vice president of the United States. Given the times and the absolute necessity for a stand-by president, that matter is of undisputed Number One priority.

It would be unrealistic, too, to think that an acceptable and workable plan could be obtained in a matter of weeks from the tangle of conflicting philosophies and ideas which shroud the health care problem. In dealing with an industry which resists change, and has considerable public support for its position, time and patience are essential, even as health care costs soar far above the capabilities of most Americans to pay.

A national health plan has been talked about for as long and longer than pension reform. And it has taken seven years of hard work in Congress to overcome employer opposition to pension reform so that legislation protecting the rights of workers could be approved. And the plan approved is not all that reform advocates wanted, although it does secure the investments of workers in existing private pension plans and those which may be set up in the future. The case of an employe working throughout a career to provide for his retirement only to find the pension fund or the company collapsing or himself terminated from the job before he is qualified to draw on the fund should be a thing of the past.

So the triumph of pension reform illustrates that given time, tough socio-economic problems can be worked out in the Congress. With the re-assertion of its power and the new senses of cooperation, urgency and hope articulated by the Ford administration, the time may be right next session for the Congress to attack the health care issue realistically and forcefully.

World Fiddles, Cyprus Burns

There seems to be, ironically, more uncivilized behavior in the cradle of civilization than anywhere else in the world.

The Jews and Arabs have no premium on violence and hatred. The Greek and Turkish ethnics on Cyprus are equally disposed to slaughter each other with a vengeance. Raids on villages either side of the line imposed by the Turkish occupiers are as bloody as the terrorist attacks on the Israel-Lebanon border or the borders between the Arabs and other Israeli-occupied territories.

The world community is almost helpless to stop such internecine struggles if the blood is hot enough. Imagine the United Nations trying to stop bloodletting in China, for example, let alone poor little Cyprus.

And imagine Henry Kissinger, who loftily proclaimed that the U.S. can't be settling every internal dispute in every small country (he was right), now trying to impose his good offices on the warring parties on Cyprus. They wouldn't have it. He has earned the enmity of both.

The problem seems to be in marshalling the forces of world opinion and getting those who can act to act quickly enough to avert bloodshed.

The only thing that can be done now, it appears, is to identify the corpses. And to make life as tolerable as possible for the surviving refugees.

The Big Three Of Europe

GISCARD
. . . steady course . . .

LONDON — In the next phase of the development of Europe, much will depend on the personalities and political skill of the three leaders now in power — Chancellor Schmidt in West Germany, President Giscard d'Estaing in France and Prime Minister Harold Wilson in Britain.

All three are governing with very narrow majorities. In fact all three have come to power by the accidents and odd twists of politics, and now face formidable political and economic problems No three Western leaders could be more different.

Schmidt seems more direct and less complicated than the two others. He is no visionary like his predecessor, Willy Brandt, but a superb financial technician, and more enthusiastic about the unity of of Europe than the others.

Mainly, however, he concentrates on the problems of the day and the general economic disorder of the world, and like President Ford, he has the gift of plain speech, and of encouraging confidence.

Giscard d'Estaing is the most interesting new personality in European politics. Like his friend, Schmidt, he is a former finance minister with a determination to keep Franco-German relations on a steady and trustful course, but personally they are quite different.

Schmidt is a powerful, beefy man with a strong booming voice and the energy of a bull. Giscard d'Estaing is imperially slim and delicately handsome. He seems quite at home in the Elysee Palace — almost as if he had stepped out of one of the vast gilt 18th-Century picture frames in his elegant office.

Wilson seems a bit withdrawn these days. Though he faces an election, probably on Oct. 3 or 10, he has been away in the Scilly Isles for a month and is just now returning to lead the campaign.

But he is leading now in a different way. He has not been intervening in the work of the departments as he did in his previous government. He has picked a stronger cabinet this time, and shared responsibility with them, and he hasn't even moved into the prime minister's official residence at Number 10 Downing Street.

Outwardly he is the same, with his inevitable pipe and his quiet but sharp digs at the opposition and the press, but he is now described as the captain and sometimes even as the trainer of his team rather than its governor.

SCHMIDT
. . . no visionary . . .

The difference between Britain on the one hand and France and West Germany on the other now is that Giscard d'Estaing and Schmidt have given their countries a sense of new leadership and new beginnings, whereas Britain is stuck with old and worsening problems and old familiar leaders

The American political system, which is supposed to be so rigid, came out of its latest political crisis with new leaders, but the British, facing the worst economic tangle since the thirties, are now offered a choice between Wilson and Heath, who have been struggling with the nation's problems, not too successfully, for over a decade.

Giscard d'Estaing in contrast, is an exciting new figure, a conservative who speaks like a visionary, loves literature, studies Flaubert and De Maupassant, writes novels, and is as comfortable on television as Walter Cronkite.

Though he was not expected to reach the presidency after the death of Pompidou, and is now trying to run the country with uncertain support, a trade deficit of 2,000 billion francs a month and almost 15% inflation, he acts as if he had solid backing to introduce what amounts to a peaceful French revolution.

He is trying to create a new political majority in the middle, bring women and youth into positions of power, and reform the social and industrial structure of what is essentially a very conservative country.

He talks like Franklin Roosevelt, without Roosevelt's mammoth political support. He doesn't avoid the hard questions but confronts them. No need to be afraid of change, he says: The people fear it at first but accept it quite naturally after the issues have been voted.

It will take some time to prove this is actually true. His anti-inflation measures include higher taxes, especially on companies, steep cuts in fuel consumption this coming winter, a powerful credit squeeze and a bank rate up to a record of 13%. French bankruptcies rose by 23% in the first six months of this year.

Giscard d'Estaing talks about all this, however, as if everything is manageable. It all depends on leadership both in home affairs and foreign affairs, he insists.

WILSON
. . . faces election

If leaders are forceful enough, and imaginative enough, and if they lead with a certain "lyricism," he says, the people will begin to think in different ways about change and unity.

This word "lyricism" is probably the key to his new administration. It is not the sort of word Ford, Schmidt or Wilson would use, but call it anything else — style, class, even charisma. Giscard d'Estaing is introducing it as a new element in European politics, at a time when most countries are out of political class, and with this and his close working relations with Schmidt, he may, as he has promised, get France and Europe moving again.

WILLIAM V. SHANNON

Seven Days In August

WASHINGTON — When Fletcher Knebel and Charles W. Bailey wrote "Seven Days in May," a dozen years ago, most people regarded the idea of a military coup as merely the theme for an entertaining novel.

It is still more fantasy than reality, but certain events in the fall from power of Richard Nixon make the reality element a good deal stronger. For the first time, the shadowy outline has emerged of how a clique of military officers could seize power in this country.

During the weeks leading up to Nixon's resignation, there was occasional speculation, half nervous and half jocular, that rather than yield power, he might forestall his impeachment by using military force to dissolve Congress and control the newspapers and television networks. There is no evidence that Nixon ever contemplated such a desperate scenario.

Even if he had, however, a coup of that kind was never a serious threat because Nixon lacked the popular support to sustain it. In all his years of campaigning, he never aroused that animal roar from a crowd that a truly effective demagogue like George Wallace or Joe McCarthy could evoke. Secondly, he lacked an easily dramatized issue on which he could go to the people and appeal for support against the established institutions of the country.

Yet we now know that Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger worried about the mental state and possible motives of his former Commander - in - chief. Schlesinger has acknowledged that, during those weeks, he stayed in or close to the Pentagon at all times to make certain that he could intercept any orders from the White House that he deemed improper.

Equally significant is the critical role played by General Alexander Haig. A career Army officer, Haig served as Henry Kissinger's principal deputy for four years at the White House. During that time, Nixon rewarded him with frequent promotions, raising him from a colonel to a full general, sending him back to the Pentagon early in 1973 as Army vice-chief of staff. Almost immediately thereafter, Nixon prevailed upon Haig's sense of loyalty to persuade him to return to the White House to replace H. R. Haldeman as the President's principal aide.

Only reluctantly and some months after he took that civilian post did Haig resign his commission in the Army. Although a superb staff officer, intelligent and highly industrious, he has never learned the clear distinction that should exist between civilian and military values. He showed spectacularly bad judgment to involve the Army even implicitly in politics by taking Haldeman's old job.

He confused a civilian's personal loyalty to his political leader with an officer's institutional loyalty to his commander-in-chief. Such a confusion of loyalties could only be harmful to the Army's proper political neutrality.

Having served Nixon faithfully through all the desperate disclosures of the last year, Haig was instrumental in the final week in easing him out of office. He was in touch with Sen. Robert Griffin of Michigan, the assistant Republican leader of the Senate, and Rep. Charles Wiggins, R.-Calif., the President's principal defender on the House Judiciary Committee, letting them know how damaging the final transcripts were.

He helped James D. St. Clair persuade Nixon to issue the statement in which he acknowledged that he had misled his own attorney about the nature of the evidence.

When Senator Goldwater and other Republican leaders from Capitol Hill called upon Nixon to tell him that his prospects were hopeless, it was Haig who told them in advance that the President had half-decided to resign and warned them that direct pressure might make him recant his decision. It was he who then arranged for Kissinger to have dinner with the President and convince him that it was his duty to history and to world peace to resign rather than fight on hopelessly.

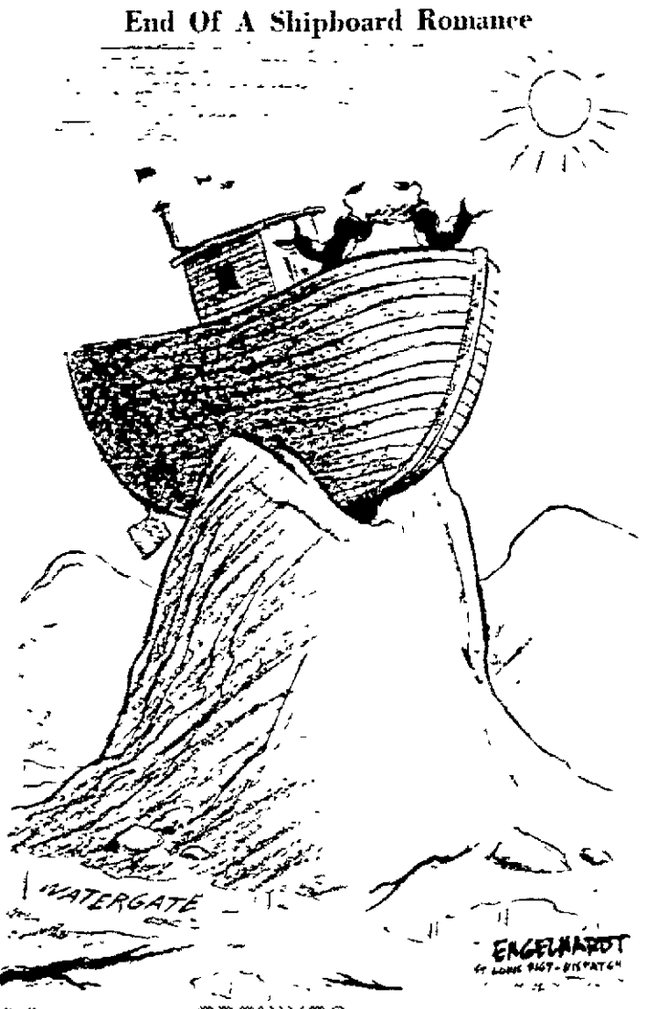

In orchestrating the show of congressional outrage and delicately maneuvering his way through Nixon's tortured psyche, Haig performed an act of patriotism.

The United States was lucky in August. Next time, a beleaguered president might be more ruthless or beyond caring. The secretary of defense might be feeble and compliant. The highly placed general in the White House might be more ambitious or unprincipled.

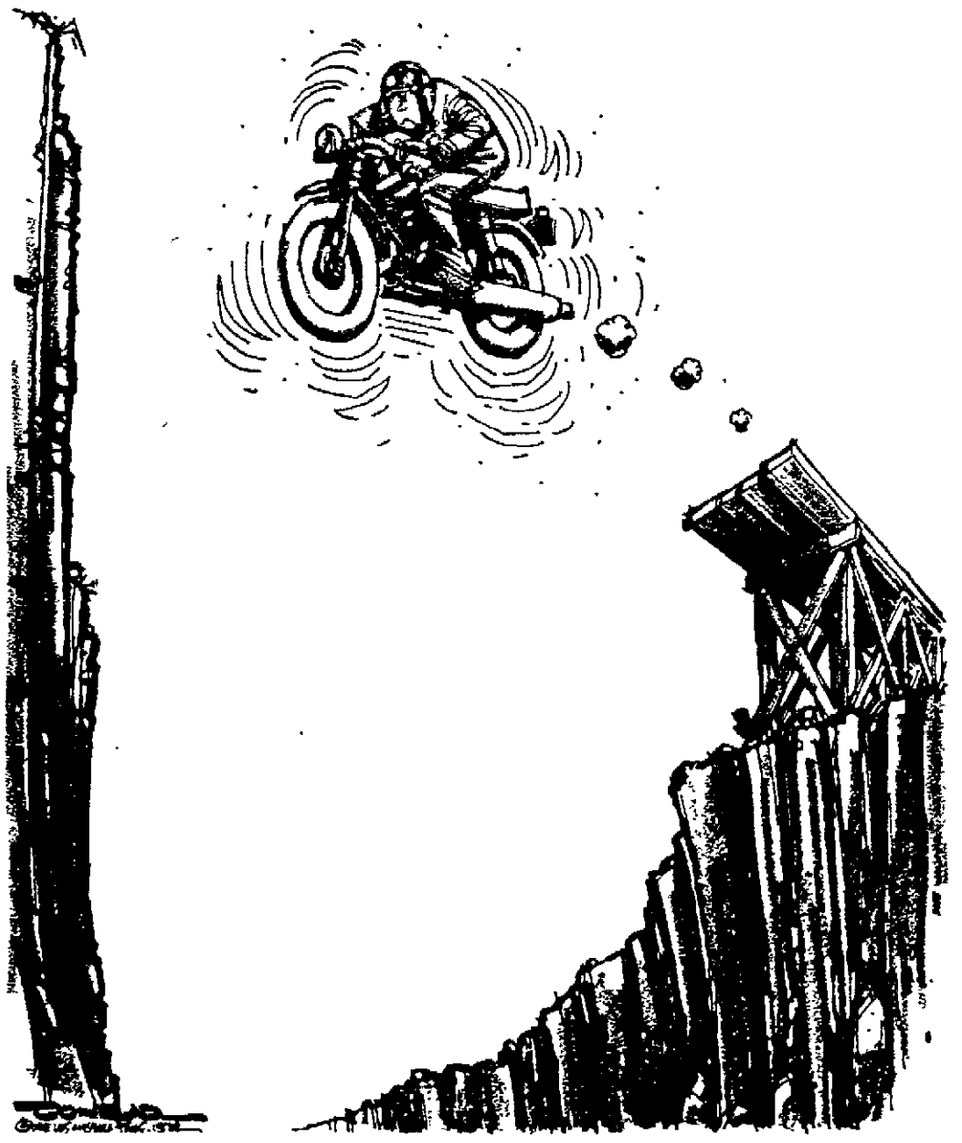

The history of other nations shows that a country with weak political leadership and a large military establishment is vulnerable to a military seizure of power. American is not immune to the harsh lessons of history. The scary days of August were a warning.

End Of A Shipboard Romance

Wage Earner Trying To Make It From One Paycheck To Another

It's Feat-First

WASHINGTON — Evel Knievel, the motorcycle daredevil, is the latest embodiment of a long American tradition of stuntsmanship. As everyone over the age of three surely knows by now, Knievel will attempt to cross Idaho's Snake River Canyon Sept. 8 in a rocket-powered "Skycycle." It is the first time such a feat has been attempted, and the risk involved is self-evident.

Robert Truax, who designed the Skycycle, says Knievel will make a safe crossing "if the engine valves work, if the vehicle doesn't roll over, if there's no major structural failure, if the parachutes deploy properly, if the cycle comes straight down and hits level ground and doesn't fold up around his neck."

Knievel publicly rates his chances of survival as no better than 50-50, and he appears resigned to the possibility that his boldest stunt may also be his last. If disaster strikes, "I'll just get where we're all going quicker than you," he told an interviewer, "and I'll sit there having a beer while I'm waiting for you."

That is precisely the sort of statement that endears daredevils to their legions of fans. It is not enough that a stunt be dangerous; the man or woman attempting it must possess a certain panache.

Knievel has panache to spare and so, apparently, did Sam Patch, one of the early great American stuntmen. Patch's specialty was jumping into bodies of water from high places. The apex of his brief career came on Oct. 12, 1829, when he leaped from the top of Niagara Falls and not only survived but swam to shore. One month later, on Friday, Nov. 13, Patch jumped from Genesee Falls at Rochester, N.Y. His body was not found until the following March.

Numerous stuntmen since Patch have also been drawn to Niagara Falls. One of the best known was Jean Francois Gravelet, a French tightrope walker who billed himself as The Great Blondin. Gravelet won worldwide renown when, on June 30, 1859, he traversed a 1,200-foot rope across the Niagara Falls gorge in 17-1/12 minutes.

Like all true stuntsmen, Gravelet was not content to rest on his laurels. He repeated his feat many times over the years, always adding some embellishment. He crossed the gorge blindfolded and on stilts, did somersaults and handstands, and pushed a wheelbarrow. On one crossing he even carried his business manager piggyback. And he came through all this is one piece.

The same cannot be said of many of those who went over Niagara Falls in a barrel. The first to do so was Annie Edson Taylor, a Michigan schoolteacher who took the plunge in 1901. Upon being extricated from her barrel, she said: "Nobody ought ever do that again." Her advice, alas, was not heeded. Several of the later falls-jumpers were killed. And most of those who survived seemed ever afterward to lead tragic, jinx-ridden lives.

Great stuntmen, however, cannot allow themselves to be intimidated by jinxes or superstition. Shipwreck Kelly, the great flagpole-sitter of the 1920s and 1930s, made a point of staging some of his more daring stunts on Friday the 13th. On one occasion he stayed aloft 13 days, 13 hours, and 13 minutes.

On another, he stood on his head and ate 13 hand-fed doughnuts to promote National Doughnut Week. No one knows what impels a Shipwreck Kelly or an Evel Knievel to do such outlandish things. All one can do is cross all fingers and fervently wish them luck.

Junior Olympics A Success

Lincoln, Neb.

I want to thank the many people who made the National Junior Olympics Championships in Lincoln the great success they turned out to be.

The Chamber of Commerce Sports and Recreation Committee, the Convention Committee and the Housing Committee were of great help in organizing the championships. The coaches and sports committee chairmen set up competitions that have been unexcelled in previous Junior Olympics.

The swimming groups are to be particularly complimented in handling almost double the number of athletes who were originally proposed for these championships.

For those who were able to wait a few minutes to get into the competitions, we were most appreciative and glad they were able to see the high caliber of performances available.

The first-aid people from the American Red-Cross, the trainers from the university, and the communicators from the Civil Air Patrol helped to make the events run smoothly. They gave the athletes and meet directors a sense of security that emergencies would be covered had they arisen.

The athletes enjoyed their party at the Student Union, and we owe them thanks for opening their facilities. The dormitories were comfortable for the athletes. It is always a small percent of people who cause some malicious destruction. This fortunately was at a minimum.

Coaches, athletes and parents enjoyed coming to Lincoln. It is a beautiful city and has excellent hospitality. Many of the national level and international level AAU officials, as well as the athletes and coaches would like to come back to Lincoln for future events.

Thanks also to the many businesses who gave their financial and leadership support.

Afraid Of A Vote?

Lincoln, Neb.

It was inevitable that the citizens would be herded into okaying a parking garage by a poll conducted by a newspaper.

I could probably call 229 citizens who would be opposed. But that is this particular newspaper's particular tactic of obfuscation.

Well, then, if 70% are for the garage, why is there such a fear of a vote by the promoters and powers that be? Even they are not stupid enough to rely on an exotic-self-serving public-opinion (?) poll.

Congress CAN Act

Congress would achieve a legislative grand slam of sorts if it passed a national health insurance plan before adjourning this fall. Legislation to help people meet the stratospheric costs of health care plus the landmark pension reform bill President Ford just signed into law would add up to a social welfare package of magnificent proportions. Each on its own will make life better for millions of Americans.

But time is short for Congress this session. Before quitting in time to campaign for the elections this November, the House and Senate need to investigate and act on the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller as vice president of the United States. Given the times and the absolute necessity for a stand-by president, that matter is of undisputed Number One priority.

It would be unrealistic, too, to think that an acceptable and workable plan could be obtained in a matter of weeks from the tangle of conflicting philosophies and ideas which shroud the health care problem. In dealing with an industry which resists change, and has considerable public support for its position, time and patience are essential, even as health care costs soar far above the capabilities of most Americans to pay.

A national health plan has been talked about for as long and longer than pension reform. And it has taken seven years of hard work in Congress to overcome employer opposition to pension reform so that legislation protecting the rights of workers could be approved. And the plan approved is not all that reform advocates wanted, although it does secure the investments of workers in existing private pension plans and those which may be set up in the future. The case of an employe working throughout a career to provide for his retirement only to find the pension fund or the company collapsing or himself terminated from the job before he is qualified to draw on the fund should be a thing of the past.

So the triumph of pension reform illustrates that given time, tough socio-economic problems can be worked out in the Congress. With the re-assertion of its power and the new senses of cooperation, urgency and hope articulated by the Ford administration, the time may be right next session for the Congress to attack the health care issue realistically and forcefully.

"Instead, the letter shall be rubber-stamped: 'Return To Sender' and sent 2,000 miles or whatever to 'sender' who shall curse and swear a while and then try by long-distance telephone to learn the new address.

"Whereas, your mobile home has been on that same piece of ground all these years, whereas the city chose to shuffle and redeal the house numbers, whereas by memory and habit your postman could have delivered this letter promptly to the right place but was not permitted to, that 'Return To Sender' is a blasted outrage."

Junior Olympics A Success

Lincoln, Neb.

I want to thank the many people who made the National Junior Olympics Championships in Lincoln the great success they turned out to be.

The Chamber of Commerce Sports and Recreation Committee, the Convention Committee and the Housing Committee were of great help in organizing the championships. The coaches and sports committee chairmen set up competitions that have been unexcelled in previous Junior Olympics.

The swimming groups are to be particularly complimented in handling almost double the number of athletes who were originally proposed for these championships.

For those who were able to wait a few minutes to get into the competitions, we were most appreciative and glad they were able to see the high caliber of performances available.

The first-aid people from the American Red-Cross, the trainers from the university, and the communicators from the Civil Air Patrol helped to make the events run smoothly. They gave the athletes and meet directors a sense of security that emergencies would be covered had they arisen.

The athletes enjoyed their party at the Student Union, and we owe them thanks for opening their facilities. The dormitories were comfortable for the athletes. It is always a small percent of people who cause some malicious destruction. This fortunately was at a minimum.

Coaches, athletes and parents enjoyed coming to Lincoln. It is a beautiful city and has excellent hospitality. Many of the national level and international level AAU officials, as well as the athletes and coaches would like to come back to Lincoln for future events.

Thanks also to the many businesses who gave their financial and leadership support.

R. W. HAMMER, M.D.
General Chairman

Afraid Of A Vote?

Lincoln, Neb.

It was inevitable that the citizens would be herded into okaying a parking garage by a poll conducted by a newspaper.

I could probably call 229 citizens who would be opposed. But that is this particular newspaper's particular tactic of obfuscation.

Well, then, if 70% are for the garage, why is there such a fear of a vote by the promoters and powers that be? Even they are not stupid enough to rely on an exotic-self-serving public-opinion (?) poll.

The Rights Of Society

Lincoln, Neb.

The famous Miranda Case proved that the accused has rights which must not be violated.

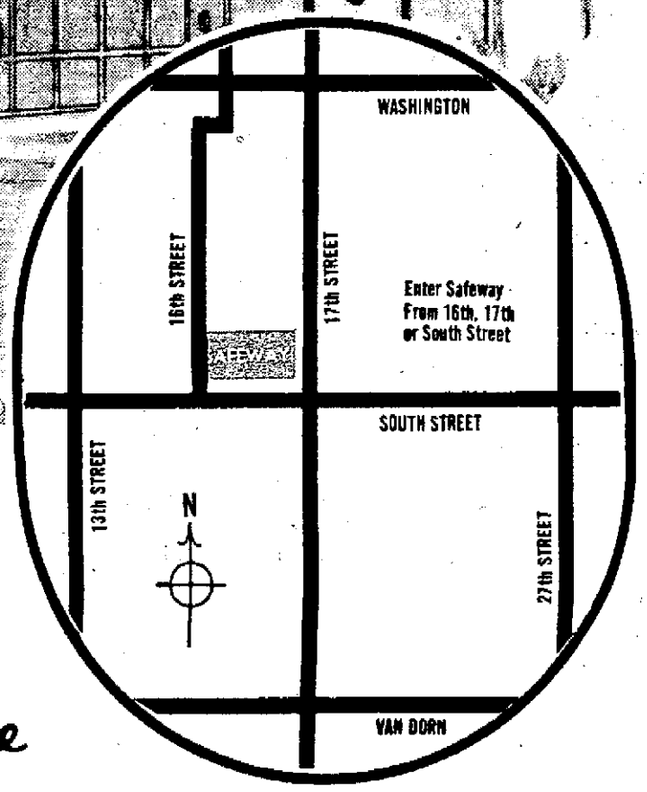

Saxby's pronouncement should make it evident that society also has rights which must be protected.

Chambers To Subpoena Douglas County Sheriff

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said Tuesday the Douglas County sheriff would be subpoenaed to testify before the legislature's Government Committee Sept. 16.

Chambers, who chairs the committee, said he wanted to question Sheriff Ted Janing about Douglas County's special deputies, policies regarding assignments of regular deputies, and other facets of the sheriff's office and operation of the county jail.

Chamber said the subpoenas would be given to the Douglas County clerk Tuesday to be served on Janing.

A subpoena also has been prepared for Janing's chief deputy, Joseph Thornton, Chambers said.

"We had to do it this way (through subpoena)," Chambers said.

He said Douglas County Commissioner P. J. Morgan tried to set up a meeting between Janing and Chambers "but he (Janing) said he would only testify under oath and if he was ordered to," Chambers said.

The Douglas County Board, holding its initial meeting Tuesday as the County Board of Corrections, instructed Deputy County Atty. Daniel Ryberg to seek an opinion to resolve conflicts resulting from a state law that sets up a county division of corrections.

Sheriff Janing told the board that although the new law sets up a corrections division to take charge of the jail, the legislature failed to repeal an old section of state law that gives the sheriff responsibility for jail operations.

County Commissioner George Buglewicz said that the switch to a corrections division won't take place until Jan. 1, so there is plenty of time to resolve the conflict.

County Commissioner P.J. Morgan recommended that a merit commission, established by state law, provide a list of qualifications for a director of the new division by mid-October, so that candidates can be interviewed and a director chosen by Jan. 1.

Carstens Drops Lobby Probe

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Fred Carstens of Beatrice has apparently decided to drop his request for a Legislative Council investigation of Nebraska Press Association (NPA) lobbying activities.

The executive board of the Legislative Council was scheduled to look into NPA lobbying efforts in connection with the state's new probate code legislation on Wednesday.

However, state Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha said he had received a letter from Carstens saying "He apparently has decided to drop the matter, it is not on the agenda."

Carstens was not available for comment.

When he asked for the hearing, Carstens charged that "press pressure" had influenced the outcome of the probate code battle.

Carstens accused unnamed newspapers of printing "slanted" stories supporting the meaasure, which he opposed.

Carstens alleged some publishers "have got certain senators on a string," and questioned whether such senators received favorable press coverage, or that others did not get the same kind of coverage.

"Senator Carstens won't be at the meeting," Mahoney said. "That item won't even be on the agenda."

The manager of the Nebraska Press Association, Philip A. Berkebile, said Tuesday the NPA had written to Carstens when he first asked for the investigation. "We simply told him our procedures were no different than anyone else's," Berkebile said.

The probate code retained sections which required publication of probate notices.

Porras: Panel To Step Up Agency Bias Investigation

By The Associated Press

An investigation into alleged discrimination in hiring in six state agencies will probably be stepped up, the director of the state Mexican-American Commission said Tuesday.

Stan Porras said that "since we announced the investigation last month we have had up to 20 additional calls from people, asking us to look into complaints."

Porras has not identified the agencies. "It would just be premature at this stage," he said.

Porras said that a Vista (Volunteers In Service To America) worker probably will be assigned to his office in October, "and we will have that person concentrating on this full time, talking with agency heads, and looking into complaints."

Porras said he would like to have a report prepared to submit to Gov. J. James Exon in February.

Porras has said there are no more than 150 Mexican-Americans among the state's 25,000 employes.

Reward Offered For Trujillo Killer

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — The parents of Luis Trujillo Jr., who was killed in a $61 robbery, have offered a $1,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of the killer.

"I'm sure this extra money will make him (the killer) shake a little bit more, wherever he is," said Luis Trujillo Sr.

Trujillo lives in Ogallala, Neb., where he is sheriff of Keith County.

"Someplace, somewhere, someone in law enforcement is going to find him," he said Sunday from his roon at Des Moines' downtown Holiday Inn.

The motel was the scene of a robbery Aug. 22 in which Trujillo, 22, a motel employe, and Danny Lee Peters, 21, a motel security guard, were killed.

Police later called the slayings a "brutal execution" of the witnesses. The bandit was given $269, but he lost all but $61 as he fled the lobby.

The $1,000 reward would be added to the $1,000 already offered by the four Des Moines Holiday Inns for information leading to the killer's conviction.

Two other men were wounded in the robbery. Charles Nolte, 28, a motel employe, and John Stewart, 23, who had just moved to Des Moines from Lincoln, Neb., were shot as the robber made his excape.

Both men were released from Des Moines hospitals over the weekend

Nebraska Man Charged In New Mexico Shootings

Bernallio, N.M. (UPI) — A Nebraska man charged in connection with a highway shooting incident Monday told authorities he doesn't remember what he was doing at the time of the shooting nor how he got near the scene.

The drivers of two cars said their vehicles were hit by gunfire while driving on I-25 north of Albuquerque. No one was injured in the shootings, but one driver said a shot narrowly missed his son.

A short time later, Sandoval County sheriff's officers arrested Thomas McCright, 20, of Wayne, and charged him with disorderly conduct. Officers said other charges might be filed pending further investigation of the incident.

McCright, who said he was in the Navy at San Diego and was going to Denver, told officers he left San Diego Sunday morning on his motorcycle and drove to Albuquerque and then to Santa Fe. He said he didn't remember anything after arriving in Santa Fe and doesn't know how he got to Bernallio, where he was arrested.

McCright was freed on $25 bond.

One of the bullets struck the passenger door on a southbound car carrying the Ernest Barela family of Albuquerque. Berela said the car passed someone walking along the highway just before the bullet struck.

"We heard the noise and thought the car hit a rock," he said.

He said if the bullet had struck the auto "another two inches higher, it would have hit my son."

Omahan, 34, Fatally Stabbed

Omaha (AP) — Police said a 34-year-old Omaha man was stabbed to death shortly before midnight Monday night in a dispute with another man over a woman.

He was identified as James Lawrence.

Police said the other person involved in the dispute, Junal Pratt, 19, of Omaha, was hospitalized with cuts about the leg and shoulder.

Officers said when they arrived at the scene in North Omaha they found Lawrence sitting against some trash cans.

Monica Contreras

G.I. Forum State Queen Announced

Monica Contreras, 19, has been crowned Nebraska State Queen of the American G.I. Forum, a national organization to advance and assist Mexican-Americans.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Contreras, 1029 Benton, Miss Contreras is a graduate of Lincoln High School and presently employed by State Farm Insurance as a microfilming and filing clerk.

Whereas Caucasians have judged the queen contest in the past, this year the judges were Mexican-Americans from the community and forum nonmembers.

Miss Contreras, who has three brothers and two sisters, was selected in competition with American G.I. Forum chapter queens from across Nebraska. The crowning was based on beauty (40%), poise and personality (30%), and her speech entitled "Friendship" (30%).

She will promote the forum's youth organization for 14- to 18-year-olds, the American G.I. Forum Juniors. Membership in the forum is not restricted to persons of Mexican-American extraction.

G.I. Forum Grant Awarded

The Lincoln chapter of the American G.I. Forum has named David J. Sanchez, 18, the recipient of a one-semester, full-tuition scholarship to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Sanchez, son of Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon G. Sanchez, 2331 N. 65th, is a freshman with an undeclared major and interest in pre-law studies.

The Lincoln chapter was established in 1949 to advance and assist Mexican-Americans, an affiliate of the national organization whose motto is "Education Is Our Freedom and Freedom Should Be Everybody's Business."

Stan Porras, director of the Nebraska Mexican-American Commission, said the forum was established originally as a result of discrimination against a Mexican-American soldier. Although a percentage of forum members must be service veterans, non-veterans and non-Mexican-Americans may belong.

Eduardo C. Guerra of Lincoln, forum scholarship committee member, said the forum is seeking to sponsor a statewide scholarship foundation to help Mexican-Americans that otherwise wouldn't attend school, to encourage them to stay in college and to lower the drop-out rate among Mexican-American students.

The ultimate goal, Guerra said, is to have Mexican-American students complete their education and "come back and serve their Chicano communities."

Porras said the forum has received "a tremendous amount of response" to the foundation proposal from private industry and business. Dobson Construction Co. has contributed $100 to the fund, and Porras said other donations of $25 to $50 have come in.

The foundation will seek primarily to pay tuition costs for first-year college students, on a continuing basis.

The Lincoln chapter of the American G. I. Forum, the only independent veterans' family organization, is one of 37 in the U.S. and abroad.

State Lifts Ban On Open Fires

A statewide ban on open burning, in effect since July 2, was lifted Tuesday by the state fire marshal's office.

The ban was ordered because of drought conditions.

Recent rains and cooler temperatures made the ban unnecessary, officials said.

$1,000 Reward Offered

Broken Bow (UPI) — The Custer County Breeders and Feeders Association Tuesday announced the mailing of letters to area ranchers and farmers advising them of a $1,000 reward for arrest and conviction of anyone killing and mutilating cattle.

The letters were mailed out following reports from across northeast and north central Nebraska of cattle killed and their carcasses mutilated in bizarre fashion.

The State Patrol reported a new investigation Tuesday on a farm five miles east of Plainview. A spokesman said a male calf was killed, its blood drained, and sexual organs removed.

There were no tracks discernible at the scene, he said.

Chambers To Subpoena Douglas County Sheriff

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said Tuesday the Douglas County sheriff would be subpoenaed to testify before the legislature's Government Committee Sept. 16.

Chambers, who chairs the committee, said he wanted to question Sheriff Ted Janing about Douglas County's special deputies, policies regarding assignments of regular deputies, and other facets of the sheriff's office and operation of the county jail.

Chamber said the subpoenas would be given to the Douglas County clerk Tuesday to be served on Janing.

A subpoena also has been prepared for Janing's chief deputy, Joseph Thornton, Chambers said.

Broken Bow (UPI) — The Custer County Breeders and Feeders Association Tuesday announced the mailing of letters to area ranchers and farmers advising them of a $1,000 reward for arrest and conviction of anyone killing and mutilating cattle.

The letters were mailed out following reports from across northeast and north central Nebraska of cattle killed and their carcasses mutilated in bizarre fashion.

The State Patrol reported a new investigation Tuesday on a farm five miles east of Plainview. A spokesman said a male calf was killed, its blood drained, and sexual organs removed.

There were no tracks discernible at the scene, he said.

State Lifts Ban On Open Fires

A statewide ban on open burning, in effect since July 2, was lifted Tuesday by the state fire marshal's office.

The ban was ordered because of drought conditions.

Recent rains and cooler temperatures made the ban unnecessary, officials said.

Carstens Drops Lobby Probe

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Fred Carstens of Beatrice has apparently decided to drop his request for a Legislative Council investigation of Nebraska Press Association (NPA) lobbying activities.

The executive board of the Legislative Council was scheduled to look into NPA lobbying efforts in connection with the state's new probate code legislation on Wednesday.

However, state Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha said he had received a letter from Carstens saying "He apparently has decided to drop the matter, it is not on the agenda."

Carstens was not available for comment.

When he asked for the hearing, Carstens charged that "press pressure" had influenced the outcome of the probate code battle.

Carstens accused unnamed newspapers of printing "slanted" stories supporting the meaasure, which he opposed.

Carstens alleged some publishers "have got certain senators on a string," and questioned whether such senators received favorable press coverage, or that others did not get the same kind of coverage.

"Senator-Carstens won't be at the meeting," Mahoney said. "That item won't even be on the agenda."

The manager of the Nebraska Press Association, Philip A. Berkebile, said Tuesday the NPA had written to Carstens when he first asked for the investigation. "We simply told him our procedures were no different than anyone else's," Berkebile said.

The probate code retained sections which required publication of probate notices.

Porras: Panel To Step Up Agency Bias Investigation

By The Associated Press

An investigation into alleged discrimination in hiring in six state agencies will probably be stepped up, the director of the state Mexican-American Commission said Tuesday.

Stan Porras said that "since we announced the investigation last month we have had up to 20 additional calls from people, asking us to look into complaints."

Porras has not identified the agencies. "It would just be premature at this stage," he said.

Porras said that a Vista (Volunteers In Service To America) worker probably will be assigned to his office in October, "and we will have that person concentrating on this full time, talking with agency heads, and looking into complaints."

Porras said he would like to have a report prepared to submit to Gov. J. James Exon in February.

Porras has said there are no more than 150 Mexican-Americans among the state's 25,000 employes.

Reward Offered For Trujillo Killer

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — The parents of Luis Trujillo Jr., who was killed in a $61 robbery, have offered a $1,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of the killer.

"I'm sure this extra money will make him (the killer) shake a little bit more, wherever he is," said Luis Trujillo Sr.

Trujillo lives in Ogallala, Neb., where he is sheriff of Keith County.

"Someplace, somewhere, someone in law enforcement is going to find him," he said Sunday from his roon at Des Moines' downtown Holiday Inn.

The motel was the scene of a robbery Aug. 22 in which Trujillo, 22, a motel employe, and Danny Lee Peters, 21, a motel security guard, were killed.

Police later called the slayings a "brutal execution" of the witnesses. The bandit was given $269, but he lost all but $61 as he fled the lobby.

The $1,000 reward would be added to the $1,000 already offered by the four Des Moines Holiday Inns for information leading to the killer's conviction.

Two other men were wounded in the robbery. Charles Nolte, 28, a motel employe, and John Stewart, 23, who had just moved to Des Moines from Lincoln, Neb., were shot as the robber made his excape.

Both men were released from Des Moines hospitals over the weekend

Nebraska Man Charged In New Mexico Shootings

Bernallio, N.M. (UPI) — A Nebraska man charged in connection with a highway shooting incident Monday told authorities he doesn't remember what he was doing at the time of the shooting nor how he got near the scene.

The drivers of two cars said their vehicles were hit by gunfire while driving on I-25 north of Albuquerque. No one was injured in the shootings, but one driver said a shot narrowly missed his son.

A short time later, Sandoval County sheriff's officers arrested Thomas McCright, 20, of Wayne, and charged him with disorderly conduct. Officers said other charges might be filed pending further investigation of the incident.

McCright, who said he was in the Navy at San Diego and was going to Denver, told officers he left San Diego Sunday morning on his motorcycle and drove to Albuquerque and then to Santa Fe. He said he didn't remember anything after arriving in Santa Fe and doesn't know how he got to Bernallio, where he was arrested.

McCright was freed on $25 bond.

One of the bullets struck the passenger door on a southbound car carrying the Ernest Barela family of Albuquerque. Berela said the car passed someone walking along the highway just before the bullet struck.

"We heard the noise and thought the car hit a rock," he said.

He said if the bullet had struck the auto "another two inches higher, it would have hit my son."

Omahan, 34, Fatally Stabbed

Omaha (AP) — Police said a 34-year-old Omaha man was stabbed to death shortly before midnight Monday night in a dispute with another man over a woman.

He was identified as James Lawrence.

Police said the other person involved in the dispute, Junal Pratt, 19, of Omaha, was hospitalized with cuts about the leg and shoulder.

Officers said when they arrived at the scene in North Omaha they found Lawrence sitting against some trash cans.

Car Safety Devices Draw Fire From Motorists

EDITOR'S NOTE: Usually the consumer is delighted to have someone in high places protecting his or her interests. But what happens when the consumer doesn't want to be protected? John Higgins reports from the Washington bureau of McGraw-Hill World News.)

By By JOHN HIGGINS

Washington — At what point does the federal government's power to protect life and limb begin and individual self-protection end?

That's the critical issue Congress must soon face when it considers what to do about federal laws requiring the installation of new-fangled safety devices in cars.

Until recently consumers seemed to go along with any new laws the government made regarding auto passenger protection. But no more. Motorists are now up in arms about the fussing and the bother of buckling seat belt systems which prevent cars from starting unless they are in use. And they are also disturbed about the potential high cost of paying for the required installation of airbags.

The issue recently came to a head when the House of Representatives voted overwhelmingly to repeal present seat belt and airbag regulations. While the Senate last year voted to keep tough regulations on the books, Sen. Thomas Eagleton (D-Mo.) recently sponsored legislation which would revoke the seat belt interlock regulation. He was joined by 14 other senators.

Says Eagleton: "I personally believe every driver should use seat belts and I believe they should be encouraged to do so. But I do not believe that the federal government has a right to order an individual in a matter that concerns only himself to do something that it thinks is in his best interest."

Typical of the mail he received about his proposal, said Eagleton, was a letter from Bakersfield, Calif., which said: "I am sick to death of 'Big Brother' watching after me, and I resent being disenfranchised of my right to decide for myself whether or not I wish to wear seat belts."

Recently the federal government's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) said it would go along with demands to dump the buzzer-interlock laws.

Said NHTSA Administrator Dr. James G. Gregory: "Despite the immediate effectiveness of the interlock system we understand the dissatisfaction the system had caused. We also are aware that an increasing number of motorists are defeating the system. As a result we are willing to withdraw the interlock requirement."

But in the same breath NHTSA's Gregory said he was not willing to withdraw present federal reulgations which require automakers to install airbags starting with the 1977 model year. The costs of the airbags are estimated at more than $200 per car.

The ball is now in Congress' court, where observers believe the interlock requirement will be shelved. A decision on the airbag requirement may well be postponed pending further study of consumer attitudes. But clearly Gregory's observation that the real question on whether or not "we as a nation are willing to pay the added cost of saving thousands of lives" will be answered now on Main Street and not within the federal bureaucracy.

BRIDGE

Practice Bidding These Hands

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠ 73 ♥ Q962 ♦ KJ8 ♣ AJ75
2. ♠ QJ84 ♥ A73 ♦ K92 ♣ K43
3. ♠ 6 ♥ A4 ♦ AKQ874 ♣ K952
4. ♠ 85 ♥ AKJ83 ♦ Q96 ♣ AQ7
5. ♠ J9863 ♥ A9 ♦ AJ5 ♣ Q84

1. Double. Whenever the bidding stops at a low level, the last player to speak—who is in what is called the balancing position—may properly shade his bids on the assumption that the opponents hold limited strength.

He may therefore reasonably assign values to partner which it would otherwise be dangerous to do. In this instance there is a good chance of being able to take more tricks than the opponents, and a protective double is consequently in order. In general, bids made in the balancing position, including a double, tend to be weaker than when they are made in the non-balancing position.

2. One notrump. This is an extension of the same principle. Ordinarily, one notrump promises 16 to 18 points, but when the bid is made in the protective position, it may be shaded by as many as 5 points. The double is not employed with this particular hand because you are more interested in notrump play than suit play.

3. Three diamonds. The best chance for game lies in notrump, and the jump to three diamonds strongly invites partner to bid three notrump with a spade stopper and other suitable values. There are of course ample values for a double, but three diamonds paints a far better picture of the hand.

4. Double. The balancing player sometimes has values with which he would double even if he were not in the protective position. When this occurs he doubles, as usual, planning to take further action later on to show he was not merely competing for a part score. With a weaker hand—say, without the ace of clubs—South would simply bid two hearts.

5. Pass. There is no obligation to bid in the protective seat if you think you can get a better result by passing. Thus, in the present case, where his offensive values are greatly reduced by West's spade bid, South should quickly throw in the sponge.

Against any other suit bid by West, the high-card values would justify some form of protective action, but here West's spade bid clearly puts the hand into the defensive category and points to a pass as the most promising way of showing a profit.

4-H Dress Review

Girls Judged Individually

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The State 4-H Dress Revue has added a couple of new twists.

Teen-aged models still do the basic step-pivot, step-pivot of years gone by, but now there's more.

For the first time, a young man made an appearance on the traditionally female stage.

Twelve-year-old Donald Schmall of Scottsbluff modeled Tuesday before an estimated crowd of 1,000 at the Nebraska Center to introduce a new sewing project, Bachelor Bob. Starting next year, the project will be open to young men who want to learn to wield a needle and thread.

The second new feature introduced in this year's state dress revue is "interview" judging.

For the first time on the state level, judges visited with girls individually, asked them what they learned by sewing their particular outfits and even gave the models an opportunity to ask questions.

"It's the ideal judging situation," said Jane Munson, area extension agent from Columbus and half of a two-person team judging the coats and suits division.

"We were judging each girl as an individual," Mrs. Munson explained. "We took time to consider her capabilities and talents and what she wanted to learn from the project instead of comparing one girl against another."

In past years, models were judged in groups of 25 or more, thus making it difficult to give attention to individuals.

This year, however, Mrs. Munson and another judge spent four and a half hours interviewing 32 contestants. That's an average of from eight to ten minutes apiece.

And Mrs. Munson said she thinks individualizing the judging helped relax the nervous entries and gave models a chance to express how they felt about their outfits and explain any problems they encountered.

Mrs. Verda Umland of Gretna, a judge in the Magic World of Clothes division, one of the beginning sewing projects, said interview judging is "more interesting" and "more fair to the contestants."

"You can get to know the girls and maybe even get an idea of what kind of background they come from," she said. "You know, it makes a lot of difference if they come from poverty homes or well-to-do families.

"Some kids just can't afford nice materials and equipment," she said.

On the whole, both judges said they were impressed with the variety of patterns and fabrics as well as the overall appearance of the models.

Unveiling some of her own secrets, Mrs. Munson said she concentrates on three basic areas when she's judging a style revue, especially in the advanced divisions.

Foremost, she said, she looks at tayloring techniques.

"You have to consider construction when you're judging a model," she said. "Tayloring techniques and how well it's sewn do make a difference in how a garment looks."

Secondly, she considers the fit of the garment, taking into account any alterations the young seamstress made to assure a better fit.

"I think if a girl took the time and made alterations, she's probably taking the project more seriously and is really wanting to learn," she said.

And finally, she takes into account the girl herself — her attitude toward her outfit, her poise, whether she's neat and clean and if the style and fabric relates to her personality, body build and coloring.

Sometimes, she said, she even considers the cost of the outfit and whether the 4-H'er made a wise decision in choosing a particular fabric or pattern.

"The majority do save money," she said. "Usually it's anywhere from a third to a half."

Dry Outdoor Carpet Before Vacuuming

If you use an electric vacuum cleaner on outdoor carpeting that has become soaked by rain or laundering, you could be flirting with death, according to the National Safety Counsel.

Instead, use a squeegee to remove most of the water and lift the carpet so that the underside can dry. This is particularly important if the floor beneath it is wood and apt to rot.

BRIDGE

Practice Bidding These Hands

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠ 73 ♥ Q962 ♦ KJ8 ♣ AJ75
2. ♠ QJ84 ♥ A73 ♦ K92 ♣ K43
3. ♠ 6 ♥ A4 ♦ AKQ874 ♣ K952
4. ♠ 85 ♥ AKJ83 ♦ Q96 ♣ AQ7
5. ♠ J9863 ♥ A9 ♦ AJ5 ♣ Q84

1. Double. Whenever the bidding stops at a low level, the last player to speak—who is in what is called the balancing position—may properly shade his bids on the assumption that the opponents hold limited strength.

He may therefore reasonably assign values to partner which it would otherwise be dangerous to do. In this instance there is a good chance of being able to take more tricks than the opponents, and a protective double is consequently in order. In general, bids made in the balancing position, including a double, tend to be weaker than when they are made in the non-balancing position.

2. One notrump. This is an extension of the same principle. Ordinarily, one notrump promises 16 to 18 points, but when the bid is made in the protective position, it may be shaded by as many as 5 points. The double is not employed with this particular hand because you are more interested in notrump play than suit play.

3. Three diamonds. The best chance for game lies in notrump, and the jump to three diamonds strongly invites partner to bid three notrump with a spade stopper and other suitable values. There are of course ample values for a double, but three diamonds paints a far better picture of the hand.

4. Double. The balancing player sometimes has values with which he would double even if he were not in the protective position. When this occurs he doubles, as usual, planning to take further action later on to show he was not merely competing for a part score. With a weaker hand—say, without the ace of clubs—South would simply bid two hearts.

5. Pass. There is no obligation to bid in the protective seat if you think you can get a better result by passing. Thus, in the present case, where his offensive values are greatly reduced by West's spade bid, South should quickly throw in the sponge.

Against any other suit bid by West, the high-card values would justify some form of protective action, but here West's spade bid clearly puts the hand into the defensive category and points to a pass as the most promising way of showing a profit.

4-H Dress Review

Girls Judged Individually

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The State 4-H Dress Revue has added a couple of new twists.

Teen-aged models still do the basic step-pivot, step-pivot of years gone by, but now there's more.

For the first time, a young man made an appearance on the traditionally female stage.

Twelve-year-old Donald Schmall of Scottsbluff modeled Tuesday before an estimated crowd of 1,000 at the Nebraska Center to introduce a new sewing project, Bachelor Bob. Starting next year, the project will be open to young men who want to learn to wield a needle and thread.

The second new feature introduced in this year's state dress revue is "interview" judging.

For the first time on the state level, judges visited with girls individually, asked them what they learned by sewing their particular outfits and even gave the models an opportunity to ask questions.

"It's the ideal judging situation," said Jane Munson, area extension agent from Columbus and half of a two-person team judging the coats and suits division.

"We were judging each girl as an individual," Mrs. Munson explained. "We took time to consider her capabilities and talents and what she wanted to learn from the project instead of comparing one girl against another."

In past years, models were judged in groups of 25 or more, thus making it difficult to give attention to individuals.

This year, however, Mrs. Munson and another judge spent four and a half hours interviewing 32 contestants. That's an average of from eight to ten minutes apiece.

And Mrs. Munson said she thinks individualizing the judging helped relax the nervous entries and gave models a chance to express how they felt about their outfits and explain any problems they encountered.

Mrs. Verda Umland of Gretna, a judge in the Magic World of Clothes division, one of the beginning sewing projects, said interview judging is "more interesting" and "more fair to the contestants."

"You can get to know the girls and maybe even get an idea of what kind of background they come from," she said. "You know, it makes a lot of difference if they come from poverty homes or well-to-do families.

"Some kids just can't afford nice materials and equipment," she said.

On the whole, both judges said they were impressed with the variety of patterns and fabrics as well as the overall appearance of the models.

Unveiling some of her own secrets, Mrs. Munson said she concentrates on three basic areas when she's judging a style revue, especially in the advanced divisions.

Foremost, she said, she looks at tayloring techniques.

"You have to consider construction when you're judging a model," she said. "Tayloring techniques and how well it's sewn do make a difference in how a garment looks."

Secondly, she considers the fit of the garment, taking into account any alterations the young seamstress made to assure a better fit.

"I think if a girl took the time and made alterations, she's probably taking the project more seriously and is really wanting to learn," she said.

And finally, she takes into account the girl herself — her attitude toward her outfit, her poise, whether she's neat and clean and if the style and fabric relates to her personality, body build and coloring.

Sometimes, she said, she even considers the cost of the outfit and whether the 4-H'er made a wise decision in choosing a particular fabric or pattern.

"The majority do save money," she said. "Usually it's anywhere from a third to a half."

Debbie Nelson Is Sold On Angus

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Eighteen-year-old Debbie Nelson of Ansley is sold on Angus Cattle . . . and she should be in view of the fact that she is the 1974 Nebraska Angus Queen.

Being a nine-year veteran of 4-H, Miss Nelson has exhibited cattle in shows for the past eight years and has numerous ribbons and awards to show for her efforts. They include being named Outstanding Girl Exhibitor in the 1971 Nebraska Angus Futurity Show, exhibitor of grand champion Angus steers at the Denver Stock Show and the Nebraska Angus Futurity Show and class winner of the National Heifer Show in Dallas, Tex., this year, as well as several honors at 4-H, FFA, county fair and state fair contests.

According to Miss Nelson, who was raised on a Nebraska ranch, cattle showing is a family activity.

"We go to about 16 shows a year in Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas, Kentucky, Texas, Arizona and California," she said.

"We usually go to the place of the show two days before it begins so that the cattle are rested and look their best," she explained. "If you don't, they will be very tired and gaunt from having no water and feed.

"On the day of the show, we get up real early and exercise the cattle until they are wore down and not stiff from laying in the barn all night.

"Then we rinse them and feed them," she added. "Thirty minutes before you show, you start getting the animals ready.

Debbie Nelson Shows Angus at fair.

"We use a blower to blow the dirt and straw out of their hair and black saddle soap to bone up their legs (to make them look muscular and larger boned) shoulder and quarter and slick the rest down with a soft brush.

"If the calf is black, we spray the feet with black paint to make them look shiny, rat the tail into a ball, put the show halter on and spray them with oil to make them shine," she continued.

To those unfamiliar with the activity, this may sound like a lot of work, but remember that preparations for the shows are actually a year-long undertaking.

Miss Nelson explained that most people who plan to participate in cattle shows purchase their calves in the fall prior to the show year.

When the calves are about seven months old, the first step is to halter break them, the Angus Queen indicated.

"We usually catch them with the halter and tie them in the barn for a day or two," she said, "until they learn that you won't hurt them and what you want them to do.

"The first day that you tie them, you have to check the calves every half hour so that they don't get caught in the rope and strangle themselves."

"Next you teach them how to set up clearly on all four feet, so that they look straight and natural," Miss Nelson pointed out.

And during and after the initial training, exhibitors work at building up the animals, brushing their hair to develop good coats and waiting for the show dates, she said.

Has exhibiting in so many shows ever interfered with school?

"Well, some schools don't like you to take off to go to a show," she said, "but in Ansley, I just did all my school work before I left and got permission from the principal.

Her responsibility as Angus Queen is "to go anywhere you want to promote the Angus breed," a task she assumes with ease.

"My parents raise Angus cattle," she said, indicating one reason for her preference of this particular breed. "We like them because they have good size and muscular build.

"Also, we feel that Angus have higher cutability (more lean, red meat on the carcass) and this is what the consumers and packers want.

"We find that Angus calve easily and that they're very good mothers," she continued. "And we believe that, if the mother is Angus, cross-breeds turn out better."

Food Prices Climb 14%

Food prices continued their relentless climb during August, rising to a level 14% higher than a year earlier, an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows.

The AP checked the prices of 15 food and nonfood items in 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked at the beginning of each succeeding month.

The latest check, at the start of the Labor Day weekend, showed that during August the marketbasket went up in every city surveyed except Dallas, Tex., where it dropped by a penny. The average increase was 4½%. During July, the AP marketbasket rose in all 13 cities.

Many of the increases reflected higher prices paid to farmers and there were indications of further boosts because of the recent drought in the Midwest that severely damaged the corn crop that goes to feed the nation's dairy cows, poultry and beef cattle.

The Agriculture Department reported Friday that the price index for raw farm products rose 3% from July 15 to Aug. 15. The increase followed a 6% boost during the previous month.

The increases come after a period during which farmers complained they were losing money on their products and the government launched a series of investigations to determine whether middlemen — processors and retailers — were taking too big a share of the consumer's dollar.

Farmers still are getting less then they did a year ago when prices for things like cattle and hogs were at record levels. But retailers claim that rising costs of transportation and other items have prevented them from passing the savings on to shoppers.

Brian Hyde Born In Augusta, Ga.

Captain and Mrs. Dean E. Hyde of Augusta, Georgia, (formerly of Lincoln) announce the birth of their son, Brian Dean Hyde on August 7, 1974. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nord and Mr. and Mrs. Mason Hyde of North Platte, Nebraska.

Small children, who are convinced that what they think or feel makes things happen, often believe they caused the problem.

Family Crisis Affects Children

New York — When a family is stricken by crisis, no one's emotional well-being is safe. But the little ones — the 4-year-olds, the 6-year-olds — are especially vulnerable.

If there has been a suicide in the family, or a bitter divorce, a serious accident, a debilitating illness or an imprisonment, the small children, who are convinced that what they think or feel makes things happen, often believe they caused the problem. Frequently, they are afraid it will happen again, and they feel helpless, unloved, abandoned, confused.

All of that is sometimes compounded when the adults in the family — baffled and hurt, too — can't find the words to help their children. Instead they turn the trouble into something that is literally unspeakable: Hush, they say, for this is too terrible to talk about. Or, perhaps worse, they tell the child that what he knows to be true is in fact not true, that he dreamed it or made it up.

And that, according to Ann Kliman, a psychologist who specializes in families under stress, is a "destructive thing to do."

"When something awful happens," she said the other day, "what the adult doesn't realize is that the child perceives changes in the people around him. No matter how hard they pretend."

Mrs. Kliman, along with her husband, Dr. Gilbert Kliman, a child psychiatrist, is a director of the center for preventive psychiatry in White Plains, N.Y., dealing primarily with children who range in age from 2 to 6 years old.

Preventive child psychiatry is the art of intervening in a healthy youngster's life as he is going through a potentially damaging situation. That is called primary prevention, and the fact that the center devotes so much of its considerable energies in this area sets it apart from other mental health facilities.

Secondary prevention involves treating a child who is showing early symptoms — extreme fearfulness, aggressiveness, passivity or recession to earlier behavior — during the formative years, before the symptoms harden into a more severe pattern. The center does this, too, but secondary prevention is, of course, a function that is widely performed by other child clinics as well.

Many children manage to get through a stressful period unscathed. But the center's philosophy is that when some potentially damaging situation has developed, the child and the family ought to be talked to.

Here are some typical crisis situations, along with descriptions of what the center's approach to them might be:

—Mother commits suicide. The small child may be told that "mommy let a bad accident happen to her" and that she will not be coming back but that the father is still there and he surely will not leave. The child will be encouraged to express, through the use of words, toys and other play, his feelings of loss, fear and anger (adults often react to suicide with an enraged, "How could she do this to me?" Children feel the same way).

—Divorce. The simple act of bringing the problem out in the open might help the child understand that he did not cause the break-up. And it should be emphasized that "Mommy and Daddy cannot get along because Mommy and Daddy have a problem — and it is not something that Johnny did or even could do that makes Daddy (or, these days, Mommy) want to leave home."

—Sexual molestation. The parents of, say, a 5-year-old girl who has been undressed and fondled by a 16-year-old boy will be told that if they treat this as a "frightening but not-too-significant incident," the chances of its causing lasting damage will be lessened. Moreover, they will be told that the real hazard is that the child will grow into an inhibited adult (not that the child will be, as Dr. Kliman put it, "turned on to sex," which is the usual fear of parents. It is necessary to work through the feelings of fright, perhaps even excitement, felt by the child and to explain to her that it is safe to "expect adults to be sexy only with each other, not with children."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive 59-year-old widow. Although I'm incomfortable circumstances and have never had to work, I am far from rich.

I am seeing a very nice man who has started to talk marriage. He is 64 and divorced. All he says about his circumstances is that he is "retired and quite well off," and judging from the way he lives and spends money he probably is, but how can I be sure?

Don't get me wrong, Abby, I am no gold-digger, but I don't want to marry anybody unless I am sure that I'm bettering myself.

How do I get the facts without giving him the impression that I am interested in his money?

LAKE FOREST LADY

DEAR LADY: What's wrong with asking the gentlemen to lay all his cards on the table, and offering to do the same?

If you're still not satisfied, ask your lawyer or financial advisor to check him out. P.M. And if he is trying to "better" himself, doesn't he deserve the same right?

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90121.

Small children, who are convinced that what they think or feel makes things happen, often believe they caused the problem.

Family Crisis Affects Children

New York — When a family is stricken by crisis, no one's emotional well-being is safe. But the little ones — the 4-year-olds, the 6-year-olds — are especially vulnerable.

If there has been a suicide in the family, or a bitter divorce, a serious accident, a debilitating illness or an imprisonment, the small children, who are convinced that what they think or feel makes things happen, often believe they caused the problem. Frequently, they are afraid it will happen again, and they feel helpless, unloved, abandoned, confused.

All of that is sometimes compounded when the adults in the family — baffled and hurt, too — can't find the words to help their children. Instead they turn the trouble into something that is literally unspeakable: Hush, they say, for this is too terrible to talk about. Or, perhaps worse, they tell the child that what he knows to be true is in fact not true, that he dreamed it or made it up.

And that, according to Ann Kliman, a psychologist who specializes in families under stress, is a "destructive thing to do."

"When something awful happens," she said the other day, "what the adult doesn't realize is that the child perceives changes in the people around him. No matter how hard they pretend."

Mrs. Kliman, along with her husband, Dr. Gilbert Kliman, a child psychiatrist, is a director of the center for preventive psychiatry in White Plains, N.Y., dealing primarily with children who range in age from 2 to 6 years old.

Preventive child psychiatry is the art of intervening in a healthy youngster's life as he is going through a potentially damaging situation. That is called primary prevention, and the fact that the center devotes so much of its considerable energies in this area sets it apart from other mental health facilities.

Secondary prevention involves treating a child who is showing early symptoms — extreme fearfulness, aggressiveness, passivity or recession to earlier behavior — during the formative years, before the symptoms harden into a more severe pattern. The center does this, too, but secondary prevention is, of course, a function that is widely performed by other child clinics as well.

Many children manage to get through a stressful period unscathed. But the center's philosophy is that when some potentially damaging situation has developed, the child and the family ought to be talked to.

Here are some typical crisis situations, along with descriptions of what the center's approach to them might be:

—Mother commits suicide. The small child may be told that "mommy let a bad accident happen to her" and that she will not be coming back but that the father is still there and he surely will not leave. The child will be encouraged to express, through the use of words, toys and other play, his feelings of loss, fear and anger (adults often react to suicide with an enraged, "How could she do this to me?" Children feel the same way).

—Divorce. The simple act of bringing the problem out in the open might help the child understand that he did not cause the break-up. And it should be emphasized that "Mommy and Daddy cannot get along because Mommy and Daddy have a problem — and it is not something that Johnny did or even could do that makes Daddy (or, these days, Mommy) want to leave home."

—Sexual molestation. The parents of, say, a 5-year-old girl who has been undressed and fondled by a 16-year-old boy will be told that if they treat this as a "frightening but not-too-significant incident," the chances of its causing lasting damage will be lessened. Moreover, they will be told that the real hazard is that the child will grow into an inhibited adult (not that the child will be, as Dr. Kliman put it, "turned on to sex," which is the usual fear of parents. It is necessary to work through the feelings of fright, perhaps even excitement, felt by the child and to explain to her that it is safe to "expect adults to be sexy only with each other, not with children."

Pentagon Wastes $57 Million On Laser-Guided Missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon squandered $57 million when each of the three services developed laser-guided missiles, the General Accounting Office reported Tuesday.

The GAO, the watchdog of Congress, said the Pentagon should tighten its procedures to insure each service does not duplicate the efforts of others in developing weapons systems.

The GAO reached its conclusion in a report released by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.

"The American people simply shouldn't be bankrolling interservice rivalry," Aspin said.

The GAO said an ad hoc group set up by the Pentagon to identify and eliminate wasteful spending estimated that separate Army, Navy and Air Force development of laser-guided missiles wasted up to $57 million.

It said the three services also spent $51 million on separate scatterable land-mine programs with "many similarities," indicating wasteful duplication. The new land-mines could be dropped and sunk into the ground from planes or helicopters.

A Pentagon duplication eliminating committee terminated the Navy land mine program, the GAO said. The agency said the Navy had spent $6.5 million and was expected to expend $16 million more before the project was terminated.

In a third case, Aspin said, the Army and Navy spent $660,000 on separate laser-protective eye goggles and "the Air Force even literally copied word-for-word project plans prepared by the Army."

The GAO said the Pentagon is trying to eliminate the wasteful spending through joint development of a laser-guided missile and scatterable land mines for all services.

Ku Klux Klan To Run Reusch For President

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan ended its annual convention Monday with an announcement that in 1976, for the first time in its history, the group would run a presidential candidate.

James R. Venable, the imperial wizard of the National Knights, said the group had selected Dale Reusch, 35, of Lodi, Ohio, as its presidential nominee.

Venable said Reusch had chosen Scott Nelson, also 35, of Houston, Tex., as his vice presidential candidate. Nelson is imperial wizard of the Texas Fiery Knights.

Reusch, Ohio grand dragon, was sponsored by the Klan last year in an unsuccessful write-in campaign in Ohio's Democratic gubernatorial primary.

About 250 persons gathered over the Labor Day weekend at the base of Stone Mountain, Ga., site of the group's annual meeting for the past 45 years.

"We feel that both the Republican and Democratic parties are the same," Venable said. "They haven't done anything to help the people of this country."

The imperial wizard said this was the first time the Klan "has ever sponsored a candidate for national office."

Venable said the Klan would campaign against foreign aid, welfare, the United Nations and taxes.

Venable said the Klan hopes to get its candidates on the ballot in every state. "We'll get them on the ballot by petition," Venable said. "We wanted to get ready in time to have all our contacts made for our petitions."

DOCUMENTARY FILMS
WOODCUTTERS OF THE DEEP SOUTH
Directed by Lionel Rogosin
Deep in the lush backwoods of Mississippi and Alabama, history is being made. Poor black and white working people are trying to overcome the forces of racism among themselves to organize into a cooperative association to dispel the bonds of their economic captors—the paper and the pulpwood companies.
Through the eyes and minds of the workers and organizers who helped the woodcutters get started in this venture into selfhelp, Rogosin's film reveals the basic needs and struggles encountered in the development of all social organizations of this nature.

Nebraska State Fair —1974 Version

Pentagon Wastes $57 Million On Laser-Guided Missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon squandered $57 million when each of the three services developed laser-guided missiles, the General Accounting Office reported Tuesday.

The GAO, the watchdog of Congress, said the Pentagon should tighten its procedures to insure each service does not duplicate the efforts of others in developing weapons systems.

The GAO reached its conclusion in a report released by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.

"The American people simply shouldn't be bankrolling interservice rivalry," Aspin said.

The GAO said an ad hoc group set up by the Pentagon to identify and eliminate wasteful spending estimated that separate Army, Navy and Air Force development of laser-guided missiles wasted up to $57 million.

It said the three services also spent $51 million on separate scatterable land-mine programs with "many similarities," indicating wasteful duplication. The new land-mines could be dropped and sunk into the ground from planes or helicopters.

A Pentagon duplication eliminating committee terminated the Navy land mine program, the GAO said. The agency said the Navy had spent $6.5 million and was expected to expend $16 million more before the project was terminated.

In a third case, Aspin said, the Army and Navy spent $660,000 on separate laser-protective eye goggles and "the Air Force even literally copied word-for-word project plans prepared by the Army."

The GAO said the Pentagon is trying to eliminate the wasteful spending through joint development of a laser-guided missile and scatterable land mines for all services.

Ku Klux Klan To Run Reusch For President

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan ended its annual convention Monday with an announcement that in 1976, for the first time in its history, the group would run a presidential candidate.

James R. Venable, the imperial wizard of the National Knights, said the group had selected Dale Reusch, 35, of Lodi, Ohio, as its presidential nominee.

Venable said Reusch had chosen Scott Nelson, also 35, of Houston, Tex., as his vice presidential candidate. Nelson is imperial wizard of the Texas Fiery Knights.

Reusch, Ohio grand dragon, was sponsored by the Klan last year in an unsuccessful write-in campaign in Ohio's Democratic gubernatorial primary.

About 250 persons gathered over the Labor Day weekend at the base of Stone Mountain, Ga., site of the group's annual meeting for the past 45 years.

"We feel that both the Republican and Democratic parties are the same," Venable said. "They haven't done anything to help the people of this country."

The imperial wizard said this was the first time the Klan "has ever sponsored a candidate for national office."

Venable said the Klan would campaign against foreign aid, welfare, the United Nations and taxes.

Venable said the Klan hopes to get its candidates on the ballot in every state. "We'll get them on the ballot by petition," Venable said. "We wanted to get ready in time to have all our contacts made for our petitions."

DOCUMENTARY FILMS
WOODCUTTERS OF THE DEEP SOUTH
Directed by Lionel Rogosin
Deep in the lush backwoods of Mississippi and Alabama, history is being made. Poor black and white working people are trying to overcome the forces of racism among themselves to organize into a cooperative association to dispel the bonds of their economic captors—the paper and the pulpwood companies.
Through the eyes and minds of the workers and organizers who helped the woodcutters get started in this venture into selfhelp, Rogosin's film reveals the basic needs and struggles encountered in the development of all social organizations of this nature.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

Mexico City — An overcast day in Tenochtitlan, the ancient Aztec city. It's hurricane season. Four tropical storms — (all named for girls; what kind of Equal Rights is that?) — are off the coast.

The one that's dripping on us now is "Maggie".

For years Mexico had the most lenient taxes. I asked a resident American about it and he said: "You know, I hadn't thought about it. On income taxes, you just declared what you wanted to.

That's all over. And in every fashionable bar you hear: "Echeverria will ruin us."

☆ ☆ ☆

President Echeverria — (two years to go of his allowed six) — is collecting income taxes.

A Mexican in the plush Pink Zone said: "Now there is a $4 airport tax. And do you know he makes all the ministers work 17 hours a day?

"In Mexico we have conjugal rights for convicts — their wives can stay with them one night a week. It is a joke that the ministers' wives have asked the president for conjugal rights for prisoners. So they can see their husbands once in awhile."

☆ ☆ ☆

He said: 'You no longer see high government officials in expensive restaurants. Echeverria has said: 'There are many poor people in Mexico.'

"They are afraid the president will see them spending money. So they go to the fine restaurants and tell the owner: 'Put us in a private room. And let us out the back door.' "

Out-of-the-country phone calls are taxed 50%.

Imports are taxed heavily.

There's talk of a big increase on property taxes.

It shound just like home.

Modern Mexico is all steel-and-glass skyscrapers. But in between are the older houses that survive. And from my room in the plush El Presidente, I look down on a roof top where the tenants are raising a flock of chickens.

The rooster wakes me each morning at dawn.

In stylish Cuernavaca, an hour downhill from here, the traffic cops are young women. They wear sky-blue military blouses and miniskirts with a uniform cap.

Used to be when we ran through a signal, we said to the policeman: "My God, Senor, I must have been daydreaming. Here. Take this 10 pesos and do me the favor of paying the fine."

I wouldn't know how to handle a cop in a miniskirt.

An American here said: "Of course things have changed. Other towns in Mexico shut up shop from 2 to 4 — the siesta hours. But not Mexico City.

"On the other hand, the businessman takes a long lunch hour. But they do that on the three-martini lunch in the States.

"They do it here with the assistant system."

He said: "If you hire a man to read electric meters, he immediately hires an assistant. This proves he is important. Too important to take down the numbers.

"But maybe the assistant he hires can't read numbers too well. He will not admit this. So he writes down whatever numbers come to his head. Or you must go out and read the numbers to him.

"A hotel manager hires an assistant — that's normal. But the assistant hires an assistant. Proving he — like the manager — is too important to see if the maid is making the beds and whether the plumbing works.

"So you finally get down to somebody so unimportant he can't afford an assistant."

He said: "And then there are the new taxes . . ."

Cosmonauts Win Honors

Moscow (UPI) — The two Soyuz 15 cosmonauts, Gennady Sarafanov and Lev Demin, have been awarded the title Hero of the Soviet Union and the Order of Lenin, Moscow television said Monday.

The awards were made by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (parliament).

The two cosmonauts spent 48 hours in orbit last week. They made repeated approaches to the orbiting Salyut 3 space station but their flight apparently was cut short for unexplained reasons and they returned to earth after midnight Aug. 29.

Medical Students Provide Health Care At New Mexico's Rural Clinics

TRUCHAS, N.M. (AP) — American medical schools don't turn out many country doctors anymore, and without them health care in the nation's rural villages is becoming nonexistent.

But a two-year-old program conceived by two University of New Mexico medical students is aimed at solving the problem by staffing rural clinics with senior year medical, nursing and pharmacy students.

Project Porvenir (Spanish for "future") currently operates clinics in two New Mexicc villages that haven't had full-time health care in more than a decade.

The Truchas clinic, with two medical students, two nursing students and a pharmacy student, is housed in three tin-roofed adobe buildings in this mostly Spanish-speaking village.

It provides emergency medical attention and continuing health care to Truchas and a handful of other farming villages that dot the Sangre de Cristo Mountains of northern New Mexico.

Before the students came, the nearest medical facility for the 600 residents of Truchas was in Espanola — 25 miles away on narrow, winding mountain roads.

The clinic, and a similar project in Hatch 200 miles south, also gives the students, who work under the supervision of area doctors, exposure to rural medicine and family practice.

"I think of it in a sort of romantic way," says Bob George, 28, a four-year UNM medical student working at the Truchas clinic. "We're more sophisticated than the old-time country doctors, but we give the same sort of personal attention to our patients. We're trying to get away from the high-powered medical center approach."

George, from Albuquerque, said working at the clinic "is a lot more interesting than I thought it would be."

"We're led by the academic types to believe that all a rural practioner does is treat runny noses and that sort of thing. But we've done some really challenging medicine here."

Students receive academic credit for spending from one month to 10 weeks working at the federally funded clinics, program spokesmen said.

Program director Dr. William Wiese, a family medicine professor at UNM, said the students "are not doctors and don't pretend to be. But at the level of being a senior medical student they do have certain skills that can be useful in providing services.

"We have been very careful to provide linkages, whereby the students can get good, sound medical backup from experienced physicians in nearby communities," he said.

Wiese said the student staff has 24-hour telephone access to specialists at hospitals in both areas and physicians visit the clinic at least once a week.

At Hatch, a National Health Service Corps physician currently works full time at the clinic, while an NHSC doctor, a graduate of the Porvenir project, is expected to begin work next month at Truchas.

Wiese said the key to Porvenir is training the student "to recognize what he doesn't know and to get help when he needs it. Professional help is always available."

The facilities are owned by the community and the project is directed by a local steering committee, which sets policy and establishes fees, Porvenir officials said.

Anthony Martinez, 25, of Tucumcari, a student staffer at Truchas, said patients are charged "$3 for the initial visit and then they get two free follow-up visits. But we won't turn anybody away just because they can't pay." George said the students "get into areas that are really kind of neglected in medical school but that comprise a large part of family practice.

"We deal with the whole family. If someone brings in a small child who's sick with measles, we need to know if maybe there's an old grandmother who would be a high risk to measles living in the same house.

"A pediatrician doesn't think about that sort of thing, but we have to here."

George said the clinic gets its share of dramatic emergencies, such as gunshot wounds, drug overdoses and serious accidents. "But I don't think that's really what this is all about. What we're doing mostly is trying to establish a more long-term relationship with the patient."

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Mild or serious, diabetes is never cured according to the Nebraska Medical Association. It can be controlled by proper medical treatment and most patients life to a ripe old age.

Sometimes severe trauma can upset the body functions which brings existing diabetes to the attention of physicians as they care for the patient. The earliest and best diagnosis of diabetes is made by testing the level of sugar in the blood.

The disease is usually due to an inherited tendency, though the actual cause is unknown. It is more common over the age of 40 in women, and in overweight individuals.

Severe symptoms include frequent urination, excessive thirst and hunger, tiredness, weight loss, itching, blurred vision and skin infection. These symptoms are usually absent in early or mild cases.

The Nebraska Medcial Association reports that diabetes may be controlled by diet alone in at least half of the patients who develop the disease after the age of 30. In general, the patient must control the intake of foods containing large amounts of sugar and starch.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that physicians try to control the disease without interfering unnecessarily with the patient's daily routine. Diabetic control demands cooperation between patient and doctor.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Wednesday

Aries is first and a pioneer and more sensitive than most might imagine. These are the persons who are willing to take a chance and, thus, must also accept the bruises, emotional and otherwise. Aries makes money with Taurus, argues in "friendly fashion" with Gemini, marries Libra, makes love to Leo, travels with Sagittarius and closes business deals with Capricorn. this is the native who invents, originates and hungers for love.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is pressure time. You know what should be done — but course must surface before you do it. Key is to accept responsibility, to utilize lessons learned in past. If you attempt to skip essentials or cut corners, you could pay a dear price. Know it and act accordingly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Finish rather than begin — look for ways to distribute, to communicate ideas, to advertise in productive manner. Aries, Libra persons are likely to be in picture. Keep health resolutions. Don't delay checkups.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Emotional roadblock is temporary. Realize it and refuse to panic. Member of opposite sex is confused. Know it and don't compound the error. Maintain independent stance. You're going to get unusual chance to demonstrate abilities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Something that you do will click, your style will jell. You'll hear sound of your own voice. One at top will take favorable notice. Means more work, but reward factor will also be greater. Aquarian is featured.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Hold off on journey if possible. Take stock. Review recent past. Deal with Gemini, Sagittarius persons. Accent is on a change in beliefs, philosophy. Try to improve relations with co-workers or those who perform basic services.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept 22) Pull tight on purse strings. Keep budget plans in order. Avoid speculation. Aspects are not good for taking financial risks. Get-rich-quick scheme should be ignored. Key is to be careful about details. Be aware of fine print and read between the lines.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 22) Change course. You may be heading toward dead end. Know it and be willing to inaugurate new policy. Emphasis is on agreement which is evaporating. Be aware of public relations. Some people are misquoting you. Protect your interests by setting record straight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Get together with family member. Discuss possible purchase of luxury item. What was out of reach could become available. Taurus, Libra persons may be involved. Exchange ideas in civilized fashion. Otherwise, disagreement could lead to embarrassing loss.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Emotions run into trouble — means you could be carried away. Obviously, it is necessary to avoid extremes now more than ever. Tendency is to pay any price for reassurance. You are susceptible to a double-cross by Cupid!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will have to enlist aid of ally. Trying to straighten complicated situation on your own will lead to further tangles. Know it and put aside false pride. Emphasize security, legal green light and ability to learn from experience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Now you can finish important project. You gain added recognition due to special efforts. Aries, Libra could be involved. Messages could be garbled; check reservations. Short trip, unless you are careful, becomes wild-goose chase.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Money should be conserved. Check interest rates. Someone has ulterior motive and your personal possessions could be prime target. Ask for proof, not speculation, not theories, not sob stories. You will comprehend!

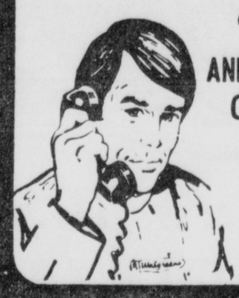

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a persuasive individual, capable of being logical and emotional almost at one and the same time. January and October are your significant months of 1974. You were psychologically separated from family at early age. You have views which upset orthodox apple cart! Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons play important roles in your life.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

Mexico City — An overcast day in Tenochtitlan, the ancient Aztec city. It's hurricane season. Four tropical storms — (all named for girls; what kind of Equal Rights is that?) — are off the coast.

The one that's dripping on us now is "Maggie".

For years Mexico had the most lenient taxes. I asked a resident American about it and he said: "You know, I hadn't thought about it. On income taxes, you just declared what you wanted to.

That's all over. And in every fashionable bar you hear: "Echeverria will ruin us."

☆ ☆ ☆

President Echeverria — (two years to go of his allowed six) — is collecting income taxes.

A Mexican in the plush Pink Zone said: "Now there is a $4 airport tax. And do you know he makes all the ministers work 17 hours a day?

"In Mexico we have conjugal rights for convicts — their wives can stay with them one night a week. It is a joke that the ministers' wives have asked the president for conjugal rights for prisoners. So they can see their husbands once in awhile."

☆ ☆ ☆

He said: 'You no longer see high government officials in expensive restaurants. Echeverria has said: 'There are many poor people in Mexico.'

"They are afraid the president will see them spending money. So they go to the fine restaurants and tell the owner: 'Put us in a private room. And let us out the back door.' "

Out-of-the-country phone calls are taxed 50%.

Imports are taxed heavily.

There's talk of a big increase on property taxes.

It shound just like home.

Modern Mexico is all steel-and-glass skyscrapers. But in between are the older houses that survive. And from my room in the plush El Presidente, I look down on a roof top where the tenants are raising a flock of chickens.

The rooster wakes me each morning at dawn.

In stylish Cuernavaca, an hour downhill from here, the traffic cops are young women. They wear sky-blue military blouses and miniskirts with a uniform cap.

Used to be when we ran through a signal, we said to the policeman: "My God, Senor, I must have been daydreaming. Here. Take this 10 pesos and do me the favor of paying the fine" I wouldn't know how to handle a cop in a miniskirt.

☆ ☆ ☆

An American here said: "Of course things have changed. Other towns in Mexico shut up shop from 2 to 4 — the siesta hours. But not Mexico City.

"On the other hand, the businessman takes a long lunch hour. But they do that on the three-martini lunch in the States.

"They do it here with the assistant system."

He said: "If you hire a man to read electric meters, he immediately hires an assistant. This proves he is important. Too important to take down the numbers.

"But maybe the assistant he hires can't read numbers too well. He will not admit this. So he writes down whatever numbers come to his head. Or you must go out and read the numbers to him.

"A hotel manager hires an assistant — that's normal. But the assistant hires an assistant. Proving he — like the manager — is too important to see if the maid is making the beds and whether the plumbing works.

"So you finally get down to somebody so unimportant he can't afford an assistant."

He said: "And then there are the new taxes . . ."

Cosmonauts Win Honors

Moscow (UPI) — The two Soyuz 15 cosmonauts, Gennady Sarafanov and Lev Demin, have been awarded the title Hero of the Soviet Union and the Order of Lenin, Moscow television said Monday.

The awards were made by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (parliament).

The two cosmonauts spent 48 hours in orbit last week. They made repeated approaches to the orbiting Salyut 3 space station but their flight apparently was cut short for unexplained reasons and they returned to earth after midnight Aug. 29.

Gretna Council To Issue Report

. . . On Police Dept.

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Gretna — Several citizens expressed a willingness to pay higher taxes for better qualified law enforcement at a public meeting held here Tuesday night by Gretna's City Council.

Others voiced support for the performance of Police Commissioner Steve Westenburg, Police Chief Ed Jipp and his officers.

The comment followed a reading of written charges against the Police Department — most particularly against Officer Barry Klinetobe, submitted by Gretna resident Ken Morris.

Morris has been raising charges of negligence on the part of the Gretna Police Department in controlling drug and juvenile problems described by Morris as "unbelievable for a town this size."

Morris requested the meeting to submit written charges to the council. Mayor Joe Verbeek said the council would review each charge and respond with a written report, probably at a special council meeting to be held in two weeks.

Verbeek has said he supports Westenburg and Jipp, and doesn't think a problem exists.

Morris' written statement repeated charges he has made previously, alledging that on several occasions fulltime officer Barry Klinetobe has left the town unprotected.

Klinetobe, Morris said, has also made derogatory remarks regarding the council, police chief and other Gretna residents; turned over criminal evidence to the father of a juvenile suspect; and disobeyed Chief Jipp.

Morris also charged that Chief Jipp had been given a list of boys "who were to be treated with a hands-off policy."

Chief Jipp denied that he had ever been given such a list.

Morris further charged that two persons who had planned to appear and coroborate his charges had been intimidated by their superiors, in violation of their civil rights. He threatened to call for an investigation by the FBI or a federal grand jury if the alledged intimidation persists.

Morris submitted signed statements from nine Gretna residents in support of his charges.

Missing from his list was an earlier allegation that two officers had claimed and been given pay for hours they did not work.

If the city cannot provide adequate police protection on its budget, Morris suggested, it should consider contracting coverage by the county sheriff's office, entailing "only a slight tax increase," he said.

Gretna resident Mrs. Joan Carl asked Westenburg, a member of the council appointed to serve as police commissioner, whether police salaries couldn't be raised to get more qualified applicants.

Westenburg said Gretna's police salaries two years ago were lower than those of any town its size in the area, and efforts are being made to upgrade them. Some people object to higher taxes, however, he added.

Mrs. Carl replied she would be willing to pay a little higher levy for better protection. Charles V. Hike, another Gretna resident, agreed.

Mayor Verbeek observed that Police Commissioner Westenburg was the only department chief to have had his budget request denied by the council this year, and urged Mrs. Carl to support him come next budget time.

Morris, a veteran of military police training and service, has declined to make his occupation public except to say he has been "in the investigative business." He has no political motives, Morris says, and is acting only as a concerned citizen.

Girl Catches Big Fish

Melissa Woodworth may be only 8 years old and blind, but that doesn't stop her from being a great fisherman. She caught this 28-pound, 14-ounce King salmon on a weekend fishing trip to Muskegon, Mich., "I thought it was a whale," the Lansing girl said. "I just yelled out loud for Daddy."

Scottsbluff OKs Veterans Home At Hiram Scott

Scottsbluff (AP) — The State of Nebraska can operate a 318-bed veterans home at the old Hiram Scott College site, the Scottsbluff Board of Adjustment ruled Tuesday.

Permission was granted for a nursing home facility in Skinner Hall and on the grounds of the Vanguard complex, which is to be torn down.

A state spokesman said the home will employ 250 persons and it will be a $4 million annual operation.

The spokesman said 65% of the cost will be paid by the Veterans Administration.

Skinner Hall is to open the first of next year. Buildings on the Vanguard site will be in operation in about a year.

Steel Output Down

New York (AP) — Steel production declined 0.6% to 2,649,000 net tons in the week ended Aug. 31, compared with the previous week's 2,664,000 net tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

County Commission Defers More Action

The major action of Lancaster County commissioners Tuesday was to defer action. Most agenda items were put off until further information was available or until meetings with involved parties could be held.

Two requests for county maintenance of streets in rural subdivisions, which had been delayed for three weeks until Tuesday, were deferred again until a meeting could be held on the county's responsibility in this area.

The board also deferred action on the jail agreement with the City of Lincoln, pending a meeting on the fees paid to County Sheriff Merle Karnopp by a previous agreement between him and the county board.

The difference between the $2.50 per day per prisoner the law provides and the $3 the county board is allowing Karnopp was questioned by the state auditor's report released a few weeks ago.

The board also deferred action on a compensation plan for the Lancaster County Welfare Department employes to bring them in line with salaries under the county's new personnel plan.

In other action, the board appointed James L. Fisher of the Disabled American Veterans' Chapter 7 to the Veterans Service Center Committee vacancy.

The commissioners set Sept. 24 for public hearing on the proposed vacation of a portion of Garland Ave.; and they agreed to negotiate with Lincoln General Hospital regarding its proposal for parking in the county-owned lot adjacent to the hospital and the health and welfare offices at 2200 St. Marys.

Norris District 160 Enrollment Up

The 1,197 students enrolled in Norris School District 160 represents a 3½% increase this year, or 44 more students than entered last fall, Supt. Dennis Nosal reported Tuesday.

"We projected about that figure," Nosal said, noting that "in the past five years, our enrollment has increased about 20%," from 985 students in the 1969-70 school year.

Elementary students this fall number 609 and secondary students, 588, including three special students. "We expect about a 1% increase during the school year," from 20 to 30 more students, he said.

The district covers southeast Lancaster County and a portion of northern Gage County, and takes in the towns of Cortland, Firth, Panama, Holland, Hickman, Princeton and Roca.

Nosal said district residents this year will pay a 41.59 total mill levy, which "for the third straight year has dropped," Nosal said.

The levy decrease this year owed mainly to a 7.7% increase in assessed valuation of property, from a total of $20,488,000 last year to $22,063,000 this year, according to the superintendent.

Beginning in 1971-72, the District 160 total levy has dropped, in successive years, from 50.61 to 48.86 to 44.27 mills, Nosal said.

The Norris School is located four miles south of Hickman.

Beatrice Airs Garbage Pact Problems

By Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — A mutiplicity of problems in writing a new garbage service contract was discussed by the city council Tuesday night, with action deferred pending further meetings of a special study committee.

It is the council's hope to have a new contract by Oct. 31, when a temporary agreement with Rush Disposal Service is scheduled to expire. But Allen Grell, chairman of the committee, indicated that numerous details must be worked out before bids are advertised.

A proposal to make the service mandatory for all residents drew some criticism at the meeting, especially from a delegation of senior citizens. Spokesman Mrs. Viola Braun argued that concession should be given to persons living alone because they would have less refuse than families.

Mayor Bob Sargent assured that an attempt would be made to take this factor into account in writing bid specifications. However, he defended the need for mandatory collection.

Councilman Bill Johnson contended the mandatory provision paralelled taxation for schools or police protection, which also is not based upon the degree of use. But Doug Probst argued that such a requirement "would be pushing something down people's throats."

Councilman Probst also predicted that a lawsuit will result if the mandatory provision is included in a new contract. City Atty. Steve Von Riesen said he believed the stipulation would be legal, however, as several Nebraska cities already have it in force.

One of the main factors to be resolved is whether garbage will be collected on a twice-weekly basis, as it has been in the past, or weekly. It was suggested that a varying fee schedule might be established based upon the quantity collected.

The council also:

—Voted to accept bid of Gage County Oil Co. to supply the city with gas and oil for next year. Lowest of three bids submitted, it was based on discount of 6.1 cents per gallon below the frim's top price.

—Referred to contracts and licenses committee $190,295 bid of Metro Pavers Inc. of Lincoln, only one received, on paving district 265.

—Approved retail Class C liquor license for Linda S. Ruhnky at Steeplehouse Supper Club.

—On recommendation of police department, voted to recommend that State Liquor Commission deny beer license for Lowell D. Mills as manager of Pizza Hut.

—Voted to award health and life insurance contracts for city employes to Bankers Life Nebraska.

—Passed resolution agreeing to raise in interest rates of warrant from 6 to 6.5% as requested by local banks.

Hold-up Men, Policeman Killed In Paris Shootout

PARIS (AP) — Two bank robbers and a policeman were killed and four persons were wounded in a shootout at a Paris bank Tuesday, police said.

The exchange of fire, which lasted several minutes at the door of the bank and in the avenue outside, shattered several shop windows. Panicky pedestrians flattened themselves on the sidewalk.

Police said three masked men carrying submachine guns entered a branch of the Industrial and Commercial Bank, grabbed two customers as hostages and then began looting the cashier's box.

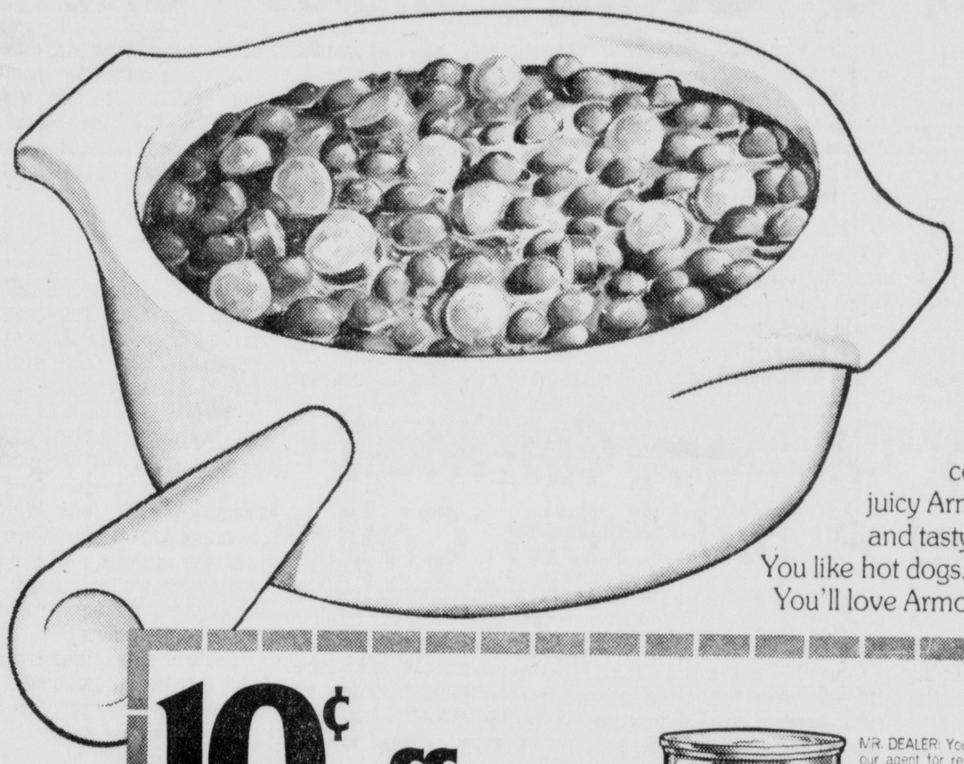

The bank director escaped through a back door and beckoned a traffic policeman who ordered the bandits to surrender. They shot and killed him.

A squad car rushed to the bank in time to fire at the bandits who had released the hostages and were trying to escape.

Police said two bandits were killed as the trio ran down the street.

Police said the wounded included one of their men, in critical condition; an employee of the bank, and two passers-by. The third bandit surrendered.

Medical Students Provide Health Care At New Mexico's Rural Clinics

TRUCHAS, N.M. (AP) — American medical schools don't turn out many country doctors anymore, and without them health care in the nation's rural villages is becoming nonexistent.

But a two-year-old program conceived by two University of New Mexico medical students is aimed at solving the problem by staffing rural clinics with senior year medical, nursing and pharmacy students.

Project Porvenir (Spanish for "future") currently operates clinics in two New Mexicc villages that haven't had full-time health care in more than a decade.

The Truchas clinic, with two medical students, two nursing students and a pharmacy student, is housed in three tin-roofed adobe buildings in this mostly Spanish-speaking village.

It provides emergency medical attention and continuing health care to Truchas and a handful of other farming villages that dot the Sangre de Cristo Mountains of northern New Mexico.

Before the students came, the nearest medical facility for the 600 residents of Truchas was in Espanola — 25 miles away on narrow, winding mountain roads.

The clinic, and a similar project in Hatch 200 miles south, also gives the students, who work under the supervision of area doctors, exposure to rural medicine and family practice.

"I think of it in a sort of romantic way," says Bob George, 28, a four-year UNM medical student working at the Truchas clinic. "We're more sophisticated than the old-time country doctors, but we give the same sort of personal attention to our patients. We're trying to get away from the high-powered medical center approach."

George, from Albuquerque, said working at the clinic "is a lot more interesting than I thought it would be."

"We're led by the academic types to believe that all a rural practioner does is treat runny noses and that sort of thing. But we've done some really challenging medicine here."

Students receive academic credit for spending from one month to 10 weeks working at the federally funded clinics, program spokesmen said.

Program director Dr. William Wiese, a family medicine professor at UNM, said the students "are not doctors and don't pretend to be. But at the level of being a senior medical student they do have certain skills that can be useful in providing services.

"We have been very careful to provide linkages, whereby the students can get good, sound medical backup from experienced physicians in nearby communities," he said.

Wiese said the student staff has 24-hour telephone access to specialists at hospitals in both areas and physicians visit the clinic at least once a week.

At Hatch, a National Health Service Corps physician currently works full time at the clinic, while an NHSC doctor, a graduate of the Porvenir project, is expected to begin work next month at Truchas.

Wiese said the key to Porvenir is training the student "to recognize what he doesn't know and to get help when he needs it. Professional help is always available."

The facilities are owned by the community and the project is directed by a local steering committee, which sets policy and establishes fees, Porvenir officials said.

Anthony Martinez, 25, of Tucumcari, a student staffer at Truchas, said patients are charged "$3 for the initial visit and then they get two free follow-up visits. But we won't turn anybody away just because they can't pay." George said the students "get into areas that are really kind of neglected in medical school but that comprise a large part of family practice.

"We deal with the whole family. If someone brings in a small child who's sick with measles, we need to know if maybe there's an old grandmother who would be a high risk to measles living in the same house.

"A pediatrician doesn't think about that sort of thing, but we have to here."

George said the clinic gets its share of dramatic emergencies, such as gunshot wounds, drug overdoses and serious accidents. "But I don't think that's really what this is all about. What we're doing mostly is trying to establish a more long-term relationship with the patient."

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Mild or serious, diabetes is never cured according to the Nebraska Medical Association. It can be controlled by proper medical treatment and most patients life to a ripe old age.

Sometimes severe trauma can upset the body functions which brings existing diabetes to the attention of physicians as they care for the patient. The earliest and best diagnosis of diabetes is made by testing the level of sugar in the blood.

The disease is usually due to an inherited tendency, though the actual cause is unknown. It is more common over the age of 40 in women, and in overweight individuals.

Severe symptoms include frequent urination, excessive thirst and hunger, tiredness, weight loss, itching, blurred vision and skin infection. These symptoms are usually absent in early or mild cases.

The Nebraska Medcial Association reports that diabetes may be controlled by diet alone in at least half of the patients who develop the disease after the age of 30. In general, the patient must control the intake of foods containing large amounts of sugar and starch

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that physicians try to control the disease without interfering unnecessarily with the patient's daily routine. Diabetic control demands cooperation between patient and doctor.

Black Horse Handler Sometimes Bitter

If Frank Dixon could rewrite history, he would probably leave a few extra chapers in the books for blacks.

Maybe he could even find space for a few paragraphs about himself and his family.

Dixon is the only black man in the country who can handle a six-horse hitch. He's also the only black certified horse judge in the Midwest.

The grandson of a slave, Dixon was born and raised on a farm in Fayette County, Iowa. His grandmother on his mother's side homesteaded there in 1858.

Right In Middle

There were 13 kids in Dixon's family and he was right in the middle, number seven.

"It was rough but it was probably good for us," he said.

Between 1918 and 1937, Dixon and his brother farmed 480 acres with horses.

"The horse business is just a way of life with me," he said. "I never have liked tractors. I've always preferred horses.

"I can remember when I first started in school. I'd catch my father at the end of the field so I could drive the horses. Heck I've been driving horses since I was a little tyke, six or seven years old."

Now, at 64, Dixon handles horses only once or twice a year, usually at State Fair time. Joe Allen, a Belgian owner from Cozad, hires him to drive his six-horse hitch in Fair competition.

'Nothing New'

"This is nothing new for me," he said. "I used to show our Belgians a lot for fairs. At one time we owned 42 and we raised every one of them ourselves."

In the show ring, Dixon is known far and wide as one of the best.

But outside the ring, he said he has to double his efforts to prove his abilities.

He admitted he's sometimes bitter about the way blacks have fared in history books as well as Hollywood's versions.

"If you take a look at the history of America, you'll see that what they printed is what they wanted to hear," he said. "When I was going to school, all I learned was what (George Washington) Carver did with peanuts.

STAR PHOTO

DIXON . . . might leave a few extra chapters for blacks.

"Sometimes it can really bother ya," he said.

"When they took the black man into slavery, they took away his manhood and they've never given it back."

Dixon knows all too well the story of slavery in America.

"My grandfather only talked about slavery three times," he said. "If he started in the morning, he'd cry himself to sleep that night."

Dixon said he still remembers the welts his grandfather wore on his back until he died at age 85.

"They'd tie him to a log and beat him," he said. "Then they'd run a cat up and down his back and rub salt into his wounds . . .

'Getting Farther Behind'

"People try to say things are changing a lot, but as fast as the world is changing, we're getting farther and farther behind."

After a heart attack in 1960, Dixon took a job as a college counselor and minority recruiter for the vocational-technical school at Waterloo, Iowa.

Until then, he said, "I really didn't know what discrimination was."

In his words: Blacks are the last to get jobs and what they get are the hardest and with the worst pay.

"Blacks have been told all their lives what to do and how to do it," he said. "I'm just thankful I learned self-worth and independence when I was growing up on a farm.

"I don't know what would have happened to me if I hadn't been brought up under those conditions."

Lincoln Public Schools 1st-Day Enrollment Dips

Supt. John Prasch reported first-day total enrollment in the Lincoln Public Schools Tuesday — 28,286 — is down 769 from the first day of classes last year.

While the 2,095 total of kindergarteners represents a decrease of four children compared to school's opening last fall, early projections placed the total at 2,130, Prasch said.

Because the kindergarten class is the least predictable, projections on the same basis may have been overestimated throughout the grades, he said.

"We usually pick up quite a bit after the first day," Prasch said, noting, that number will probably be fewer than in the past because school began a week later this fall.

Prasch said the number of primary grade and senior high students is "down a little" and junior high enrollees are "fairly close" to the number that started in 1973-74.

In grades one through six, 12,289 youngsters began classes Tuesday. The senior high schools reported 6,430 students and the junior highs, 6,803.

The total count reflects nine home-bound students throughout the grades, and includes 529 special education and 140 Head Start students served by the public schools.

Prasch said the schools will take a second telephone count on Friday and make an official count on Sept. 27.

Laubach Tutors Illiterate

World Literacy Day observances this Sunday will center on international tutoring by Laubach Literacy, Inc., volunteers, according to Jeanne Adams, president of the Lincoln chapter, Nebraska Council of Literacy.

A film, "Response to Crisis: Laubach Literacy in Action," will be shown at 2:30 p.m., at the First United Methodist Church.

Laubach, headquartered in Syracuse, N.Y., has tutors in Canada, Mexico, Panama, Columbia, Brazil, India, Rhodesia, Afghanistan and Jordan's West Bank. In some of those countries, Mrs. Adams said, 40-80% of the populations are illiterate.

Laubach works abroad as it does in the United States, including Nebraska, she said.

Chapters in Omaha, Lincoln, Bellevue, Plattsmouth, Alliance and Hastings organized to reach the approximately 41,000 functionally illiterate Nebraskans, Omaha organizer Ruth Chambers said.

Those are people whose inability to read or write inhibits their daily life and work, she said.

She said many of them are Indian, black or foreign-born wives and children of Air Force men stationed at Offutt Air Base in Bellevue.

Mrs. Taylor said tutors organize some classes, but mostly they arrange to meet students in churches or community centers for individual lessons.

More Expensive Facade Picked For Twin Garages

The State Building Commission Tuesday opted for the more esthetic, although more expensive, facade for the twin parking garages for the State Office Building.

At the suggestion of Gov. J. James Exon, the commission chose a textured limestone-cement finish over a more conventional painted cement finish. The textured finish will cost an additional $178,000, it was estimated.

Exon said the textured finish would cost less to maintain and would be more in keeping with the other buildings located on the 15th St. Mall.

Construction on the $20 million project is just beginning and should be completed sometime in 1977.

Scrutiny Of Goals, Policies Panel Begins

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln's City Council began skirting the edges of the Goals and Policies Committee controversy Tuesday.

The Goals and Policies Committee was organized to give citizens input into city planning procedures. The controversy surrounds the committee's proposed by-laws.

City council members looked at the by-laws but took no action because they want more information on two proposals, adopted by a majority vote at the Goals and Policies Committee's August meeting.

One proposal urges a 15 to 25-member executive board to oversee the group.

The second proposal deals with the voting procedures by which those board members would be elected.

Proposal Rejected

Board members would not have to represent a geographic and socio-economic mix of the community, the by-laws state. At the August meeting, the committee had rejected proposals asking that type of representation.

And in electing members to the board, each committee member could cast as many votes for one nominee as there were seats on the board.

The cumulative voting procedure was defended Tuesday by committee member Bob Peterson. He told council members that the procedure would insure that minority views are represented on the executive board.

"It's not a means to take over the whole board," Peterson stated, referring to allegations made after the August meeting that the Goals and Policies Committee has been taken over by special interest groups.

Peterson, president of Peterson Construction Co., acknowledged that there were "many new faces" at that meeting which were missing from previous deliberations. He said the business and building community realized they should be involved in future Goals and Policies discussions.

Councilwomen Helen Boosalis and Sue Bailey questioned the cumulative voting proposal.

Objection Raised

Jackie Herman, of the Near-South Neighborhood Association, objected to the procedure. She charged that citizens would have to become members of an interest group in order to benefit from the voting process.

Boosalis also questioned why the committee rejected the proposal for geographic and socio-economic representation on the executive board.

Realtor Pace Woods Jr. explained that committee members want to achieve such a balance, but questioned the practibility of actually being able to do so.

Herman said she opposed electing board members, but suggested that if the council went that route that legislative boundary lines be used to form election districts.

Councilmen Max Denney and Steve Cook suggested that an alternative would be to elect some board members and appoint the rest.

The County Board also must adopt the by-laws.

Under the interlocal agreement between the city and county creating the Goals and Policies Committee, the by-laws would go back to the drawing board if rejected by either the council or commissioners.

Property Owners On Mall May Get A Bill From City

Property owners whose land abuts the 15th St. Centennial Mall may finally be getting a bill from the city to help pay for the project — some four years after the mall's construction.

The City Council set the wheels in motion Tuesday which will end up delivering an assessment bill to the property owners. The council authorized the hiring of an appraiser to help determine assessment costs.

A decision on assessing that property, which covers a four-block area, from P to R and from M to K, has been left hanging for almost four years.

Total cost of the mall was $584,112. The remaining balance, about $228,000, would be assessed to abutting property owners.

Council Chairwoman Helen Boosalis said the assessment issue became clouded because the city thought it had informal agreements with some property owners. Under those informal agreements the telephone company and several insurance companies agreed to help foot the bill for the mall's construction, she said.

City Atty. Dick Wood also said the city was forced to condemn some land because several property owners did not want to sell their property to the city.

Wood warned the council that any action assessing costs to property owners may result in some legal battles. He said that the employment of an appraiser not only would help the city assess the property, but would be an "expert witness" in a lawsuit.

Estimated cost of hiring an appraiser was set at $5,000.

Except for the $228,000 balance, the mall income came from:

—$40,000 from the Nebraska Centennial Fund.

—$39,985 from a federal grant.

—$914 from the American Legion, for the eternal light.

—$30,467 from the Woods Charitable Foundation, for the fountains.

—$87,000 from the street construction fund.

—$180,700 from the H. J. Winnett trust.

—$10 from an anonymous doner.

—$4,998 from interest on the income taken in.

Council OKs Hiring Of Required Planner

The City Council took the first step Tuesday to help Lincoln obtain federal dollars to redevelop neighborhoods when it authorized the hiring of a planner in the Community Development Department.

The planner would help the department prepare plans for neighborhood improvement projects which would be undertaken with $500,000 expected next year.

Community Development Director Leo Scherer said the planner also would help formulate a three-year plan outlining how and where federal funds would be spent.

One Of Requirements

That three-year plan is just one of the requirements which must be met before any dollars are forthcoming from Washington, D.C.

The city also must have a program to eliminate or prevent slums and blight, a housing assistance plan, comply with civil rights legislation and provide for citizen participation, Scherer said.

Scherer said officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) told him in Kansas City last week that the rules and regulations governing the program should be in final form by mid-November.

One thing Scherer did learn from HUD officials is that Lincoln's proposed Centrum project might not qualify for community development dollars.

And if the Centrum did qualify, it would be placed at the bottom of the list since HUD is stressing neighborhood redevelopment projects.

Funds Hoped For

Several council members previously had voiced hope that the $7.4 million Centrum could be partially financed with those federal dollars.

The Centrum is a proposed parking garage and retail merchandising complex to be built in the block from 11th to 12th, N to O.

Scherer said Lincoln could receive up to $500,000 as of Jan. 1, 1975 and additional, unspecified amounts for the next five years.

Scherer and a number of other department heads will oversee the application process.

The city can expect to receive up to $4.3 million in HUD dollars over the next five or six years to fight urban decay as a result of a housing and community development bill signed into law by President Ford last month.

President's Life Normal—Almost

New York (AP) — Life in the White House is the same as it was in the past, Betty Ford says. But President Ford doesn't toast his own muffins in the morning any more.

"We're just having a normal family life as we've always had," the President's wife adds.

Burned Boy Shows Slight Improvement

Omaha (AP) — A 7-year-old Iowa boy burned at his home last Wednesday has improved from critical to serious condition at an Omaha hospital.

Attendants said Todd Kirk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Kirk of Beebeetown, made progress over the Labor Day weekend.

The boy was burned while playing in the garage of his home with his four-year-old brother Tadd. One of the boys apparently lit a match and dropped it into a paint thinner can, igniting Todd's clothing.

The boy suffered burns over more than 40 per cent of his body. His mother said nerves in Todd's legs were badly burned and his legs are numb. She said doctors have said he should walk again.

Doctors told the Kirks also that there son would be in intensive care until at least until the end of October "and they'll try to get him home for Christmas."

Omaha friends of the couple have organized a fund drive to help defray the more than $30,000 expected in medical expenses.

Improvement Project Priority List Asked

City lawmakers directed the Public Works Department Tuesday to set up a priority list of improvement projects which can be financed by the city.

That action culminated several weeks of discussion over high interest rates on municipal bonds which have temporarily halted construction of new water, sanitary sewer, paving and ornamental lighting districts.

Current interest rates exceed the 6% limitation imposed by the City Charter.

The council authorized Obering to proceed with $1.5 million worth of projects now under construction and to establish a rating list for some $2.8 million worth of projects now on the drawing boards.

Sanitary sewer and water districts will be given top priority, Obering said, to protect public health.

That same rating system will be applied to some $834,000 worth of improvement districts which have been created by the City Council. Obering has been holding up further council action ordering those districts constructed pending a decision on the financing question.

In an effort to overcome the interest rate limitation, the Charter Revision Committee has recommended that the ceiling be lifted. If the council goes along with that recommendation, the issue will be placed on the November ballot.

Obering said a decision was needed since a number of developers are in a dilemna over the situation. Builders do not know whether the council will order improvements constructed in new subdivisions, he said.

Several council members suggested that the city could work with developers to install improvements on a piecemeal basis.

Lincoln General Meets Accreditation Standards

Lincoln General Hospital received notice last week that it has been accredited for two years by the national Joint Commission on Accreditation.

Hospital Administrator W. Robert Brungard said Lincoln General has been accredited since 1958.

The hospital pays the commission $800 to survey it every other year, Brungard said. A doctor and nurse team spent June 20-21, at Lincoln General, he said.

"The survey is one of the best ways to measure hospitals against national standards," Brungard said.

Besides accrediting hospitals that meet minimum standards, he said, the survey teams advise hospital administrators and physicians how to improve treatment or prepare for medical innovations.

Accreditation is acknowledgment that the hospital offers adequate quality and variety of medical treatment, Brungard said.

Lincoln General was commended for "maintaining standards deserving of accreditation and for constant effort in improving the quality of patient care."

Commission members are the American Medical Association, American Hospital Association, American College of Physicians and the American College of Surgeons.

Gretna Council To Issue Report

. . . On Police Dept.

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Gretna — Several citizens expressed a willingness to pay higher taxes for better qualified law enforcement at a public meeting held here Tuesday night by Gretna's City Council.

Others voiced support for the performance of Police Commissioner Steve Westenburg, Police Chief Ed Jipp and his officers.

The comment followed a reading of written charges against the Police Department — most particularly against Officer Barry Klinetobe, submitted by Gretna resident Ken Morris.

Morris has been raising charges of negligence on the part of the Gretna Police Department in controlling drug and juvenile problems described by Morris as "unbelievable for a town this size."

Morris requested the meeting to submit written charges to the council. Mayor Joe Verbeek said the council would review each charge and respond with a written report, probably at a special council meeting to be held in two weeks.

Verbeek has said he supports Westenburg and Jipp, and doesn't think a problem exists.

Morris' written statement repeated charges he has made previously, alledging that on several occasions fulltime officer Barry Klinetobe has left the town unprotected.

Klinetobe, Morris said, has also made derogatory remarks regarding the council, police chief and other Gretna residents; turned over criminal evidence to the father of a juvenile suspect; and disobeyed Chief Jipp.

Morris also charged that Chief Jipp had been given a list of boys "who were to be treated with a hands-off policy."

Chief Jipp denied that he had ever been given such a list.

Morris further charged that two persons who had planned to appear and coroborate his charges had been intimidated by their superiors, in violation of their civil rights. He threatened to call for an investigation by the FBI or a federal grand jury if the alledged intimidation persists.

Morris submitted signed statements from nine Gretna residents in support of his charges.

Missing from his list was an earlier allegation that two officers had claimed and been given pay for hours they did not work.

If the city cannot provide adequate police protection on its budget, Morris suggested, it should consider contracting coverage by the county sheriff's office, entailing "only a slight tax increase," he said.

Gretna resident Mrs. Joan Carl asked Westenburg, a member of the council appointed to serve as police commissioner, whether police salaries couldn't be raised to get more qualified applicants.

Westenburg said Gretna's police salaries two years ago were lower than those of any town its size in the area, and efforts are being made to upgrade them. Some people object to higher taxes, however, he added.

Mrs. Carl replied she would be willing to pay a little higher levy for better protection. Charles V. Hike, another Gretna resident, agreed.

Mayor Verbeek observed that Police Commissioner Westenburg was the only department chief to have had his budget request denied by the council this year, and urged Mrs. Carl to support him come next budget time.

Morris, a veteran of military police training and service, has declined to make his occupation public except to say he has been "in the investigative business." He has no political motives, Morris says, and is acting only as a concerned citizen.

Girl Catches Big Fish

Melissa Woodworth may be only 8 years old and blind, but that doesn't stop her from being a great fisherman. She caught this 28-pound, 14-ounce King salmon on a weekend fishing trip to Muskegon, Mich., "I thought it was a whale," the Lansing girl said. "I just yelled out loud for Daddy."

Scottsbluff OKs Veterans Home At Hiram Scott

Scottsbluff (AP) — The State of Nebraska can operate a 318-bed veterans home at the old Hiram Scott College site, the Scottsbluff Board of Adjustment ruled Tuesday.

Permission was granted for a nursing home facility in Skinner Hall and on the grounds of the Vanguard complex, which is to be torn down.

A state spokesman said the home will employ 250 persons and it will be a $4 million annual operation.

The spokesman said 65% of the cost will be paid by the Veterans Administration.

Skinner Hall is to open the first of next year. Buildings on the Vanguard site will be in operation in about a year.

Steel Output Down

New York (AP) — Steel production declined 0.6% to 2,649,000 net tons in the week ended Aug. 31, compared with the previous week's 2,664,000 net tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

County Commission Defers More Action

The major action of Lancaster County commissioners Tuesday was to defer action. Most agenda items were put off until further information was available or until meetings with involved parties could be held.

Two requests for county maintenance of streets in rural subdivisions, which had been delayed for three weeks until Tuesday, were deferred again until a meeting could be held on the county's responsibility in this area.

The board also deferred action on the jail agreement with the City of Lincoln, pending a meeting on the fees paid to County Sheriff Merle Karnopp by a previous agreement between him and the county board.

The difference between the $2.50 per day per prisoner the law provides and the $3 the county board is allowing Karnopp was questioned by the state auditor's report released a few weeks ago.

The board also deferred action on a compensation plan for the Lancaster County Welfare Department employes to bring them in line with salaries under the county's new personnel plan.

In other action, the board appointed James L. Fisher of the Disabled American Veterans' Chapter 7 to the Veterans Service Center Committee vacancy.

The commissioners set Sept. 24 for public hearing on the proposed vacation of a portion of Garland Ave.; and they agreed to negotiate with Lincoln General Hospital regarding its proposal for parking in the county-owned lot adjacent to the hospital and the health and welfare offices at 2200 St. Marys.

Norris District 160 Enrollment Up

The 1,197 students enrolled in Norris School District 160 represents a 3½% increase this year, or 44 more students than entered last fall, Supt. Dennis Nosal reported Tuesday.

"We projected about that figure," Nosal said, noting that "in the past five years, our enrollment has increased about 20%," from 985 students in the 1969-70 school year.

Elementary students this fall number 609 and secondary students, 588, including three special students. "We expect about a 1% increase during the school year," from 20 to 30 more students, he said.

The district covers southeast Lancaster County and a portion of northern Gage County, and takes in the towns of Cortland, Firth, Panama, Holland, Hickman, Princeton and Roca.

Nosal said district residents this year will pay a 41.59 total mill levy, which "for the third straight year has dropped," Nosal said.

The levy decrease this year owed mainly to a 7.7% increase in assessed valuation of property, from a total of $20,488,000 last year to $22,063,000 this year, according to the superintendent.

Beginning in 1971-72, the District 160 total levy has dropped, in successive years, from 50.61 to 48.86 to 44.27 mills, Nosal said.

The Norris School is located four miles south of Hickman.

Beatrice Airs Garbage Pact Problems

By Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — A mutiplicity of problems in writing a new garbage service contract was discussed by the city council Tuesday night, with action deferred pending further meetings of a special study committee.

It is the council's hope to have a new contract by Oct. 31, when a temporary agreement with Rush Disposal Service is scheduled to expire. But Allen Grell, chairman of the committee, indicated that numerous details must be worked out before bids are advertised.

A proposal to make the service mandatory for all residents drew some criticism at the meeting, especially from a delegation of senior citizens. Spokesman Mrs. Viola Braun argued that concession should be given to persons living alone because they would have less refuse than families.

Mayor Bob Sargent assured that an attempt would be made to take this factor into account in writing bid specifications. However, he defended the need for mandatory collection.

Councilman Bill Johnson contended the mandatory provision paralelled taxation for schools or police protection, which also is not based upon the degree of use. But Doug Probst argued that such a requirement "would be pushing something down people's throats."

Councilman Probst also predicted that a lawsuit will result if the mandatory provision is included in a new contract. City Atty. Steve Von Riesen said he believed the stipulation would be legal, however, as several Nebraska cities already have it in force.

One of the main factors to be resolved is whether garbage will be collected on a twice-weekly basis, as it has been in the past, or weekly. It was suggested that a varying fee schedule might be established based upon the quantity collected.

The council also:

—Voted to accept bid of Gage County Oil Co. to supply the city with gas and oil for next year. Lowest of three bids submitted, it was based on discount of 6.1 cents per gallon below the frim's top price.

—Referred to contracts and licenses committee $190,295 bid of Metro Pavers Inc. of Lincoln, only one received, on paving district 265.

—Approved retail Class C liquor license for Linda S. Ruhnky at Steeplehouse Supper Club.

—On recommendation of police department, voted to recommend that State Liquor Commission deny beer license for Lowell D. Mills as manager of Pizza Hut.

—Voted to award health and life insurance contracts for city employes to Bankers Life Nebraska.

—Passed resolution agreeing to raise in interest rates of warrant from 6 to 6.5% as requested by local banks.

Hold-up Men, Policeman Killed In Paris Shootout

PARIS (AP) — Two bank robbers and a policeman were killed and four persons were wounded in a shootout at a Paris bank Tuesday, police said.

The exchange of fire, which lasted several minutes at the door of the bank and in the avenue outside, shattered several shop windows. Panicky pedestrians flattened themselves on the sidewalk.

Police said three masked men carrying submachine guns entered a branch of the Industrial and Commercial Bank, grabbed two customers as hostages and then began looting the cashier's box.

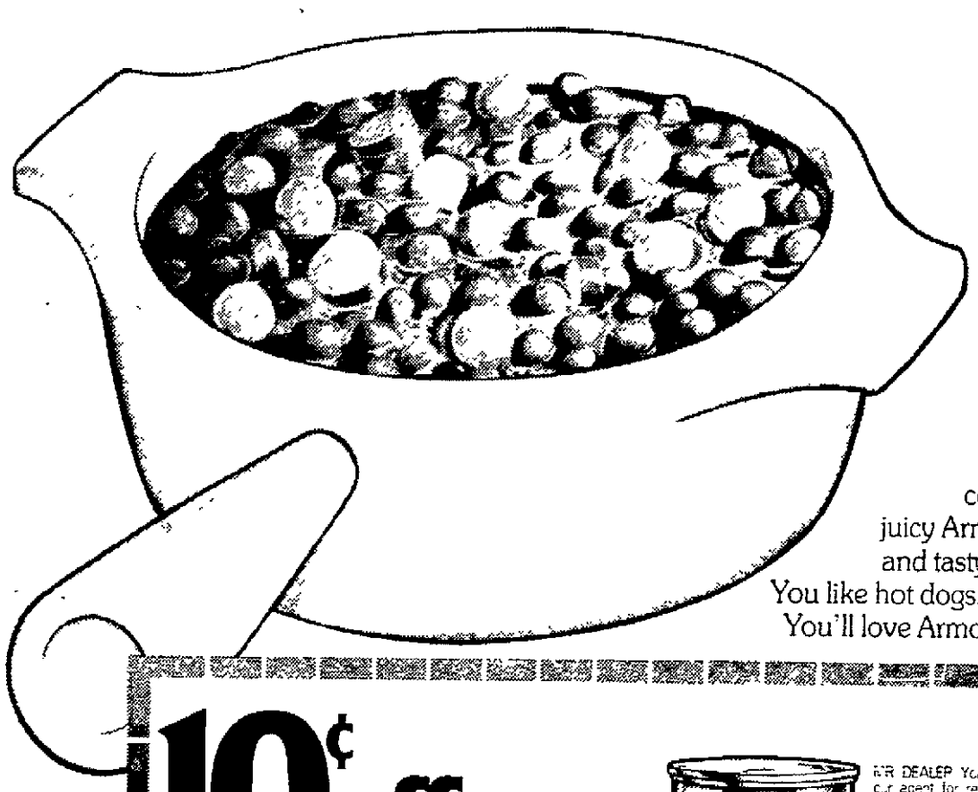

The bank director escaped through a back door and beckoned a traffic policeman who ordered the bandits to surrender. They shot and killed him.

A squad car rushed to the bank in time to fire at the bandits who had released the hostages and were trying to escape.

Police said two bandits were killed as the trio ran down the street.

Police said the wounded included one of their men, in critical condition; an employee of the bank, and two passers-by. The third bandit surrendered.

NU Regents To Consider Operations, Capital Construction Budget

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The University of Nebraska Board of Regents will consider operations and capital construction budget requests for 1975-76, and NU's written Affirmative Action Plan, at a public meeting Saturday in Scottsbluff.

The regents will meet at 9:30 a.m. in the J. G. Elliott Building on the former Hiram Scott College, now the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Panhandle Station.

Friday afternoon, the regents and NU staff members will tour the station facilities, followed by 5 p.m. meetings of the regents finance, and property and building committees. Informal board discussions will begin at 8 p.m.

Building Dedication

After the public meeting Saturday, the regents will participate in an 11:30 a.m. ceremony dedicating the Library-Science Building of the former college, named by the board in memory of the late J. G. Elliott, long-time board member of Scottsbluff.

The Affirmative Action Plan will contain equal employment opportunity goals and the timetables for NU to accomplish them.

In system-wide business items, the board will act on naming the NU System Building at 3835 Holdrege in Lincoln, and programs leading to master of arts, science and philosophy degrees in life sciences.

The board will authorize acceptance by NU of $2.2 million in gifts and grants received from June 26 through Aug. 12, of which the NU System will receive $17,530; UNL, $1,420,433, and NU Medical Center at Omaha, $830,913.

Divide Department

Duane Acker, vice chancellor of the UNL Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, will propose the regents divide the present Department of Horticulture and Forestry, to accommodate growth potential for forestry.

Nebraska is one of few states where the state forestor function is assigned by law to the Board of Regnets, and the state forestor has been a staff member in the horticulture and forestry department.

In the proposed division, the forestor would move up to department chairman "to cut down administrative layers," Acker said.

Teaching, Research, Extension

As well as accommodating growth expected in Forest Service, Corps of Army Engineers and other funds provided for Nebraska service and action programs, the forester would coordinate directly the teaching, research, extension and action programs in forestry.

In business items for UNL, the regents will act on:

— Accepting Patterson Dental Co.'s proposal to furnish Dental College equipment for $51,268.

— Accepting a total of $1.2 million in proposals for the Barkley Center for Communication Disorders: Dwight Nelson Construction Co., $814,960, general contract; Newberg & Bookstrom, $244,923, mechanical; Brite-way Electric, $128,317, electrical; and O'Keefe Elevator Co., $34,777, elevator.

— Accepting a total of $913,284 in proposals for the Animal Health Diagnostic Wing: Sampson Construction Co., $469,000, general contract; Newberg & Bookstrom, $234,914, mechanical; OK Electric, $124,400, electrical; and Pigott Inc., $84,970, laboratory furniture.

— Accepting a $769,127 proposal by Ernest/Spencer Engineering Co. to build an addition to the feed mill facilities at the Mead Field Laboratory.

— Authorizing bids and sale of 240 acres (to be sold in parcels of 40-80 acres each) on the agronomy farm at the northwest corner of 84th & Havelock Ave.

— Authorizing NU officials to negotiate with Kansas State University for a reciprocal agreement to exchange veterinary medicine and dental students.

The regents will consider a recommendation to appoint Dr. Robert E. Stepp Jr. director of the UNL Barkely Center, which provides facilities for teaching, research and clinical work with the acoustically handicapped and those with speech defects.

Barkley Estate Gift

The center on the UNL east campus is being financed by a gift from the estate of the late William E. Barkley, Lincoln.

The center will house operations of the university Speech and Pathology and Audiology Division, Special Education and the Educational Psychology Clinic, and the Specialized Office for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing. Stepp is director of the latter.

The regents will act on a contract between the board and the U.S. Office of Education to provide $337,697 for the Specialized Office under Stepp's direction. The office will replace the current Midwest Regional Media Center for the Deaf.

In other UNL personnel actions, the regents will act on recommendations to appoint:

— Dr. Larry K. Andrews, Teachers College secondary education professor and College of Arts and Sciences English professor, to acting assistant dean for graduate students.

— Dr. Lowell E. Moser, associate professor of agronomy, to Agronomy Department vice chairman for instruction.

— Dr. Wally Moline, Extension forage specialist, to Agronomy Department Extension vice chairman.

— Marie Arnot, now with the State Department of Economic Development, to coordinator of community development programs and associate professor of community and regional planning for the Community Resource and Research Center, in the Architecture College.

Hans Brisch will be recommended for appointment as NU System assistant vice president for academic affairs, and the regents are also expected to confirm four State University of Nebraska (SUN) project learning center coordinators: Don L. Bohmont, Judith L. McDonald, Curtis B. Siemers and Paul D. Wilmot.

To Name Zangari

The regents will be asked to approve naming Dominic J. Zangari, informal education superviser of Extension Division programs, as district coordinator of continuing education with the NU Extension Division at the Scottsbluff Panhandle Station.

For the NU Medical Center, the regenst are expected to:

— Name Perry G. Rigby, professor of medicine, Medical and Educational Administration chairman, and acting director of the School of Allied Health Professions, to dean of the College of Medicine.

— Recommend dissolving the Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Department.

— Approve a contract between the center's Obstetrics and Gynecology Department and the State Health Department for $139,500 for a maternal health and family planning project.

University of Nebraska-Omaha Chancellor Ronald W. Roskens will recommend the regents:

— Appoint Thomas Gouttierre director of the Afghanistan Studies and Research Program and UNO interim dean of international affairs.

— Appoint two new departmental chairpersons in the UNO College of Education: Dr. William Pink, to head the Educational Foundations Department, and Dr. Robert Butler, the Counseling and Guidance Department.

— Appoint Dr. Orville Menard assistant dean of the UNO College of Arts and Sciences. Menard is now professor of political science.

— Approve a purchase contract for office furniture for the new UNO Classroom-Office Building to Educational and Institutional Cooperative, the lowest bidder at $91,419.

DAMAGE ESTIMATED AT $500,000 . . . fire leaves only shell of building.

Satellite Club Fire Puzzles Officials

The fire that caused an estimated $500,000 damage to the Satellite Super Club is still under investigation, according to Fire Inspector Jerry McGinn.

McGinn said officials are puzzled at how rapidly the fire swept through the structure at 32nd and Cornhusker Hwy. after apparently starting in an office area.

"We're just lucky it wasn't a Tammy Wynette or Buck Owens night," McGinn said. If there had been a large crowd in the club, he said, "someone probably would have died."

There was about 65 people, including employes, in the club when the fire broke out about 11 p.m. Monday night, McGinn said.

Fire Chief Dallas Johnson said that it took 50 to 75 firemen about 1½ hours to bring the blaze under control.

Firemen were at the scene all night and some were still present Tuesday afternoon to insure that no more flames broke out.

Other firemen were pumping out more than a foot of water from the club's basement that accumulated during fire fighting efforts.

Police officers were also stationed at the scene Tuesday to control sightseers.

Owner of the club, Oscar Mueller of Grand Island, said at the scene Tuesday afternoon that the drive from his home to Lincoln was "like going to a funeral."

Mueller said he has made no decision on what will be done with the site. The walls of the club, which held up to 2,000 people, are still standing.

A portion of the roof, however, caved in. Mueller said beams in the area were part of the original Town and Country Club and were made of wood.

Other ceiling beams, installed during remodeling, were steel.

India, China In Dispute Over Sikkim

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India and China broke into open dispute Tuesday over Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's move to absorb the tiny kingdom of Sikkim on their Himalayan border.

The Chinese Communist Party organ, People's Daily, said Mrs. Gandhi's plan to make Sikkim an "associate" of the Indian Union amounted to making it an Indian colony.

"This flagrant act of colonialist expansion is just the same as that of the old-line colonialists," the article said. "The Chinese people strongly denounce this despicable act by the Indian government."

Indian Foreign Ministry officials replied that relations between India and Sikkim "do not concern anyone else," in effect telling Peking to keep out of the matter.

Sour relations between India and China are one factor in Mrs. Gandhi's desire to ensure Indian control over the 2,818-square-mile kingdom lodged between India, Nepal and Chinese-ruled Tibet.

India and China fought a brief border war in 1962 about 300 miles east of Sikkim. Indian and Chinese soldiers still face each other only feet apart at the 14,000-foot-high Nathu Pass only 40 miles from Gangtok, the Sikkimese capital.

Reports from Katmandu said some Nepali legislators also viewed the Indian move with "grave concern" and voiced their feelings in a closed session of the National Assembly.

Indian Foreign Minister Swaran Singh introduced the constitutional amendment Monday to make Sikkim an associate of the Indian Union, giving it two members in the Indian Parliament and incorporating it into Indian national planning.

Mrs. Gandhi is reported determined to get the amendment passed during the current parliamentary session, due to end this week.

The Sikkkimese king, or chogyal, is flying to New Delhi on Wednesday and is expected to plead with Mrs. Gandhi personally for delay.

The chogyal, Palden Thondup Namgyal, sent her two messages over the weekend accusing India of trying to integrate his kingdom at the cost of its national identity and without consulting its 200,000 inhabitants.

Under the new constitution adopted in July, the monarch was stripped of absolute powers, making him little more than a figurehead.

The constitution was forced on him by an assembly chosen this spring in Sikkim's first popular elections. The balloting was organized by Indian officials who have been virtually running the nation since April 1973, when the king had to call on India to restore order following antiroyalist rioting.

Mozambique Liberation Front, Portugal To Talk

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Portugal and the Mozambique Liberation Front will begin formal talks Thursday in the Zambian capital of Lusaka, the front's leader, Samora Machel, said.

There was no immediate comment from Portugal.

"We are not going to Lusaka to negotiate independence," Machel said. "The purpose is to establish the quickest mechanism for the transfer of power to the people of Mozambique."

The front has stated that before negotiations could begin the Portuguese would have to agree to these three points: the right of the people of Mozambique to independence; to recognize the front as the sole legitimate representative of the people of Mozambique, and to agree to negotiations for the purpose of working out the mechanics of the transfer of power.

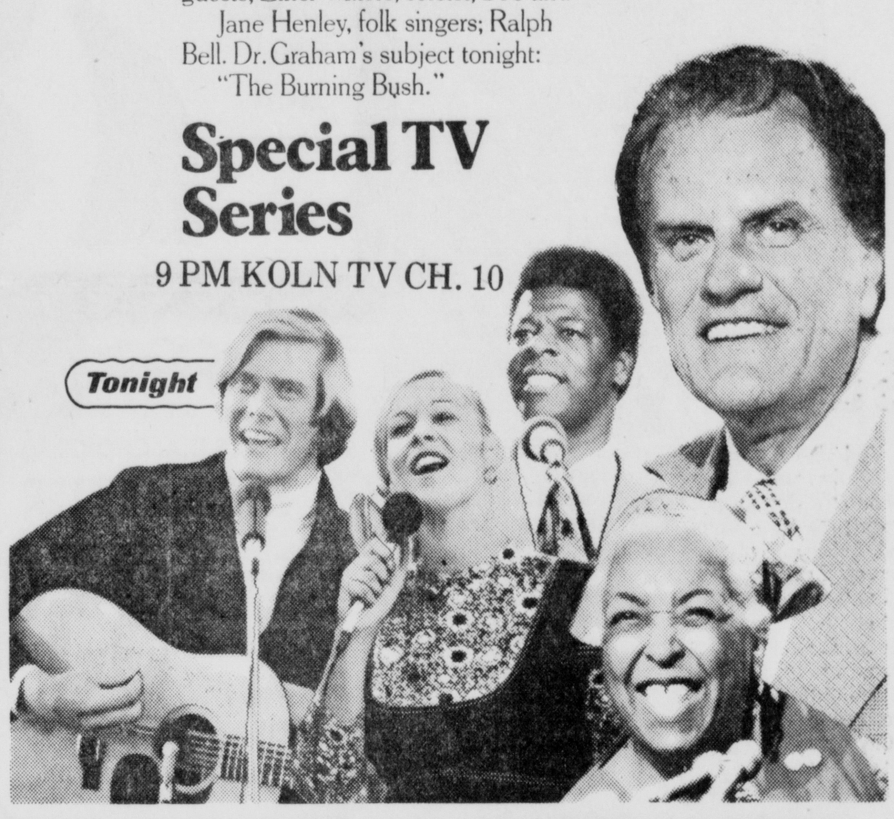

The front has been waging a war with Portugal for independence for the last 10 years.

HOW WE HEAR

Without hearing, there would be no civilization — for there would be no speech, no written word, no sound.

The human ear receives sound waves at the eardrum, which vibrates and transmits these vibrations through tiny bones in the middle ear to a reservoir of liquid in the inner ear. There, miniscule waves are created which are sensed by some 25,000 nerve endings which convert and transmit them as electrical impulses along the 6th nerve to the brain, where they are interpreted as meaningful sounds. Man's hearing must be conserved, protected and aided when necessary, if he is to maintain a useful and happy role in life.

Black Horse Handler Sometimes Bitter

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

If Frank Dixon could rewrite history, he would probably leave a few extra chapers in the books for blacks.

Maybe he could even find space for a few paragraphs about himself and his family.

Dixon is the only black man in the country who can handle a six-horse hitch. He's also the only black certified horse judge in the Midwest.

The grandson of a slave, Dixon was born and raised on a farm in Fayette County. Iowa. His grandmother on his mother's side homesteaded there in 1858.

Right In Middle

There were 13 kids in Dixon's family and he was right in the middle, number seven.

"It was rough but it was probably good for us," he said.

Between 1918 and 1937, Dixon and his brother farmed 480 acres with horses.

"The horse business is just a way of life with me," he said. "I never have liked tractors. I've always preferred horses.

"I can remember when I first started in school. I'd catch my father at the end of the field so I could drive the horses. Heck I've been driving horses since I was a little tyke, six or seven years old."

Now, at 64, Dixon handles horses only once or twice a year, usually at State Fair time. Joe Allen, a Belgian owner from Cozad, hires him to drive his six-horse hitch in Fair competition.

'Nothing New'

"This is nothing new for me," he said. "I used to show our Belgians a lot for fairs. At one time we owned 42 and we raised every one of them ourselves."

In the show ring, Dixon is known far and wide as one of the best.

But outside the ring, he said he has to double his efforts to prove his abilities.

He admitted he's sometimes bitter about the way blacks have fared in history books as well as Hollywood's versions.

"If you take a look at the history of America, you'll see that what they printed is what they wanted to hear," he said. "When I was going to school, all I learned was what (George Washington) Carver did with peanuts.

STAR PHOTO

DIXON . . . might leave a few extra chapters for blacks.

"Sometimes it can really bother ya," he said.

"When they took the black man into slavery, they took away his manhood and they've never given it back."

Dixon knows all too well the story of slavery in America.

"My grandfather only talked about slavery three times," he said. "If he started in the morning, he'd cry himself to sleep that night."

Dixon said he still remembers the welts his grandfather wore on his back until he died at age 85.

"They'd tie him to a log and beat him," he said. "Then they'd run a cat up and down his back and rub salt into his wounds . . .

'Getting Farther Behind'

"People try to say things are changing a lot, but as fast as the world is changing, we're getting farther and farther behind."

After a heart attack in 1960, Dixon took a job as a college counselor and minority recruiter for the vocational-technical school at Waterloo, Iowa.

Until then, he said, "I really didn't know what discrimination was."

In his words: Blacks are the last to get jobs and what they get are the hardest and with the worst pay.

"Blacks have been told all their lives what to do and how to do it," he said. "I'm just thankful I learned self-worth and independence when I was growing up on a farm.

"I don't know what would have happened to me if I hadn't been brought up under those conditions."

Lincoln Public Schools 1st-Day Enrollment Dips

Supt. John Prasch reported first-day total enrollment in the Lincoln Public Schools Tuesday — 28,286 — is down 769 from the first day of classes last year.

While the 2,095 total of kindergarteners represents a decrease of four children compared to school's opening last fall, early projections placed the total at 2,130, Prasch said.

Because the kindergarten class is the least predictable, projections on the same basis may have been overestimated throughout the grades, he said.

"We usually pick up quite a bit after the first day," Prasch said, noting, that number will probably be fewer than in the past because school began a week later this fall.

Prasch said the number of primary grade and senior high students is "down a little" and junior high enrollees are "fairly close" to the number that started in 1973-74.

In grades one through six, 12,289 youngsters began classes Tuesday. The senior high schools reported 6,430 students and the junior highs, 6,803.

The total count reflects nine home-bound students throughout the grades, and includes 529 special education and 140 Head Start students served by the public schools.

Prasch said the schools will take a second telephone count on Friday and make an official count on Sept. 27.

Laubach Tutors Illiterate

World Literacy Day observances this Sunday will center on international tutoring by Laubach Literacy, Inc., volunteers, according to Jeanne Adams, president of the Lincoln chapter, Nebraska Council of Literacy.

A film, "Response to Crisis: Laubach Literacy in Action," will be shown at 2:30 p.m., at the First United Methodist Church.

Laubach, headquartered in Syracuse, N.Y., has tutors in Canada, Mexico, Panama, Columbia, Brazil, India, Rhodesia, Afghanistan and Jordan's West Bank. In some of those countries, Mrs. Adams said, 40-80% of the populations are illiterate.

Laubach works abroad as it does in the United States, including Nebraska, she said.

Chapters in Omaha, Lincoln, Bellevue, Plattsmouth, Alliance and Hastings organized to reach the approximately 41,000 functionally illiterate Nebraskans, Omaha organizer Ruth Chambers said.

Those are people whose inability to read or write inhibits their daily life and work, she said.

She said many of them are Indian, black or foreign-born wives and children of Air Force men stationed at Offutt Air Base in Bellevue.

Mrs. Taylor said tutors organize some classes, but mostly they arrange to meet students in churches or community centers for individual lessons.

More Expensive Facade Picked For Twin Garages

The State Building Commission Tuesday opted for the more esthetic, although more expensive, facade for the twin parking garages for the State Office Building.

At the suggestion of Gov. J. James Exon, the commission chose a textured limestone-cement finish over a more conventional painted cement finish.

The textured finish will cost an additional $178,000, it was estimated.

Exon said the textured finish would cost less to maintain and would be more in keeping with the other buildings located on the 15th St. Mall.

Construction on the $20 million project is just beginning and should be completed sometime in 1977.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Scrutiny Of Goals, Policies Panel Begins

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln's City Council began skirting the edges of the Goals and Policies Committee controversy Tuesday.

The Goals and Policies Committee was organized to give citizens input into city planning procedures. The controversy surrounds the committee's proposed by-laws.

City council members looked at the by-laws but took no action because they want more information on two proposals, adopted by a majority vote at the Goals and Policies Committee's August meeting.

One proposal urges a 15 to 25-member executive board to oversee the group.

The second proposal deals with the voting procedures by which those board members would be elected.

Proposal Rejected

Board members would not have to represent a geographic and socio-economic mix of the community, the by-laws state. At the August meeting, the committee had rejected proposals asking that type of representation.

And in electing members to the board, each committee member could cast as many votes for one nominee as there were seats on the board.

The cumulative voting procedure was defended Tuesday by committee member Bob Peterson. He told council members that the procedure would insure that minority views are represented on the executive board.

"It's not a means to take over the whole board," Peterson stated, referring to allegations made after the August meeting that the Goals and Policies Committee has been taken over by special interest groups.

Peterson, president of Peterson Construction Co., acknowledged that there were "many new faces" at that meeting which were missing from previous deliberations. He said the business and building community realized they should be involved in future Goals and Policies discussions.

Councilwomen Helen Boosalis and Sue Bailey questioned the cumulative voting proposal.

Objection Raised

Jackie Herman, of the Near-South Neighborhood Association, objected to the procedure. She charged that citizens would have to become members of an interest group in order to benefit from the voting process.

Boosalis also questioned why the committee rejected the proposal for geographic and socio-economic representation on the executive board.

Realtor Pace Woods Jr. explained that committee members want to achieve such a balance, but questioned the practibility of actually being able to do so.

Herman said she opposed electing board members, but suggested that if the council went that route that legislative boundary lines be used to form election districts.

Councilmen Max Denney and Steve Cook suggested that an alternative would be to elect some board members and appoint the rest.

The County Board also must adopt the by-laws.

Under the interlocal agreement between the city and county creating the Goals and Policies Committee, the by-laws would go back to the drawing board if rejected by either the council or commissioners.

Property Owners On Mall May Get A Bill From City

Property owners whose land abuts the 15th St. Centennial Mall may finally be getting a bill from the city to help pay for the project — some four years after the mall's construction.

The City Council set the wheels in motion Tuesday which will end up delivering an assessment bill to the property owners. The council authorized the hiring of an appraiser to help determine assessment costs.

A decision on assessing that property, which covers a four-block area, from P to R and from M to K, has been left hanging for almost four years.

Total cost of the mall was $584,112. The remaining balance, about $228,000, would be assessed to abutting property owners.

Council Chairwoman Helen Boosalis said the assessment issue became clouded because the city thought it had informal agreements with some property owners. Under those informal agreements the telephone company and several insurance companies agreed to help foot the bill for the mall's construction, she said.

City Atty. Dick Wood also said the city was forced to condemn some land because several property owners did not want to sell their property to the city.

Wood warned the council that any action assessing costs to property owners may result in some legal battles. He said that the employment of an appraiser not only would help the city assess the property, but would be an "expert witness" in a lawsuit.

Estimated cost of hiring an appraiser was set at $5,000.

Except for the $228,000 balance, the mall income came from:

—$40,000 from the Nebraska Centennial Fund.

—$39,986 from a federal grant.

—$914 from the American Legion, for the eternal light.

—$30,467 from the Woods Charitable Foundation, for the fountains.

—$87,000 from the street construction fund.

—$180,700 from the H. J. Winnett trust.

—$10 from an anonymous doner.

—$4,998 from interest on the income taken in.

Council OKs Hiring Of Required Planner

The City Council took the first step Tuesday to help Lincoln obtain federal dollars to redevelop neighborhoods when it authorized the hiring of a planner in the Community Development Department.

The planner would help the department prepare plans for neighborhood improvement projects which would be undertaken with $500,000 expected next year.

Community Development Director Leo Scherer said the planner also would help formulate a three-year plan outlining how and where federal funds would be spent.

One Of Requirements

That three-year plan is just one of the requirements which must be met before any dollars are forthcoming from Washington, D.C.

The city also must have a program to eliminate or prevent slums and blight, a housing assistance plan, comply with civil rights legislation and provide for citizen participation, Scherer said.

Scherer said officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) told him in Kansas City last week that the rules and regulations governing the program should be in final form by mid-November.

One thing Scherer did learn from HUD officials is that Lincoln's proposed Centrum project might not qualify for community development dollars.

And if the Centrum did qualify, it would be placed at the bottom of the list since HUD is stressing neighborhood redevelopment projects.

Funds Hoped For

Several council members previously had voiced hope that the $7.4 million Centrum could be partially financed with those federal dollars.

The Centrum is a proposed parking garage and retail merchandising complex to be built in the block from 11th to 12th, N to O.

Scherer said Lincoln could receive up to $500,000 as of Jan. 1, 1975 and additional, unspecified amounts for the next five years.

Scherer and a number of other department heads will oversee the application process.

The city can expect to receive up to $4.3 million in HUD dollars over the next five or six years to fight urban decay as a result of a housing and community development bill signed into law by President Ford last month.

President's Life Normal—Almost

New York (AP) — Life in the White House is the same as it was in the past, Betty Ford says. But President Ford doesn't toast his own muffins in the morning any more.

"We're just having a normal family life as we've always had," the President's wife adds.

Burned Boy Shows Slight Improvement

Omaha (AP) — A 7-year-old Iowa boy burned at his home last Wednesday has improved from critical to serious condition at an Omaha hospital.

Attendants said Todd Kirk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Kirk of Beebeetown, made progress over the Labor Day weekend.

The boy was burned while playing in the garage of his home with his four-year-old brother Tadd. One of the boys apparently lit a match and dropped it into a paint thinner can, igniting Todd's clothing.

The boy suffered burns over more than 40 per cent of his body. His mother said nerves in Todd's legs were badly burned and his legs are numb. She said doctors have said he should walk again.

Doctors told the Kirks also that there son would be in intensive care until at least until the end of October "and they'll try to get him home for Christmas."

Omaha friends of the couple have organized a fund drive to help defray the more than $30,000 expected in medical expenses.

Improvement Project Priority List Asked

City lawmakers directed the Public Works Department Tuesday to set up a priority list of improvement projects which can be financed by the city.

That action culminated several weeks of discussion over high interest rates on municipal bonds which have temporarily halted construction of new water, sanitary sewer, paving and ornamental lighting districts.

Current interest rates exceed the 6% limitation imposed by the City Charter.

The council authorized Obering to proceed with $1.5 million worth of projects now under construction and to establish a rating list for some $2.8 million worth of projects now on the drawing boards.

Sanitary sewer and water districts will be given top priority, Obering said, to protect public health.

That same rating system will be applied to some $834,000 worth of improvement districts which have been created by the City Council. Obering has been holding up further council action ordering those districts constructed pending a decision on the financing question.

In an effort to overcome the interest rate limitation, the Charter Revision Committee has recommended that the ceiling be lifted. If the council goes along with that recommendation, the issue will be placed on the November ballot.

Obering said a decision was needed since a number of developers are in a dilemna over the situation. Builders do not know whether the council will order improvements constructed in new subdivisions, he said.

Several council members suggested that the city could work with developers to install improvements on a piecemeal basis.

Lincoln General Meets Accreditation Standards

Lincoln General Hospital received notice last week that it has been accredited for two years by the national Joint Commission on Accreditation.

Hospital Administrator W. Robert Brungard said Lincoln General has been accredited since 1958.

The hospital pays the commission $800 to survey it every other year, Brungard said. A doctor and nurse team spent June 20-21, at Lincoln General, he said.

"The survey is one of the best ways to measure hospitals against national standards," Brungard said.

Besides accrediting hospitals that meet minimum standards, he said, the survey teams advise hospital administrators and physicians how to improve treatment or prepare for medical innovations.

Accreditation is acknowledgment that the hospital offers adequate quality and variety of medical treatment, Brungard said.

Lincoln General was commended for "maintaining standards deserving of accreditation and for constant effort in improving the quality of patient care."

Commission members are the American Medical Association, American Hospital Association, American College of Physicians and the American College of Surgeons.

NU Regents To Consider Operations, Capital Construction Budget

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The University of Nebraska Board of Regents will consider operations and capital construction budget requests for 1975-76, and NU's written Affirmative Action Plan, at a public meeting Saturday in Scottsbluff.

The regents will meet at 9:30 a.m. in the J. G. Elliott Building on the former Hiram Scott College, now the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Panhandle Station.

Friday afternoon, the regents and NU staff members will tour the station facilities, followed by 5 p.m. meetings of the regents finance, and property and building committees. Informal board discussions will begin at 8 p.m.

Building Dedication

After the public meeting Saturday, the regents will participate in an 11:30 a.m. ceremony dedicating the Library-Science Building of the former college, named by the board in memory of the late J. G. Elliott, long-time board member of Scottsbluff.

The Affirmative Action Plan will contain equal employment opportunity goals and the timetables for NU to accomplish them.

In system-wide business items, the board will act on naming the NU System Building at 3835 Holdrege in Lincoln, and programs leading to master of arts, science and philosophy degrees in life sciences.

The board will authorize acceptance by NU of $2.2 million in gifts and grants received from June 26 through Aug. 12, of which the NU System will receive $17,530; UNL, $1,420,433, and NU Medical Center at Omaha, $830,913.

Divide Department

Duane Acker, vice chancellor of the UNL Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, will propose the regents divide the present Department of Horticulture and Forestry, to accommodate growth potential for forestry.

Nebraska is one of few states where the state forestor function is assigned by law to the Board of Regnets, and the state forestor has been a staff member in the horticulture and forestry department.

In the proposed division, the forestor would move up to department chairman "to cut down administrative layers," Acker said.

Teaching, Research, Extension

As well as accommodating growth expected in Forest Service, Corps of Army Engineers and other funds provided for Nebraska service and action programs, the forester would coordinate directly the teaching, research, extension and action programs in forestry.

In business items for UNL, the regents will act on:

— Accepting Patterson Dental Co.'s proposal to furnish Dental College equipment for $51,268.

— Accepting a total of $1.2 million in proposals for the Barkley Center for Communication Disorders: Dwight Nelson Construction Co., $814,960, general contract; Newberg & Bookstrom, $244,923, mechanical; Brite-way Electric, $128,317, electrical; and O'Keefe Elevator Co., $34,777, elevator.

— Accepting a total of $913,284 in proposals for the Animal Health Diagnostic Wing: Sampson Construction Co., $469,000, general contract; Newberg & Bookstrom, $234,914, mechanical; OK Electric, $124,400, electrical; and Pigott Inc., $84,970, laboratory furniture.

— Accepting a $769,127 proposal by Ernest/Spencer Engineering Co. to build an addition to the feed mill facilities at the Mead Field Laboratory.

— Authorizing bids and sale of 240 acres (to be sold in parcels of 40-80 acres each) on the agronomy farm at the northwest corner of 84th & Havelock Ave.

— Authorizing NU officials to negotiate with Kansas State University for a reciprocal agreement to exchange veterinary medicine and dental students.

The regents will consider a recommendation to appoint Dr. Robert E. Stepp Jr. director of the UNL Barkely Center, which provides facilities for teaching, research and clinical work with the acoustically handicapped and those with speech defects.

Barkley Estate Gift

The center on the UNL east campus is being financed by a gift from the estate of the late William E. Barkley, Lincoln.

The center will house operations of the university Speech and Pathology and Audiology Division, Special Education and the Educational Psychology Clinic, and the Specialized Office for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing. Stepp is director of the latter.

The regents will act on a contract between the board and the U.S. Office of Education to provide $337,697 for the Specialized Office under Stepp's direction. The office will replace the current Midwest Regional Media Center for the Deaf.

In other UNL personnel actions, the regents will act on recommendations to appoint:

— Dr. Larry K. Andrews, Teachers College secondary education professor and College of Arts and Sciences English professor, to acting assistant dean for graduate students.

— Dr. Lowell E. Moser, associate professor of agronomy, to Agronomy Department vice chairman for instruction.

— Dr. Wally Moline, Extension forage specialist, to Agronomy Department Extension vice chairman.

— Marie Arnot, now with the State Department of Economic Development, to coordinator of community development programs and associate professor of community and regional planning for the Community Resource and Research Center, in the Architecture College.

Hans Brisch will be recommended for appointment as NU System assistant vice president for academic affairs, and the regents are also expected to confirm four State University of Nebraska (SUN) project learning center coordinators: Don L. Bohmont, Judith L. McDonald, Curtis B. Siemers and Paul D. Wilmot.

To Name Zangari

The regents will be asked to approve naming Dominic J. Zangari, informal education superviser of Extension Division programs, as district coordinator of continuing education with the NU Extension Division at the Scottsbluff Panhandle Station.

For the NU Medical Center, the regenst are expected to:

— Name Perry G. Rigby, professor of medicine, Medical and Educational Administration chairman, and acting director of the School of Allied Health Professions, to dean of the College of Medicine.

— Recommend dissolving the Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Department.

— Approve a contract between the center's Obstetrics and Gynecology Department and the State Health Department for $139,500 for a maternal health and family planning project.

University of Nebraska-Omaha Chancellor Ronald W. Roskens will recommend the regents:

— Appoint Thomas Gouttierre director of the Afghanistan Studies and Research Program and UNO interim dean of international affairs.

— Appoint two new departmental chairpersons in the UNO College of Education: Dr. William Pink, to head the Educational Foundations Department, and Dr. Robert Butler, the Counseling and Guidance Department

— Appoint Dr. Orville Menard assistant dean of the UNO College of Arts and Sciences. Menard is now professor of political science

— Approve a purchase contract for office furniture for the new UNO Classroom-Office Building to Educational and Institutional Cooperative, the lowest bidder at $91,419.

DAMAGE ESTIMATED AT $500,000 . . . fire leaves only shell of building.

Satellite Club Fire Puzzles Officials

The fire that caused an estimated $500,000 damage to the Satellite Super Club is still under investigation, according to Fire Inspector Jerry McGinn.

McGinn said officials are puzzled at how rapidly the fire swept through the structure at 32nd and Cornhusker Hwy. after apparently starting in an office area.

"We're just lucky it wasn't a Tammy Wynette or Buck Owens night," McGinn said. If there had been a large crowd in the club, he said, "someone probably would have died."

There was about 65 people, including employes, in the club when the fire broke out about 11 p.m. Monday night, McGinn said.

Fire Chief Dallas Johnson said that it took 50 to 75 firemen about 1½ hours to bring the blaze under control.

Firemen were at the scene all night and some were still present Tuesday afternoon to insure that no more flames broke out.

Other firemen were pumping out more than a foot of water from the club's basement that accumulated during fire fighting efforts.

Police officers were also stationed at the scene Tuesday to control sightseers.

Owner of the club, Oscar Mueller of Grand Island, said at the scene Tuesday afternoon that the drive from his home to Lincoln was "like going to a funeral."

Mueller said he has made no decision on what will be done with the site. The walls of the club, which held up to 2,000 people, are still standing.

A portion of the roof, however, caved in. Mueller said beams in the area were part of the original Town and Country Club and were made of wood.

Other ceiling beams, installed during remodeling, were steel.

India, China In Dispute Over Sikkim

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India and China broke into open dispute Tuesday over Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's move to absorb the tiny kingdom of Sikkim on their Himalayan border.

The Chinese Communist Party organ, People's Daily, said Mrs. Gandhi's plan to make Sikkim an "associate" of the Indian Union amounted to making it an Indian colony.

"This flagrant act of colonialist expansion is just the same as that of the old-line colonialists," the article said. "The Chinese people strongly denounce this despicable act by the Indian government."

Indian Foreign Ministry officials replied that relations between India and Sikkim "do not concern anyone else," in effect telling Peking to keep out of the matter.

Sour relations between India and China are one factor in Mrs. Gandhi's desire to ensure Indian control over the 2,818-square-mile kingdom lodged between India, Nepal and Chinese-ruled Tibet.

India and China fought a brief border war in 1962 about 300 miles east of Sikkim. Indian and Chinese soldiers still face each other only feet apart at the 14,000-foot-high Nathu Pass only 40 miles from Gangtok, the Sikkimese capital.

Reports from Katmandu said some Nepali legislators also viewed the Indian move with "grave concern" and voiced their feelings in a closed session of the National Assembly.

Indian Foreign Minister Swaran Singh introduced the constitutional amendment Monday to make Sikkim an associate of the Indian Union, giving it two members in the Indian Parliament and incorporating it into Indian national planning.

Mrs. Gandhi is reported determined to get the amendment passed during the current parliamentary session, due to end this week.

The Sikkkimese king, or chogyal, is flying to New Delhi on Wednesday and is expected to plead with Mrs. Gandhi personally for delay.

The chogyal, Palden Thondup Namgyal, sent her two messages over the weekend accusing India of trying to integrate his kingdom at the cost of its national identity and without consulting its 200,000 inhabitants.

Under the new constitution adopted in July, the monarch was stripped of absolute powers, making him little more than a figurehead.

The constitution was forced on him by an assembly chosen this spring in Sikkim's first popular elections. The balloting was organized by Indian officials who have been virtually running the nation since April 1973, when the king had to call on India to restore order following antiroyalist rioting.

Mozambique Liberation Front, Portugal To Talk

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Portugal and the Mozambique Liberation Front will begin formal talks Thursday in the Zambian capital of Lusaka, the front's leader, Samora Machel, said.

There was no immediate comment from Portugal.

"We are not going to Lusaka to negotiate independence," Machel said. "The purpose is to establish the quickest mechanism for the transfer of power to the people of Mozambique."

The front has stated that before negotiations could begin the Portuguese would have to agree to these three points: the right of the people of Mozambique to independence; to recognize the front as the sole legitimate representative of the people of Mozambique, and to agree to negotiations for the purpose of working out the mechanics of the transfer of power.

The front has been waging a war with Portugal for independence for the last 10 years.

HOW WE HEAR

Without hearing, there would be no civilization — for there would be no speech, no written word, no sound.

The human ear receives sound waves at the eardrum, which vibrates and transmits these vibrations through tiny bones in the middle ear to a reservoir of liquid in the inner ear. There, miniscule waves are created which are sensed by some 25,000 nerve endings which convert and transmit them as electrical impulses along the 8th nerve to the brain, where they are interpreted as meaningful sounds. Man's hearing must be conserved, protected and aided when necessary, if he is to maintain a useful and happy role in life.

Youthful Wildcats Hope To Avoid Cellar

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Manhattan, Kan. — Kansas State is pinning its hopes of avoiding the predicted last place finish in the Big 8 conference on a veteran quarterback, an older offensive line and a lot of promising young players.

Steve Grogan, the 6-4, 201-pound senior who operates the Veer-T offense is coach Vince Gibson's leader of an offensive unit that lost eight starters from a Wildcat team that finished tied with Iowa State and Colorado for last place a year ago.

"We think Grogan is a great quarterback," Gibson told the Big Eight skywriters here Tuesday. "Pro scouts who have been through here are positive he will be a first round draft choice. I think he'll be the No. 1 draft choice. Now, you guys go write a column that I said that and get (Dave) Humm mad at me."

Gibson, the dean of Big Eight coaches even though he's been the K-State Leader only eight years, says Grogan's weight is just 201 pounds, but that he could easily carry 225.

"He's a Bobby Douglas type, but a lot better thrower," Gibson said.

Douglas is the former Kansas quarterback who now toils for the Chicago Bears.

Grogan, an excellent student who was an academic all-Big Eight choice last year had a good spring practice and is having a great fall," Gibson mentioned. "His biggest improvement has been in his passing arm. Even though he ranked third in conference play as a passer last season his completion percentage was only .439 and he had more interceptions (15) than any league passer. So there was room for improvement."

BIG 8 Skywriters

Grogan accounted for all five touchdowns in a scrimmage last Saturday, running for two and throwing for three more.

The only other returning starters are wide receiver Bud Peterson, and guard Bob Brandt, both seniors. The rest of the offensive line is composed of letterman, but the backup jobs are held predominately by sophomores.

"We're going to be playing a lot of young people," Gibson said. "The defense will be young with five sophomore starters including a pair of linebackers.

"(Theopilis) Bryant and (Carl) Pennington are super football players," Gibson said, "Playboy magazine rates Bryant the second best sophomore in the nation behind only Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh. There is no better pair of linebackers in America size-wise and speed-wise."

The Wildcats' defense, however, is suspect because of the absence of a standout middle guard. That spot is now being handled by sophomore Roy Shine, who was moved there after being K-State's best freshman lineman a year ago.

Gibson lost his top two ball-carriers last season, but that doesn't worry him. "We have good talent at running backs and we've not had as good an outside receiving threat as we have now."

The running jobs are held by letter man Dave Specht and Regan Steiner, who together ran just 30 times for 109 yards last season.

Backing them up are sophomore hopefuls L. T. Edwards, Roscoe Scobey, and Greg Whelan. Scobey was leading JV rusher in 1973.

Gibson thinks he has a couple of good young prospects at quarterback should Grogan be injured.

One is Tom Merrifield, a sophomore who was redshirted last year. The other Arthur Bailey, who broke his arm last fall, was sent home, and got a hardship ruling from the Big Eight making him a second semester freshman now.

"We think this Bailey kid is going to be a super player," Gibson said. "He has as much ability as any kid we've ever had here and by late in the season we think Bailey will be a great player."

Jim Burrow . . . Nebraska Find, Mississippi Reject.

'Too Small' Burrow Surprises Coaches

By RANDY YORK

The scenario which landed Jim Burrow in Lincoln, Nebraska, is fraught with all the elements of a good story with a happy ending, but based on a bad experience.

Nebraska football coaches are still wondering how such a good defensive back could have landed in their den.

Especially when Burrow experienced such a good freshman football season at Mississippi in the Southeastern Conference.

Burrow, a junior promoted to Black Shirt status this week at left cornerback, was a walkon at Ole Miss. After all, he was only a 5-10, 150-pound quarterback when he graduated from Amory, Miss., High School.

But he started all five freshman games at Ole Miss against LSU, Auburn, Vanderbilt, Memphis State and Mississippi State. "I understood if I did well I'd get a scholarship," he recalls.

Glenn Cannon, an all-American defensive back when Archie Manning played quarterback at Mississippi, was Burrow's freshman coach. He lobbied for Burrow, maintaining he deserved a scholarship.

But Mississippi head coach Billy Kinard said no dice. Burrow was too small, he insisted. The case was pleaded again. And Kinard balked again.

Then Nebraska assistant coach Jim Walden, now at Miami, entered the picture. Walden had coached Burrow when he was a freshman and sophomore at Amory.

"He told me Nebraska would give me a scholarship if Ole Miss wouldn't," explains Burrow. "I told them that, but they still didn't want to give me one."

Burrow admits he wanted to stay at Mississippi. His roots were there. Amory was only 70 miles from Oxford. But he wasn't about to turn down a scholarship to a power like Nebraska.

"I didn't jump right on it. That seemed like a long way from home," recalls Burrow. "But I knew in the back of my mind I'd end up here. All I wanted was a chance. Ole Miss didn't want to give me one. Nebraska did."

Nebraska defensive backfield coach Warren Powers is happy to have Burrow's talent, but he says "I can't believe someone could have an athlete like him and refuse to give him a scholarship. He's a player and very coachable. I'm glad we got a chance to pump some new life in him."

Cornhusker defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin is even more explicit in his disbelief of Burrow being a Mississippi reject. According to Kiffin, Kinard (now defensive backfield coach for the Green Bay Packers after being fired at Ole Miss) "must have thought about walkons in college the same as he thinks about free agents in pro football. He doesn't want anything to do with either."

During Burrow's sophomore season as a redshirt at Nebraska, he "was an outstanding scout team quarterback," according to Powers.

Last season, a hamstring injury caused Burrow to miss spring ball. "It nagged him all last season or we might have seen more of him," notes Powers.

Burrow earned a promotion this week, sharing a Black Shirt with Ardell Johnson, "because he's playing well enough to have one," says Powers. "He's looked as good as anyone we have on the corner."

Consequently, Powers is rotating Dave Butterfield, Burrow and Johnson with the intention that all three will see considerable playing time.

"I'm not a big one for alternating around in the secondary," concedes Powers, "but in some situations where people are playing well and are so close to each other, it isn't fair to sit one on the bench."

Burrow being one of the surest tacklers and hardest hitters in the Nebraska secondary also helped him achieve a Black Shirt.

Powers acknowledges that the Cornhuskers will face a lot of run-oriented teams this fall. And with an inexperienced secondary "one of the worst things that scares you is a young kid getting fooled on play action.

"Right now I'm not worried about our athletes," says Powers. "The question that's unanswered is can they play as a unit? I have a feeling they have the teamwork and communication, but it has to be proven under game conditions."

Burrow, who married an Omaha girl this summer, played second team behind Bob Thornton at safety last fall when George Kyros was sidelined with an injury.

But the hamstring injury hurt his progress and he didn't earn a letter. He made the traveling roster only for Kansas State and the Cotton Bowl at Dallas.

His father, assistant superintendent of schools in Amory, drove Jim's uncle, younger brother and two cousins to Manhattan when he found out his son had made Nebraska's traveling team.

"He's a converted Nebraska fan. He really likes it," Burrow says of his father.

The Mississippi native, however, didn't make any phone call when he found out he was a Black Shirt Monday. "I'm not jumping to any conclusions. I want to make sure I keep it," he reasons.

Squirrel Hunting Offers Benefits

By TOM VINT
Outdoor Writer

Early season squirrel hunting does more than simply provide some tasty meals for the hunting outdoorsman. It also helps sharpen the game spotting eye, the shooting eye, gives practice in game stalking and is a fine excuse to enjoy the first hints of fall weather.

I grew up chasing squirrels up a tree. But since coming to Nebraska, I have noted a deficiency in fellow hunters going afield for the bushy-tailed foxes of the woods. Too often too many hunters are in too big a hurry to bag too many squirrels.

One of the real secrets of squirrel hunting is being extremely lazy. Even to the point of taking a break once in a while to sit down on a log. This is my specialty.

If your breathing quickens while walking about for squirrels, just go back to the car. You failed the test.

The slower you move, the less excited you make the squirrels. Try to be observant by moving slow, cover all the angles, all the trees and all the ground, including fences, corn fields, anywhere near trees.

Keep both eyes open. I generally begin my search for game from the ground up. That, of course, is after finding a good wooded draw, grove or windbreak of trees. Wooded riverways are excellent.

If nothing is spotted on the ground, start scanning tree trunks, forks in limbs and trunk, then upward along the tops of the limbs. What you're looking for is something out of place.

To me, out of place on a tree is a break in the silhouette of the limb or trunk. In this case, the break would look like a bump which stops my scan to determine whether the bump is actually a squirrel.

Fox squirrels are appropriately named. They are plenty foxy. They attempt to keep a tree between themselves and the hunter. A slow pace and quiet walking aids a hunter in being able to get a shot at such a critter. Just check behind you regularly while strolling through the woods.

If a squirrel is high in a tree and thinks you don't see it, it will freeze tightly against the limb, making it tougher to see unless you spotted that bump alluded to earlier. A little manuevering on the part of the hunter generally means a reasonably good shot at a stationary target in this instance.

Early season squirrels are tougher due to the leaf covering still on the trees, but for sharpening up the game spotting eye, it can't be beat.

As for what type of cover to look for when squirrel hunting, if I had the option of finding the perfect hunting grounds, it would be a forest of stately old cottonwood trees with a reasonable amount of the grasses below, grazed short enough not to hide a squirrel.

Squirrels will give their own location away by the building leafy nests high in the branches. Spotting substantial numbers of these nests (resembling ball of leaves) means substantial numbers of squirrels. And good hunting.

A slow pace and quiet walking can produce a sighting of the squirrel.

Morgan, Bench Lead Reds By Astros, 7-5

By United Press International

Joe Morgan singled home the go-ahead run in the ninth inning and Johnny Bench delivered an insurance run with a sacrifice fly Tuesday night to give the Cincinnati Reds a 7-5 victory over the Houston Astros.

Pinch-hitter Terry Crowley opened the ninth inning with a walk and moved to third on reliever Ken Forsch's two-base error on a pickoff try. Crowley held third as Pete Rose beat out an infield hit and Morgan followed with a ground single to rightfield.

The Reds, trailing 5-2 at one point, got even in the seventh when Tony Perez lashed a single to rightfield to score two runs.

Lee May slammed his 22nd home run of the season in the fifth inning off starter Clay Kirby to give the Astros a 5-2 lead. The Astros scored four in the first as May drove in one run with a sacrifice fly, Milt May the second with a single and Rader delivered two more with a single.

In other games, New York beat Chicago twice, 2-0, 11-4, St. Louis took a doubleader from Montreal, 5-1 and 8-4, Pittsburgh trimmed Philadelphia 8-2 and Atlanta downed San Diego 7-2.

Jon Matlack pitched a fourhit victory in the opener and the Mets then attacked seven Cub pitchers for 13 hits to complete a doubleheader sweep and run their winning streak to six games, the longest of the season.

Wayne Garrett capped a five-run second game eighth inning uprising by hitting a three-run homer, his 10th of the season and first since Aug. 1.

In the opener, John Milner batted in both New York runs, one with his 19th homer and the other with a first inning single.

Reggie Smith hit two solo homers in the opener and Ken Reitz hit two run-scoring doubles in the second game to lead the Cardinals to a doubleheader sweep of the Expos.

Lou Brock stole his 99th base of the season in the second game and now is just five short of Maury Wills' major league record of 104 steals in a season.

Jim Rooker fired a six-hitter and Richie Zisk's three-run triple keyed a seven-run fifth inning rally which carried the Pirates to a triumph over the Phillies for a sweep of their three-game series.

Rooker, 11-10, also contributed two hits in the fifth inning uprising, driving in two runs. The Pirates have won 11 of their last 13 games and 22 of their last 27, maintaining first place in the National League East while Philadelphia fell seven games back in third place.

Dave Johnson homered for the third game in a row to start the Braves off to a win over the Padres. It was Atlanta's third in a row and 12th win out of 13 games with the Padres.

Johnson, who had homered in both ends of a Labor Day doubleheader Monday, led off for the Braves in the second by belting a homer into the leftfield bullpen.

Knievel Makes Bet With Riggs

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Evel Knievel and Bobby Riggs have a bet for $25,000 that Riggs can't ride from Las Vegas, Nev., to Twin Falls on a mini-bike by Sunday.

According to promoters of the Evel Knievel rocketcycle jump across the Snake River Canyon, tennis hustler Riggs will ride a 200cc Harley Davidson.

Top Rank, Inc., promoters of the Knievel leap, said the two made the bet Tuesday afternoon. The promoters said Riggs will start from Las Vegas Wednesday morning.

Knievel told Riggs, "I can't wait to see you if you get there. You'll have bloodshot eyes."

Knievel contends Riggs won't make it in time for Sunday's jump. "Wait till you see this minibike. This one rides at two miles per hour," Knievel said.

"I'll make it and I'll be right on time to get into that closed circuit telecast of yours," Riggs is said to have countered.

Defending Champion Newcombe Advances

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Defending champion John Newcombe, the scent of victory in his nostrils now that the tournament has entered its second week, Tuesday powered his way into the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open tennis championship where he was joined by two former winners, Arthur Ashe and Ken Rosewall.

Also through to the quarters for the second successive year was India's unseeded Vijay Amritraj, who is headed for another meeting with Rosewall.

Top-seeded Jimmy Connors and the 1971 champion, Stan Smith, along with the other seeds in the top half of the draw, were idle, as were all the girls who play their quarterfinal matches on Wednesday.

Newcombe, the second seed here and twice winner of the title, defeated unseeded Ray Moore of South Africa, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5; Rosewall, the fifth seed who was champion in 1954 and 1970, trimmed 16th seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico, 6-1, 6-7, 7-5, 6-3; Ashe, the eighth seed who won the first Open in 1968, beat ninth seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, 6-7, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5, while Amritraj took his second seeded player, 11th picked Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

After the pressure cooker atmosphere of the first six days of the $271,760 tournament the players had to deal with a brief rain shower, a swirling wind which gusted from time to time and periods of bad light. Under the circumstances, unforced errors were the rule rather than the exception while the players also had to deal with bad bounces from grass courts which resembled cow pastures.

But in the clutch, the men who've already traveled the championship route had the shots to match the conditions, the three former winners all recording their easiest victories of the tournament.

Moore who will play on South Africa's Davis Cup team against Italy in the competition's semifinals, pointed at the court and said, "And they call that a court? This is supposed to be the world's No. 2 tournament, isn't it?"

The grass courts will be dug up at the conclusion of this year's championships and an artifical surface will be laid at the West Side Tennis Club.

Newcombe, the 30-year-old reigning World Championship Tennis champion who has amassed $191,600 this year, said, "the conditions are the worst I can remember, but when I had to do something for a big point, I did it."

Newcombe, grinning broadly, said, "I'm hungry, men. Beating Tony (Roche) in the last round gave me my appetite back."

The great Australian has not played tournament tennis since his defeat by Rosewall at Wimbledon, while he had a slight back injury when the championship started here last Wednesday.

"I mean to defend my title," Newcombe said by way of warning to the top-seeded Connors, the reigning Wimbledon champion.

Amritraj who had little to beat in Riessen who made unforced errors nearly every time he went for a ball, said, "This is my lucky tournament."

The unseeded Indian who will lead India's Davis Cup challenge against Russia, said, "When I play a seeded player, I play all the better. There is no pressure when you meet a fellow who is supposed to beat you."

Amritraj said Riessen played in spurts and appeared more affected by the wind.

Newcombe won a round of applause when he argued with the umpire and insisted a point awarded him be given to Moore. He served a first ball long but it was called an ace. The ball died and Newk refused to accept the point.

The discussion went on for three minutes more before the official gave in and told Newcombe to "take two." Newk then slammed in an ace.

Newcombe broke for 4-2 in the first set and 2-1 in the second. He dropped his serve to open the third set but broke back in the third and again in the 11th before he finished the match with a love game.

Amritraj, 22, broke in the seventh game to go ahead in the first set; for 3-love in the second, while he went ahead to stay at 4-3 in the third set after the opening two games had gone against service.

CBS Inks Pact With Standouts

NEW YORK (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System announced Tuesday it has added Johnny Unitas and Oscar Robertson to its sportscasting team. Both signed long-term contracts but the network did not say for how much or for how long.

Unitas retired recently after a long pro football career with the Baltimore Colts and the San Diego Chargers.

Robertson, a long-time All-Star basketball player, had been having contract squabbles with the Milwaukee Bucks and became a free agent last week when his contract expired and the Bucks didn't offer him a new one.

BIG 8 REPORT

Missouri

Missouri's injury situation improved with the return of first-string quarterback Ray Smith and word that a leg injury sustained by co-captain Scott Pickens was not as bad as had been feared.

Smith, a senior, has been out of practice since suffering an ankle injury Aug. 24. He will carry on limited work while the ankle continues to heal.

Steve Pisarkiewicz, who had been running at No. 2 quarterback until he also injured an ankle Aug. 24, was excused from practice early when soreness developed in the ankle.

He had returned to practice on a limited basis.

Pickens, a senior linebacker, suffered a strained muscle in his upper leg Monday and coach Al Onofrio said the injury was not as serious as first thought.

Kansas

Injuries continued to hound Kansas, forcing Coach Don Fambrough to juggle personnel at key positions.

Ken Saathoff, veteran senior receiver, began the third week of fall drills at the starting wide receiver slot, rather than his tight end post.

Fambrough said Saathoff would continue working at both positions in case flanker Bruce Adams, slowed since the opening day of practice with a hamstring pull, was not able to recover in time for the Jayhawks' season opener against Washington State.

Gregg Hosack, a junior, moved up to Saathoff's vacated tight end spot.

Kansas State

Kansas State coach Vince Gibson said cornerback Henry Lige may be out for a month with a knee injury.

Lige was assuming a second team spot and Gibson indicated the loss was a definite setback.

Oklahoma State

Oklahoma State football coach Jim Stanley said strong safety Joe Avanzini returned to practice after a two week absence.

The Coalgate sophomore has been suffering a pulled back muscle.

Iowa State

Iowa State head coach Earle Bruce said the squad is in good physical condition with no major injuries having been sustained — except for reserve tailback Tom Miller's broken ankle in last Saturday's scrimmage and senior tight end Don Greenwood's early fall back surgery.

Sophomore Al Dixon of East St. Louis, Ill. is running ahead of another sophomore, Glover Rogers, in the scramble for the starting tight end spot, Bruce said.

Daugherty Requests Retirement

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Former Michigan State football coach Duffy Daugherty Tuesday requested early retirement from his position at the university as special assistant to the vice president for development.

Daugherty, 59, who ended a colorful 19-year career as head football coach in 1972, asked that he be permitted to retire with full benefits from the $25,000 a year post effective Sept. 1.

He gave no reason for his action and could not immediately be reached for comment.

A spokesman for the Michigan State athletic department noted that Daugherty has been working as a color commentator for football games with ABC-TV and added, "I'm sure he's got other irons in the fire."

Daugherty worked primarily in a fund-raising capacity for the university.

He was twice named coach of the year, in 1955 and 1965.

Youthful Wildcats Hope To Avoid Cellar

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Manhattan, Kan. — Kansas State is pinning its hopes of avoiding the predicted last place finish in the Big 8 conference on a veteran quarterback, an older offensive line and a lot of promising young players.

Steve Grogan, the 6-4, 201-pound senior who operates the Veer-T offense is coach Vince Gibson's leader of an offensive unit that lost eight starters from a Wildcat team that finished tied with Iowa State and Colorado for last place a year ago.

"We think Grogan is a great quarterback," Gibson told the Big Eight skywriters here Tuesday. "Pro scouts who have been through here are positive he will be a first round draft choice. I think he'll be the No. 1 draft choice. Now, you guys go write a column that I said that and get (Dave) Humm mad at me."

Gibson, the dean of Big Eight coaches even though he's been the K-State Leader only eight years, says Grogan's weight is just 201 pounds, but that he could easily carry 225.

"He's a Bobby Douglas type, but a lot better thrower," Gibson said.

Douglas is the former Kansas quarterback who now toils for the Chicago Bears.

Grogan, an excellent student who was an academic all-Big Eight choice last year had a good spring practice and is having a great fall," Gibson mentioned. "His biggest improvement has been in his passing arm. Even though he ranked third in conference play as a passer last season his completion percentage was only .439 and he had more interceptions (15) than any league passer. So there was room for improvement."

BIG 8 Skywriters

Grogan accounted for all five touchdowns in a scrimmage last Saturday, running for two and throwing for three more.

The only other returning starters are wide receiver Bud Peterson, and guard Bob Brandt, both seniors. The rest of the offensive line is composed of letterman, but the backup jobs are held predominately by sophomores.

"We're going to be playing a lot of young people," Gibson said. "The defense will be young with five sophomore starters including a pair of linebackers.

"(Theopilis) Bryant and (Carl) Pennington are super football players," Gibson said, "Playboy magazine rates Bryant the second best sophomore in the nation behind only Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh. There is no better pair of linebackers in America size-wise and speed-wise."

The Wildcats' defense, however, is suspect because of the absence of a standout middle guard. That spot is now being handled by sophomore Roy Shine, who was moved there after being K-State's best freshman lineman a year ago.

Gibson lost his top two ball-carriers last season, but that doesn't worry him. "We have good talent at running backs and we've not had as good an outside receiving threat as we have now."

The running jobs are held by letter man Dave Specht and Regan Steiner, who together ran just 30 times for 109 yards last season.

Backing them up are sophomore hopefuls L. T. Edwards, Roscoe Scobey, and Greg Whelan. Scobey was leading JV rusher in 1973.

Gibson thinks he has a couple of good young prospects at quarterback should Grogan be injured.

One is Tom Merrifield, a sophomore who was redshirted last year. The other Arthur Bailey, who broke his arm last fall, was sent home, and got a hardship ruling from the Big Eight making him a second semester freshman now.

"We think this Bailey kid is going to be a super player," Gibson said. "He has as much ability as any kid we've ever had here and by late in the season we think Bailey will be a great player."

KSU Thumbnail Sketch

1973 Record — 5-7 over-all; 2-5 in Big Eight, tied for sixth place.

New faces — Offensive guard Floyd Dorsey, tailback Carlos Whitfield, flanker Alfonso Wade, defensive ends Vic Chandler and Perry Viers, defensive tackle Alton Carson, monster Marvin Switzer, placekicker David Chavez.

Strengths — Quarterback, offensive line, linebackers, secondary.

Weaknesses — Inexperienced defense, lack of depth in offensive line, questionable running team, inexperienced receivers.

Probable finish in Big Eight — Eight place.

'Too Small' Burrow Surprises Coaches

By RANDY YORK

The scenario which landed Jim Burrow in Lincoln, Nebraska, is fraught with all the elements of a good story with a happy ending, but based on a bad experience.

Nebraska football coaches are still wondering how such a good defensive back could have landed in their den.

Especially when Burrow experienced such a good freshman football season at Mississippi in the Southeastern Conference.

Burrow, a junior promoted to Black Shirt status this week at left cornerback, was a walkon at Ole Miss. After all, he was only a 5-10, 150-pound quarterback when he graduated from Amory, Miss., High School.

But he started all five freshman games at Ole Miss against LSU, Auburn, Vanderbilt, Memphis State and Mississippi State. "I understood if I did well I'd get a scholarship," he recalls.

Glenn Cannon, an all-American defensive back when Archie Manning played quarterback at Mississippi, was Burrow's freshman coach. He lobbied for Burrow, maintaining he deserved a scholarship.

But Mississippi head coach Billy Kinard said no dice. Burrow was too small, he insisted. The case was pleaded again. And Kinard balked again.

Then Nebraska assistant coach Jim Walden, now at Miami, entered the picture. Walden had coached Burrow when he was a freshman and sophomore at Amory.

"He told me Nebraska would give me a scholarship if Ole Miss wouldn't," explains Burrow. "I told them that, but they still didn't want to give me one."

Burrow admits he wanted to stay at Mississippi. His roots were there. Amory was only 70 miles from Oxford. But he wasn't about to turn down a scholarship to a power like Nebraska.

"I didn't jump right on it. That seemed like a long way from home," recalls Burrow. "But I knew in the back of my mind I'd end up here. All I wanted was a chance. Ole Miss didn't want to give me one. Nebraska did."

Nebraska defensive backfield coach Warren Powers is happy to have Burrow's talent, but he says "I can't believe someone could have an athlete like him and refuse to give him a scholarship. He's a player and very coachable. I'm glad we got a chance to pump some new life in him."

Cornhusker defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin is even more explicit in his disbelief of Burrow being a Mississippi reject. According to Kiffin, Kinard (now defensive backfield coach for the Green Bay Packers after being fired at Ole Miss) "must have thought about walkons in college the same as he thinks about free agents in pro football. He doesn't want anything to do with either."

During Burrow's sophomore season as a redshirt at Nebraska, he "was an outstanding scout team quarterback," according to Powers.

Last season, a hamstring injury caused Burrow to miss spring ball. "It nagged him all last season or we might have seen more of him," notes Powers.

Burrow earned a promotion this week, sharing a Black Shirt with Ardell Johnson, "because he's playing well enough to have one," says Powers. "He's looked as good as anyone we have on the corner."

Consequently, Powers is rotating Dave Butterfield, Burrow and Johnson with the intention that all three will see considerable playing time.

"I'm not a big one for alternating around in the secondary," concedes Powers, "but in some situations where people are playing well and are so close to each other, it isn't fair to sit one on the bench."

Burrow being one of the surest tacklers and hardest hitters in the Nebraska secondary also helped him achieve a Black Shirt.

Powers acknowledges that the Cornhuskers will face a lot of run-oriented teams this fall. And with an inexperienced secondary "one of the worst things that scares you is a young kid getting fooled on play action.

"Right now I'm not worried about our athletes," says Powers. "The question that's unanswered is can they play as a unit? I have a feeling they have the teamwork and communication, but it has to be proven under game conditions."

Burrow, who married an Omaha girl this summer, played second team behind Bob Thornton at safety last fall when George Kyros was sidelined with an injury.

But the hamstring injury hurt his progress and he didn't earn a letter. He made the traveling roster only for Kansas State and the Cotton Bowl at Dallas.

His father, assistant superintendent of schools in Amory, drove Jim's uncle, younger brother and two cousins to Manhattan when he found out his son had made Nebraska's traveling team.

"He's a converted Nebraska fan. He really likes it," Burrow says of his father.

The Mississippi native, however, didn't make any phone call when he found out he was a Black Shirt Monday. "I'm not jumping to any conclusions. I want to make sure I keep it," he reasons.

Squirrel Hunting Offers Benefits

By TOM VINT
Outdoor Writer

Early season squirrel hunting does more than simply provide some tasty meals for the hunting outdoorsman. It also helps sharpen the game spotting eye, the shooting eye, gives practice in game stalking and is a fine excuse to enjoy the first hints of fall weather.

I grew up chasing squirrels up a tree. But since coming to Nebraska, I have noted a deficiency in fellow hunters going afield for the bushy-tailed foxes of the woods. Too often too many hunters are in too big a hurry to bag too many squirrels.

One of the real secrets of squirrel hunting is being extremely lazy. Even to the point of taking a break once in a while to sit down on a log. This is my specialty.

If your breathing quickens while walking about for squirrels, just go back to the car. You failed the test.

The slower you move, the less excited you make the squirrels. Try to be observant by moving slow, cover all the angles, all the trees and all the ground, including fences, corn fields, anywhere near trees.

Keep both eyes open. I generally begin my search for game from the ground up. That, of course, is after finding a good wooded draw, grove or windbreak of trees. Wooded riverways are excellent.

If nothing is spotted on the ground, start scanning tree trunks, forks in limbs and trunk, then upward along the tops of the limbs. What you're looking for is something out of place.

To me, out of place on a tree is a break in the silhouette of the limb or trunk. In this case, the break would look like a bump which stops my scan to determine whether the bump is actually a squirrel.

Fox squirrels are appropriately named. They are plenty foxy. They attempt to keep a tree between themselves and the hunter. A slow pace and quiet walking aids a hunter in being able to get a shot at such a critter. Just check behind you regularly while strolling through the woods.

If a squirrel is high in a tree and thinks you don't see it, it will freeze tightly against the limb, making it tougher to see unless you spotted that bump alluded to earlier. A little manuevering on the part of the hunter generally means a reasonably good shot at a stationary target in this instance.

Early season squirrels are tougher due to the leaf covering still on the trees, but for sharpening up the game spotting eye, it can't be beat.

As for what type of cover to look for when squirrel hunting, if I had the option of finding the perfect hunting grounds, it would be a forest of stately old cottonwood trees with a reasonable amount of the grasses below, grazed short enough not to hide a squirrel.

Squirrels will give their own location away by the building leafy nests high in the branches. Spotting substantial numbers of these nests (resembling ball of leaves) means substantial numbers of squirrels. And good hunting.

A slow pace and quiet walking can produce a sighting of the squirrel.

Morgan, Bench Lead Reds By Astros, 7-5

By United Press International

Joe Morgan singled home the go-ahead run in the ninth inning and Johnny Bench delivered an insurance run with a sacrifice fly Tuesday night to give the Cincinnati Reds a 7-5 victory over the Houston Astros.

Pinch-hitter Terry Crowley opened the ninth inning with a walk and moved to third on reliever Ken Forsch's two-base error on a pickoff try. Crowley held third as Pete Rose beat out an infield hit and Morgan followed with a ground single to rightfield.

The Reds, trailing 5-2 at one point, got even in the seventh when Tony Perez lashed a single to rightfield to score two runs.

Lee May slammed his 22nd home run of the season in the fifth inning off starter Clay Kirby to give the Astros a 5-2 lead. The Astros scored four in the first as May drove in one run with a sacrifice fly, Milt May the second with a single and Rader delivered two more with a single.

In other games, New York beat Chicago twice, 2-0, 11-4, St. Louis took a doubleader from Montreal, 5-1 and 8-4, Pittsburgh trimmed Philadelphia 8-2 and Atlanta downed San Diego 7-2.

Jon Matlack pitched a fourhit victory in the opener and the Mets then attacked seven Cub pitchers for 13 hits to complete a doubleheader sweep and run their winning streak to six games, the longest of the season.

Wayne Garrett capped a five-run second game eighth inning uprising by hitting a three-run homer, his 10th of the season and first since Aug. 1.

In the opener, John Milner batted in both New York runs, one with his 19th homer and the other with a first inning single.

Reggie Smith hit two solo homers in the opener and Ken Reitz hit two run-scoring doubles in the second game to lead the Cardinals to a doubleheader sweep of the Expos.

Lou Brock stole his 99th base of the season in the second game and now is just five short of Maury Wills' major league record of 104 steals in a season.

Jim Rooker fired a six-hitter and Richie Zisk's three-run triple keyed a seven-run fifth inning rally which carried the Pirates to a triumph over the Phillies for a sweep of their three-game series.

Rooker, 11-10, also contributed two hits in the fifth inning uprising, driving in two runs. The Pirates have won 11 of their last 13 games and 22 of their last 27, maintaining first place in the National League East while Philadelphia fell seven games back in third place.

Dave Johnson homered for the third game in a row to start the Braves off to a win over the Padres. It was Atlanta's third in a row and 12th win out of 13 games with the Padres.

Johnson, who had homered in both ends of a Labor Day doubleheader Monday, led off for the Braves in the second by belting a homer into the leftfield bullpen.

Knievel Makes Bet With Riggs

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Evel Knievel and Bobby Riggs have a bet for $25,000 that Riggs can't ride from Las Vegas, Nev., to Twin Falls on a mini-bike by Sunday.

According to promoters of the Evel Knievel rocketcycle jump across the Snake River Canyon, tennis hustler Riggs will ride a 200cc Harley Davidson.

Top Rank, Inc., promoters of the Knievel leap, said the two made the bet Tuesday afternoon. The promoters said Riggs will start from Las Vegas Wednesday morning.

Knievel told Riggs, "I can't wait to see you if you get there. You'll have bloodshot eyes."

Knievel contends Riggs won't make it in time for Sunday's jump. "Wait till you see this minibike. This one rides at two miles per hour," Knievel said.

"I'll make it and I'll be right on time to get into that closed circuit telecast of yours," Riggs is said to have countered.

Defending Champion Newcombe Advances

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Defending champion John Newcombe, the scent of victory in his nostrils now that the tournament has entered its second week, Tuesday powered his way into the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open tennis championship where he was joined by two former winners, Arthur Ashe and Ken Rosewall.

Also through to the quarters for the second successive year was India's unseeded Vijay Amritraj, who is headed for another meeting with Rosewall.

Top-seeded Jimmy Connors and the 1971 champion, Stan Smith, along with the other seeds in the top half of the draw, were idle, as were all the girls who play their quarterfinal matches on Wednesday.

Newcombe, the second seed here and twice winner of the title, defeated unseeded Ray Moore of South Africa, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5; Rosewall, the fifth seed who was champion in 1954 and 1970, trimmed 16th seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico, 6-1, 6-7, 7-5, 6-3; Ashe, the eighth seed who won the first Open in 1968, beat ninth seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, 6-7, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5, while Amritraj took his second seeded player, 11th picked Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

After the pressure cooker atmosphere of the first six days of the $271,700 tournament the players had to deal with a brief rain shower, a swirling wind which gusted from time to time and periods of bad light. Under the circumstances, unforced errors were the rule rather than the exception while the players also had to deal with bad bounces from grass courts which resembled cow pastures.

But in the clutch, the men who've already traveled the championship route had the shots to match the conditions, the three former winners all recording their easiest victories of the tournament.

Moore who will play on South Africa's Davis Cup team against Italy in the competition's semifinals, pointed at the court and said, "And they call that a court? This is supposed to be the world's No. 2 tournament, isn't it?"

The grass courts will be dug up at the conclusion of this year's championships and an artifical surface will be laid at the West Side Tennis Club.

Newcombe, the 30-year-old reigning World Championship Tennis champion who has amassed $191,800 this year, said, "the conditions are the worst I can remember, but when I had to do something for a big point, I did it."

Newcombe, grinning broadly, said, "I'm hungry, men. Beating Tony (Roche) in the last round gave me my appetite back."

The great Australian has not played tournament tennis since his defeat by Rosewall at Wimbledon, while he had a slight back injury when the championship started here last Wednesday.

"I mean to defend my title," Newcombe said by way of warning to the top-seeded Connors, the reigning Wimbledon champion.

Amritraj who had little to beat in Riessen who made unforced errors nearly every time he went for a ball, said, "This is my lucky tournament."

The unseeded Indian who will lead India's Davis Cup challenge against Russia, said, "When I play a seeded player, I play all the better. There is no pressure when you meet a fellow who is supposed to beat you."

Amritraj said Riessen played in spurts and appeared more affected by the wind.

Newcombe won a round of applause when he argued with the umpire and insisted a point awarded him be given to Moore. He served a first ball long but it was called an ace. The ball died and Newk refused to accept the point.

The discussion went on for three minutes more before the official gave in and told Newcombe to "take two." Newk then slammed in an ace.

Newcombe broke for 4-2 in the first set and 2-1 in the second. He dropped his serve to open the third set but broke back in the third and again in the 11th before he finished the match with a love game.

Amritraj, 22, broke in the seventh game to go ahead in the first set; for 3-love in the second, while he went ahead to stay at 4-3 in the third set after the opening two games had gone against service.

Seevers' Recovery Lifts Concordia Football Hopes

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
State College Writer

Seward — On July 2, Concordia College starting quarterback John Seevers, son of head football coach John Sr., was on his way to try out a new bow at a river near Seward.

Traveling down a country road with his 12-year-old brother Mark, the Seevers' VW was in collision with a grain truck, cancelling any hopes of archery for the moment.

Besides getting "pretty banged up" as his father put it, the left-handed passer's injuries included a 51-stitch gash on his throwing arm.

Since the accident, young Seevers has been working to get his arm back in shape. "It was really tight because of the stitches," he said. "They (the doctors) pulled the skin across and patched it up, so I had a lot of loosening up to do."

He worked out this summer by swimming to build up endurance, but John Sr. could tell he wasn't quite in shape when the Bulldogs started skills tests Aug. 18.

"His speed was down, his endurance was down and he couldn't throw the ball quite as far as last year either," coach Seevers admitted. "He went from 4.8 to 5.0 in the forty, and last year he passed the ball 68-

John Seevers, Jr.

yards in the test. This year it was only 55."

But young Seevers, now a sophomore, continues to improve and will start when Seward travels to Culver-Stockton, Mo., Saturday for its opening game.

"John has probably improved more than anyone we have," coach Seevers noted. "Mainly because he was so much lower than usual. He's looking sharper every day."

John Jr. agrees with the improvement analysis of his father. "It (the arm) is coming along real good," he said. "In fact, it's just like new. I'm throwing between 68 and 70 yards now."

In Saturday's first full-line intersquad scrimmage, it took Seevers only two offensive plays before he proved the point by firing a pin point accurate 37-yard scoring pass to receiver Gary Faszholz.

In the offense's next possession, Seevers scampered nine yards around right end for another score.

It's good for coach Seevers that John Jr. is coming along at quarterback. He wasn't the only signal-caller to suffer an injury over summer break. Last year's backup to Seevers, junior Russ Daehling, hurt his knee pitching in a summer baseball league and has yet to work out in pads.

And another quarterback is ineligible for play this fall leaving the ranks slim with only untested freshmen to fill in.

Overall, coach Seevers has been "tremendously pleased with the progress" of the team during preseason training. "Our enthusiasm has been real good," he said. "We've always been a real close knit group. The kids eat together, sleep together and play football together. They get along extremely well."

Opperman Near Reality

By Bob Moyer

Jan Opperman's dream of a ranch for wayward youths in the Rocky Mountains continues to move closer towards a reality and he hopes to help further roughly 60 miles south of Canada and six miles from the Idaho border. "I've looked at a lot of pieces of land," Opperman noted, "But this is the only one that turned me on."

Opperman said he is hopeful of clearing some timber before winter so that he can start building in the spring. "The only thing holding us up is the current owner. He won't sell the land until he can find another place to live."

Opperman's plans for his ranch, along with his racing plans, have faced a serious challenge recently from the internal woes plaguing big-time auto racing.

Soaring costs have forced many big sponsors out of the with two more USAC-sanctioned midget car auto races this week.

The first of the two shows, promoted by Opperman's charity, US-CRY (United State Concerned Racers for Youth), will be at Midwest Speedway Wednesday night at 8 p.m. Then, on Thursday, the midget cars will shift to Omaha's Sunset Speedway for another 8 p.m. show.

In addition to most of the drivers returning from the field that competed earlier this summer, including current USAC midget car point leader Mel Kenyon, several other drivers will be competing.

Included in this group are Bob Wente, a past USAC midget car point titlist; Richard Powell, one of the top teenage drivers in the country and Opperman himself, who could not race the first time because his car wasn't ready.

Opperman, who is trying to sell his 50-acre farm in Beaver Crossing, revealed he has found the piece of land to build his ranch on.

The land is in Montana, sport, leaving the status of big-time racing in doubt.

"A driver of my calibre, which is nothing special, just a regular guy, not a front-runner," Opperman noted, "Could expect to be given a $25,000 retainer in the 1960s just if he could make Indy.

"But now its just like anything else. The country's sick and so is auto racing," he added, noting that even sprint car racing has almost doubled its cost in the last four years. "You just can't do it now without a wealthy car owner backing you.

"When the big sponsors came into the sport they made it more and more expensive to be competitive and then when they stepped out, it sort of left everybody in limbo. It also took the fun out of it. It seems like now it's the same old guys that beat you. In the old days it wasn't that way. Every now and then somebody would come out of the hills and blow the doors off of everybody."

But while things are getting rough in the sport, Opperman is not about to turn back. "It's put a strong damper on things. But I can't allow myself to be negative about the ranch at all.

"I'll either go up or down with it. My biggest problem now is that I just can't wait to get started. I wish I was out their chopping down trees now."

Veterans Dominate Plainsmen Harriers

Nebraska Wesleyan coach Woody Greeno has announced an 11-meet schedule for his defending champion Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Cross Country Team.

Greeno's squad, with four senior lettermen back, will open Sept. 7 at a non-scored warm-up meet at South Dakota University in Vermillion.

The final season meets are Nov. 2 for the NIAC championship and Nov. 16 for the NCAA Division III Championships at Wheaton, Illinois.

Among his returning senior lettermen is Cliff Karthauser, Lincoln, who earned all-American honors last year at the Wheaton contest with a sixth-place finish.

Other seniors are Ron Greeno, Lincoln, who holds the school's mile run mark, Jim French, Wahoo, and Joe Neneman, North Bend. Returning sophomore letterman is Duane Coates, Neligh.

Greeno listed several freshmen as among top prospects. They are Jeff Tracey, Ponca, Jon Eggers, Byron, and Mike ZIomke, Ord, and Randy Warren, Aurora.

"We should be a very respectable team," Greeno said of one of the most-talented cross country squads he's coached in several seasons.

The Plainsman schedule:

CBS Inks Pact With Standouts

NEW YORK (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System announced Tuesday it has added Johnny Unitas and Oscar Robertson to its sportscasting team. Both signed long-term contracts but the network did not say for how much or for how long.

Unitas retired recently after a long pro football career with the Baltimore Colts and the San Diego Chargers.

Robertson, a long-time All-Star basketball player, had been having contract squabbles with the Milwaukee Bucks and became a free agent last week when his contract expired and the Bucks didn't offer him a new one.

BIG 8 REPORT

Missouri

Missouri's injury situation improved with the return of first-string quarterback Ray Smith and word that a leg injury sustained by co-captain Scott Pickens was not as bad as had been feared.

Smith, a senior, has been out of practice since suffering an ankle injury Aug. 24. He will carry on limited work while the ankle continues to heal.

Steve Pisarkiewicz, who had been running at No. 2 quarterback until he also injured an ankle Aug. 24, was excused from practice early when soreness developed in the ankle.

He had returned to practice on a limited basis.

Pickens, a senior linebacker, suffered a strained muscle in his upper leg Monday and coach Al Onofrio said the injury was not as serious as first thought.

Kansas

Injuries continued to hound Kansas, forcing Coach Don Fambrough to juggle personnel at key positions.

Ken Saathoff, veteran senior receiver, began the third week of fall drills at the starting wide receiver slot, rather than his tight end post.

Fambrough said Saathoff would continue working at both positions in case flanker Bruce Adams, slowed since the opening day of practice with a hamstring pull, was not able to recover in time for the Jayhawks' season opener against Washington State.

Gregg Hosack, a junior, moved up to Saathoff's vacated tight end spot.

Kansas State

Kansas State coach Vince Gibson said cornerback Henry Lige may be out for a month with a knee injury.

Lige was assuming a second team spot and Gibson indicated the loss was a definite setback.

Oklahoma State

Oklahoma State football coach Jim Stanley said strong safety Joe Avanzini returned to practice after a two week absence.

The Coalgate sophomore has been suffering a pulled back muscle.

Iowa State

Iowa State head coach Earle Bruce said the squad is in good physical condition with no major injuries having been sustained — except for reserve tailback Tom Miller's broken ankle in last Saturday's scrimmage and senior tight end Don Greenwood's early fall back surgery.

Sophomore Al Dixon of East St. Louis, Ill. is running ahead of another sophomore, Glover Rogers, in the scramble for the starting tight end spot, Bruce said.

Daugherty Requests Retirement

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Former Michigan State football coach Duffy Daugherty Tuesday requested early retirement from his position at the university as special assistant to the vice president for development.

Daugherty, 59, who ended a colorful 19-year career as head football coach in 1972, asked that he be permitted to retire with full benefits from the $25,000 a year post effective Sept. 1.

He gave no reason for his action and could not immediately be reached for comment.

A spokesman for the Michigan State athletic department noted that Daugherty has been working as a color commentator for football games with ABC-TV and added, "I'm sure he's got other irons in the fire."

Daugherty worked primarily in a fund-raising capacity for the university.

He was twice named coach of the year, in 1955 and 1965.

Ziebarth Apology For Mrs. Smith

Axtell (UPI) — Democratic congressional nominee Wayne Ziebarth said Tuesday he will apologize to Mrs. Virginia Smith of Chappell, his GOP opponent, for inferring in a radio interview that women have no place in politics.

Ziebarth said, however, that he did not mean the statement the way it came out. He was referring to his own family's feeling on the matter, he said.

"I was chatting with the interviewer," he said, "and apparently I said what I meant poorly."

He said the apology would be made at Ord at a noon luncheon Thursday at which Mrs. Smith will be present.

The comments, made last Friday, caused several adverse editorial reactions and led Ann Crowley, state chairperson of the Nebraska Women's Political Caucus, to urge the central committees of both parties to withhold support from candidates who voice such sentiments.

Ziebarth said he also planned to send statements to editors of the newspapers which editorialized against him.

Ziebarth said he feels women have the right to choose whatever career they like. He said his opponent was a "good campaigner," and said he had commented publicly during the primary last May that Mrs. Smith would be "the best GOP candidate" of the several who sought the nomination.

Ziebarth said the publicity created by his remark caused him "considerable embarrassment" and may have damaged his campaign efforts.

"I've never thought that I was a male chauvinist at all," he said.

Ziebarth said he feels that there is reason for optimism in his campaign and that he feels he has some Republican support in his race for the seat to be vacated by Republican Rep. Dave Martin.

He said there also appeared to him to be a large number of voters who have not made up their minds.

Exon Earmarks $70,000 For Fall Campaign

Gov. J. James Exon Tuesday said he and Democratic lieutenant gubernatorial candidate Gerald Whelen will spend "in the general neighborhood" of $70,000 on their fall general election campaign.

Exon said that figure will be "one of the lowest expenditures for an incumbent governor in recent history."

Former Gov. Norbert Tiemann is probably the record-holder for gubernatorial races; he spent $139,000 in his unsuccessful 1970 bid for re-election. Exon, who defeated him in that race, reported spending $53,000.

The Exon-Whelan team's May primary expenses totaled $68,000. The bulk of that money was spent to capture the No. 2 spot on the ticket for Whelan, who was facing such contenders as then-Sen. Terry Carpenter and Sen. Jules Burbach.

Appearing rested and tanned after vacationing in Colorado and Canada, Exon said his campaign staff is working out the details for debates this fall between him, Republican candidate Richard Marvel and independent candidate Ernest Chambers.

The first, he said, is scheduled for Sept. 27 in Grand Island at a meeting of the Associated Press editors. The second debate is planned for an Educational Television broadcast. A third forum has not yet been decided upon, he said.

Asked about plans if he is re-elected, Exon said he envisions "no bold new programs" during a second term as governor.

Referring to current economic conditions, Exon said the times call for a continuance of his administration's "business-like" approach to government. The hallmark of the Exon administration has been a stablization in the sales and income tax rates and lean administrative budgets.

As for persistent rumors that he will run for U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska's seat in 1976, Exon said at this time he has "no aspiration other than to serve as governor."

Baer Named New Brandeis President

Omaha (AP) — Alan Baer has been elected president of J. L. Brandeis & Sons, succeeding E. John Brandeis, who died Aug. 24.

John D. Diesing, vice president and secretary of the Omaha-based retailing chain, said Baer also was elected president of the Brandeis Investment Company and the Faidley Corporation.

Baer first worked at Brandeis as a stockboy in 1941. Since that time, he has held practically every job in the organization.

He was born in San Francisco and graduated from Burlingame High School in Burlingame, Calif.

There are 11 Brandeis stores in four cities. Baer said the expansion policy of the firm will continue. Currently, Brandeis stores are under construction in Des Moines and Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Nebraska Farmers Face Foe In Ag Department, Says Dyas

By United Press International

Hess Dyas of Lincoln, a Democratic congressional candidate, said Tuesday it appears Nebraska's farmers, already hit hard by the drought, face another foe in the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"As if by conspiracy with the weather and the market, the USDA is making hard times harder for the farmer," Dyas said.

In the first place, he said the USDA has failed to alter its regulations to allow maximum use of more plants for silage.

The problem, he said, is that the federal crop insurance program penalizes the farmer 20% of his insurance payment if he cuts his drought-ruined corn for silage.

"While this penalty clause could make sense in years of bountiful crops, it doesn't make a bit of sense in a below average year and it is ridiculous this year," Dyas said.

Secondly, he said disaster payments under the farm bill are too low.

"Inflation on the things farmers buy to produce crops has pushed up the cost of corn production to $2 a bushel," he said. "Yet the farmers who do qualify for disaster relief are reimbursed on a formula which has $1.38 a bushel as the target price for corn."

The candidate also said another problem centers on feed grain allotments.

He said Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz set a feed grian allotment of 89 million acres while farmers were planting 126 million acres.

"Because of this judgment by Earl Butz, a lot of badly needed acreage in feed grain is not covered at all," Dyas said.

Demo Candidate Ziebarth Criticized By Rep. Martin

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., says third district congressional candidate Wayne Ziebarth, a Democrat, "is trying to butter his bread on both sides without getting his fingers greasy."

Martin's comments came in response to a Ziebarth statement last week in which he said third district Nebraskans would be better off with a Democrat in Congress instead of a Republican.

Ziebarth also said a Democrat would work "from within" his own party, while a Republican representative would "cast nothing but negative votes."

Martin said Ziebarth was "trying to pull the wool over the eyes of the voters or he doesn't know his own party or how it operates in Congress."

He said Ziebarth would be forced by Democratic caucus rule to cast his vote along with the majority of "eastern liberal Democrats" on controversial issues, or face the loss of committee assignments and censorship from his own party.

Martin is retiring from Congress after this term. Ziebarth will face Mrs. Haven Smith of Chappell in the November election.

NU Regent Koefoot Responds To Med Center 'Accusations'

Grand Island (AP) — University of Nebraska Board of Regents member Robert Koefoot of Grand Island Tuesday responded to "accusations and innuendoes" about the regents role at the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

Dr. William J. Wilson, chairman of the department of radiology, resigned Friday. He cited what he termed regents' interference in medical school activities, and top-level NU administrators' "lack of support."

Koefoot was chairman of the regents during 1973 when controversy arose and was later selected by the board to represent it in meetings with representatives of the faculty to solve the problems involved with the professional fee plan.

Koefoot said the regents have the responsibility to set policy at the med school and see that it is carried out.

He said: "It is my feeling that in order to have a good faculty at the medical center, private patient income must be retained by the attending physicians at the medical center. It is also my feeling that the board of regents must know what is going on in order to adequately justify this arrangement to the taxpayers of this state."

The medical faculty adopted a medical service plan in 1971. It was changed twice and the issues now causing concern were manifested in the abortion controversy. Koefoot said the issues that continue to be in question are utilization of professional fee offices, disclosure of income and an audit.

He said the issues were solved without going to court by mutual agreement between the regents, the administration and medical faculty this June.

County Courts Busiest With New Cases in July

In terms of new cases, July was the busiest month for Nebraska's county courts since they were reorganized in January of 1973.

State Court Administrator James E. Dunlevy said about 18,000 new cases were filed in the 93 county courts during July. About 9,200 of those involved traffic offenses, with another 2,200 involving violations of municipal traffic ordinances. Those totals do not include cases filed in the Lincoln and Omaha municipal courts, Dunlevy said.

"About half of the state traffic cases arose in the counties on Interstate 80," Dunlevy said. "Over 1,000 of them, including truck overload violations, were filed in Lincoln County, and court personnel there indicate the August rate is even heavier."

Fines collected by the county courts in July totalled more than $300,000. About $275,000 in fine money goes for school purposes, under provisions of Nebraska's constitution, with more than $28,000 going to state and county road funds.

Fees and costs collected by the county courts in July, for deposit in the state general fund, totalled about $140,000, Dunlevy said.

Cowden To Be Suggested For Isaacson Music Chair

A former Metropolitan Opera national company tenor will be recommended as the first J. J. Isaacson Chair professor and chairperson of the University of Nebraska-Omaha music department.

UNO Chancellor Ronald W. Roskens will recommend Robert H. Cowden for the positions during a Saturday University of Nebraska Board of Regents meeting.

A trust fund established from the will of the late Isaacson will be used to finance the endowed chair in the UNO school of fine arts. Isaacson, former general manager of Ak-Sar-Ben, died last December.

Cowden holds music degrees from Princeton University and the Eastman School of Music. He was a Fullbright Scholar 1961-63 in West Germany and originated several educational programs about music.

He has appeared with the Stadttheater Hildesheim in West Germany.

USDA Charges Metro Packers With Violation

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has charged a St. Paul, Minn., meat packing firm with violating the payment requirements of the Packers and Stockyards Act.

The USDA claims that Metro Meat Packing, which is no longer in operation, failed to pay $735,000 that it owed on May 28 for meat, meat products and livestock. The USDA also contends that Metro issued $171,000 dollars in insufficient checks to cover meat and livestock purchases.

The firm formerly purchased slaughter livestock, meat and meat products in Nebraska, Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa, Montana, Wisconsin and the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and Ontario.

USDA officials said the Packers and Stockyards Act is a fair trade and practices law, which is designed to maintain fair and open competition in the marketing of livestock, poultry and meat.

Seevers' Recovery Lifts Concordia Football Hopes

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
State College Writer

Seward — On July 2, Concordia College starting quarterback John Seevers, son of head football coach John Sr., was on his way to try out a new bow at a river near Seward.

Traveling down a country road with his 12-year-old brother Mark, the Seevers' VW was in collision with a grain truck, cancelling any hopes of archery for the moment.

Besides getting "pretty banged up" as his father put it, the left-handed passer's injuries included a 51-stitch gash on his throwing arm.

Since the accident, young Seevers has been working to get his arm back in shape. "It was really tight because of the stitches," he said. "They (the doctors) pulled the skin across and patched it up, so I had a lot of loosening up to do."

He worked out this summer by swimming to build up endurance, but John Sr. could tell he wasn't quite in shape when the Bulldogs started skills tests Aug. 18.

"His speed was down, his endurance was down and he couldn't throw the ball quite as far as last year either," coach Seevers admitted. "He went from 4.8 to 5.0 in the forty, and last year he passed the ball 68-

John Seevers, Jr. Regains Form

yards in the test. This year it was only 55."

But young Seevers, now a sophomore, continues to improve and will start when Seward travels to Culver-Stockton, Mo., Saturday for its opening game.

"John has probably improved more than anyone we have," coach Seevers noted. "Mainly because he was so much lower than usual. He's looking sharper every day."

John Jr. agrees with the improvement analysis of his father. "It (the arm) is coming along real good," he said. "In fact, it's just like new. I'm throwing between 68 and 70 yards now."

In Saturday's first full-line intersquad scrimmage, it took Seevers only two offensive plays before he proved the point by firing a pin point accurate 37-yard scoring pass to receiver Gary Faszholz.

In the offense's next possession, Seevers scampered nine yards around right end for another score.

It's good for coach Seevers that John Jr. is coming along at quarterback. He wasn't the only signal-caller to suffer an injury over summer break. Last year's backup to Seevers, junior Russ Daehling, hurt his knee pitching in a summer baseball league and has yet to work out in pads.

And another quarterback is ineligible for play this fall leaving the ranks slim with only untested freshmen to fill in.

Overall, coach Seevers has been "tremendously pleased with the progress" of the team during preseason training. "Our enthusiasm has been real good," he said. "We've always been a real close knit group. The kids eat together, sleep together and play football together. They get along extremely well."

Opperman Near Reality

By Bob Moyer

Jan Opperman's dream of a ranch for wayward youths in the Rocky Mountains continues to move closer towards a reality and he hopes to help further roughly 60 miles south of Canada and six miles from the Idaho border. "I've looked at a lot of pieces of land," Opperman noted, "But this is the only one that turned me on."

Opperman said he is hopeful of clearing some timber before winter so that he can start building in the spring. "The only thing holding us up is the current owner. He won't sell the land until he can find another place to live."

Opperman's plans for his ranch, along with his racing plans, have faced a serious challenge recently from the internal woes plaguing big-time auto racing.

Soaring costs have forced many big sponsors out of the with two more USAC-sanctioned midget car auto races this week.

The first of the two shows, promoted by Opperman's charity, US-CRY (United State Concerned Racers for Youth), will be at Midwest Speedway Wednesday night at 8 p.m. Then, on Thursday, the midget cars will shift to Omaha's Sunset Speedway for another 8 p.m. show.

In addition to most of the drivers returning from the field that competed earlier this summer, including current USAC midget car point leader Mel Kenyon, several other drivers will be competing.

Included in this group are Bob Wente, a past USAC midget car point titlist; Richard Powell, one of the top teenage drivers in the country and Opperman himself, who could not race the first time because his car wasn't ready.

Opperman, who is trying to sell his 50-acre farm in Beaver Crossing, revealed he has found the piece of land to build his ranch on.

The land is in Montana, sport, leaving the status of big-time racing in doubt.

"A driver of my calibre, which is nothing special, just a regular guy, not a front-runner," Opperman noted, "Could expect to be given a $25,000 retainer in the 1960s just if he could make Indy."

"But now its just like anything else. The country's sick and so is auto racing," he added, noting that even sprint car racing has almost doubled its cost in the last four years. "You just can't do it now without a wealthy car owner backing you.

"When the big sponsors came into the sport they made it more and more expensive to be competitive and then when they stepped out, it sort of left everybody in limbo. It also took the fun out of it. It seems like now it's the same old guys that beat you. In the old days it wasn't that way. Every now and then somebody would come out of the hills and blow the doors off of everybody."

But while things are getting rough in the sport, Opperman is not about to turn back. "It's put a strong damper on things. But I can't allow myself to be negative about the ranch at all.

"I'll either go up or down with it. My biggest problem now is that I just can't wait to get started. I wish I was out their chopping down trees now."

Ziebarth Apology For Mrs. Smith

Axtell (UPI) — Democratic congressional nominee Wayne Ziebarth said Tuesday he will apologize to Mrs. Virginia Smith of Chappell, his GOP opponent, for inferring in a radio interview that women have no place in politics.

Ziebarth said, however, that he did not mean the statement the way it came out. He was referring to his own family's feeling on the matter, he said.

"I was chatting with the interviewer," he said "and apparently I said what I meant poorly."

He said the apology would be made at Ord at a noon luncheon Thursday at which Mrs. Smith will be present.

The comments, made last Friday, caused several adverse editorial reactions and led Ann Crowley, state chairperson of the Nebraska Women's Political Caucus, to urge the central committees of both parties to withhold support from candidates who voice such sentiments.

Ziebarth said he also planned to send statements to editors of the newspapers which editorialized against him.

Ziebarth said he feels women have the right to choose whatever career they like. He said his opponent was a "good campaigner," and said he had commented publicly during the primary last May that Mrs. Smith would be "the best GOP candidate" of the several who sought the nomination.

Ziebarth said the publicity created by his remark caused him "considerable embarrassment" and may have damaged his campaign efforts.

"I've never thought that I was a male chauvinist at all," he said.

Ziebarth said he feels that there is reason for optimism in his campaign and that he feels he has some Republican support in his race for the seat to be vacated by Republican Rep. Dave Martin.

He said there also appeared to him to be a large number of voters who have not made up their minds.

Exon Earmarks $70,000 For Fall Campaign

Gov. J. James Exon Tuesday said he and Democratic lieutenant gubernatorial candidate Gerald Whelen will spend "in the general neighborhood" of $70,000 on their fall general election campaign.

Exon said that figure will be "one of the lowest expenditures for an incumbent governor in recent history."

Former Gov. Norbert Tiemann is probably the record-holder for gubernatorial races; he spent $139,000 in his unsuccessful 1970 bid for re-election. Exon, who defeated him in that race, reported spending $53,000.

The Exon-Whelan team's May primary expenses totaled $68,000. The bulk of that money was spent to capture the No. 2 spot on the ticket for Whelan, who was facing such contenders as then-Sen. Terry Carpenter and Sen. Jules Burbach.

Appearing rested and tanned after vacationing in Colorado and Canada, Exon said his campaign staff is working out the details for debates this fall between him, Republican candidate Richard Marvel and independent candidate Ernest Chambers.

The first, he said, is scheduled for Sept. 27 in Grand Island at a meeting of the Associated Press editors. The second debate is planned for an Educational Television broadcast. A third forum has not yet been decided upon, he said.

Asked about plans if he is re-elected, Exon said he envisions "no bold new programs" during a second term as governor.

Referring to current economic conditions, Exon said the times call for a continuance of his administration's "business-like" approach to government. The hallmark of the Exon administration has been a stablization in the sales and income tax rates and lean administrative budgets.

As for persistent rumors that he will run for U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska's seat in 1976, Exon said at this time he has "no aspiration other than to serve as governor."

Baer Named New Brandeis President

Omaha (AP) — Alan Baer has been elected president of J. L. Brandeis & Sons, succeeding E. John Brandeis, who died Aug. 24.

John D. Diesing, vice president and secretary of the Omaha-based retailing chain, said Baer also was elected president of the Brandeis Investment Company and the Faidley Corporation.

Baer first worked at Brandeis as a stockboy in 1941. Since that time, he has held practically every job in the organization.

He was born in San Francisco and graduated from Burlingame High School in Burlingame, Calif.

There are 11 Brandeis stores in four cities. Baer said the expansion policy of the firm will continue. Currently, Brandeis stores are under construction in Des Moines and Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Nebraska Farmers Face Foe In Ag Department, Says Dyas

By United Press International

Hess Dyas of Lincoln, a Democratic congressional candidate, said Tuesday it appears Nebraska's farmers, already hit hard by the drought, face another foe in the U.S Department of Agriculture.

"As if by conspiracy with the weather and the market, the USDA is making hard times harder for the farmer," Dyas said.

In the first place, he said the USDA has failed to alter its regulations to allow maximum use of more plants for silage.

The problem, he said, is that the federal crop insurance program penalizes the farmer 20% of his insurance payment if he cuts his drought-ruined corn for silage.

"While this penalty clause could make sense in years of bountiful crops, it doesn't make a bit of sense in a below average year and it is ridiculous this year," Dyas said.

Secondly, he said disaster payments under the farm bill are too low.

"Inflation on the things farmers buy to produce crops has pushed up the cost of corn production to $2 a bushel," he said. "Yet the farmers who do qualify for disaster relief are reimbursed on a formula which has $1.38 a bushel as the target price for corn."

The candidate also said another problem centers on feed grain allotments.

He said Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz set a feed grian allotment of 89 million acres while farmers were planting 126 million acres.

"Because of this judgment by Earl Butz, a lot of badly needed acreage in feed grain is not covered at all," Dyas said

Demo Candidate Ziebarth Criticized By Rep. Martin

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., says third district congressional candidate Wayne Ziebarth, a Democrat, "is trying to butter his bread on both sides without getting his fingers greasy."

Martin's comments came in response to a Ziebarth statement last week in which he said third district Nebraskans would be better off with a Democrat in Congress instead of a Republican.

Ziebarth also said a Democrat would work "from within" his own party, while a Republican representative would "cast nothing but negative votes."

Martin said Ziebarth was "trying to pull the wool over the eyes of the voters or he doesn't know his own party or how it operates in Congress."

He said Ziebarth would be forced by Democratic caucus rule to cast his vote along with the majority of "eastern liberal Democrats" on controversial issues, or face the loss of committee assignments and censorship from his own party.

Martin is retiring from Congress after this term. Ziebarth will face Mrs. Haven Smith of Chappell in the November election.

NU Regent Koefoot Responds To Med Center 'Accusations'

Grand Island (AP) — University of Nebraska Board of Regents member Robert Koefoot of Grand Island Tuesday responded to "accusations and innuendoes" about the regents role at the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

Dr. William J. Wilson, chairman of the department of radiology, resigned Friday. He cited what he termed regents' interference in medical school activities, and top-level NU administrators' "lack of support."

Koefoot was chairman of the regents during 1973 when controversy arose and was later selected by the board to represent it in meetings with representatives of the faculty to solve the problems involved with the professional fee plan.

Koefoot said the regents have the responsibility to set policy at the med school and see that it is carried out

He said: "It is my feeling that in order to have a good faculty at the medical center, private patient income must be retained by the attending physicians at the medical center. It is also my feeling that the board of regents must know what is going on in order to adequately justify this arrangement to the taxpayers of this state."

The medical faculty adopted a medical service plan in 1971. It was changed twice and the issues now causing concern were manifested in the abortion controversy. Koefoot said the issues that continue to be in question are utilization of professional fee offices, disclosure of income and an audit.

He said the issues were solved without going to court by mutual agreement between the regents, the administration and medical faculty this June.

County Courts Busiest With New Cases in July

In terms of new cases, July was the busiest month for Nebraska's county courts since they were reorganized in January of 1973.

State Court Administrator James E. Dunlevy said about 18,000 new cases were filed in the 93 county courts during July. About 9,200 of those involved traffic offenses, with another 2,200 involving violations of municipal traffic ordinances. Those totals do not include cases filed in the Lincoln and Omaha municipal courts, Dunlevy said.

"About half of the state traffic cases arose in the counties on Interstate 80," Dunlevy said "Over 1,000 of them, including truck overload violations, were filed in Lincoln County, and court personnel there indicate the August rate is even heavier."

Fines collected by the county courts in July totalled more than $300,000. About $275,000 in fine money goes for school purposes, under provisions of Nebraska's constitution, with more than $28,000 going to state and county road funds.

Fees and costs collected by the county courts in July, for deposit in the state general fund, totalled about $140,000, Dunlevy said.

USDA Charges Metro Packers With Violation

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has charged a St. Paul, Minn., meat packing firm with violating the payment requirements of the Packers and Stockyards Act.

The USDA claims that Metro Meat Packing, which is no longer in operation, failed to pay $735,000 that it owed on May 28 for meat, meat products and livestock. The USDA also contends that Metro issued $171,000 dollars in insufficient checks to cover meat and livestock purchases

The firm formerly purchased slaughter livestock, meat and meat products in Nebraska, Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa, Montana, Wisconsin and the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and Ontario.

USDA officials said the Packers and Stockyards Act is a fair trade and practices law, which is designed to maintain fair and open competition in the marketing of livestock, poultry and meat.

Cowden To Be Suggested For Isaacson Music Chair

A former Metropolitan Opera national company tenor will be recommended as the first J. J. Isaacson Chair professor and chairperson of the University of Nebraska-Omaha music department.

UNO Chancellor Ronald W. Roskens will recommend Robert H Cowden for the positions during a Saturday University of Nebraska Board of Regents meeting.

A trust fund established from the will of the late Isaacson will be used to finance the endowed chair in the UNO school of fine arts Isaacson, former general manager of Ak-Sar-Ben, died last December.

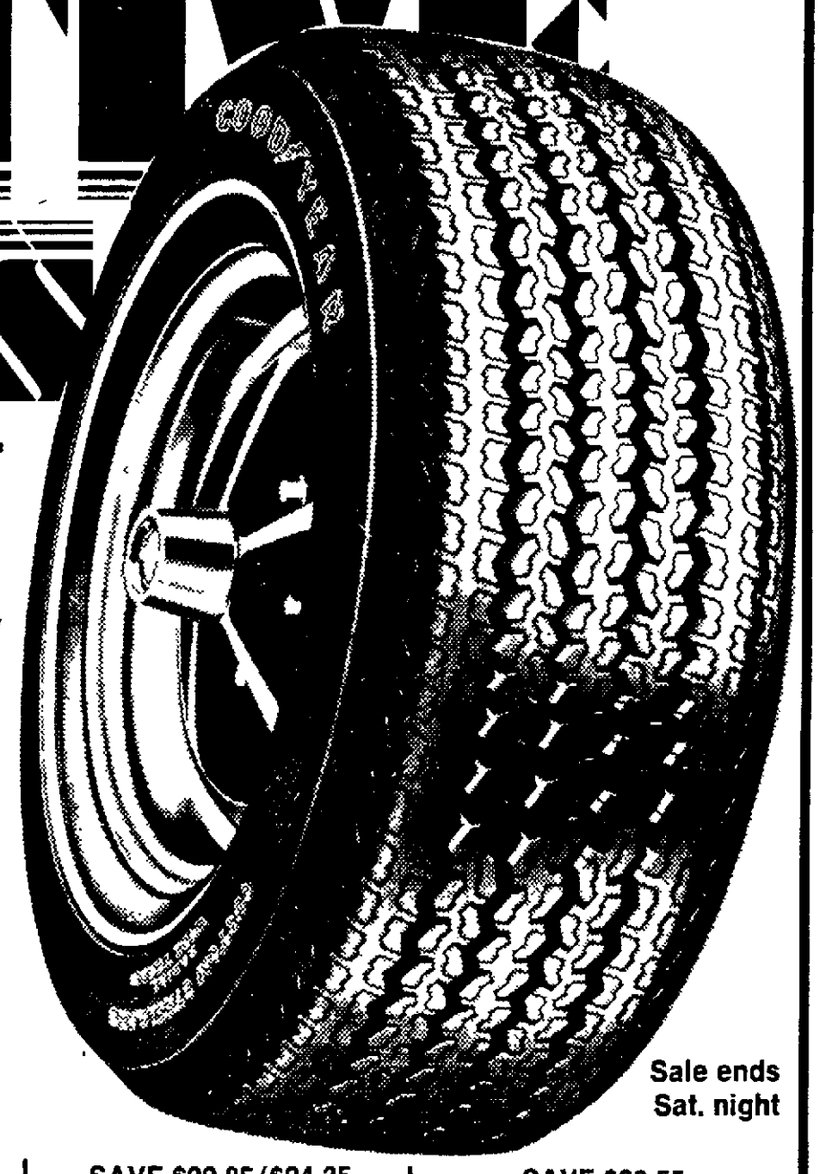

Cowden holds music degrees from Princeton University and the Eastman School of Music. He was a Fullbright Scholar 1961-63 in West Germany and originated several educational programs about music.

He has appeared with the Stadttheater Hildesheim in West Germany.

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81669, Lincoln, NE 68501

Why aren't the lights turned on from the golf course on around to the south boat dock at Holmes Lake on 70th St.?

—Curious Fisherman, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Dick Hilligus, superintendent of parks for the Lincoln Parks and Recreation Dept., said the street lights on the south side of the park had blown a fuse and the Lincoln Electric System is in charge of maintenance. A check with LES showed that they would be bringing light back to the darkened fishing area soon.

On April 1, I was involved in an accident while driving a truck leased from Novo Leasing, 4949 O St. Since I didn't have insurance, I was responsible for the first $100 worth of damage. The money was to be refunded if the other driver was found to be at fault. I've had no word from them. What can I do?

—John Snyder, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A police report shows the accident was your fault. Pete Fitchett, organizational manager for Misle Chevrolet (owner of Novo Leasing), said there would be no refund coming your way.

Where can I get information on transcendental meditation?

—Shelley Speidell, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Write or call the Student's International Meditation Society (SIMS), 1631 F St., phone number 475-7164.

Former SIMS director, Doug Bowen, said meditation classes, designed to teach a mental technique for settling the mind and body into deep relaxation, are offered about every two weeks. The classes are two hours long for four consecutive days. Cost is $35 for a junior high student, $55 for a high school student, $65 for a college student, $125 for a working adult and $200 for the family plan. All prices include lifetime membership in the society.

Is there a local contact for the adoption of Korean or Vietnamese orphans?

—Mrs. George Burkland, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Couples wishing to adopt foreign children must always work through a local agency which researches the family, Pat Bouse, social worker for Family Service Assn., 1133 H St., said.

Either check with her agency or the Catholic Social Services, R.R. 1, Roca, Lutheran Family Services, 4730 Randolph St., or the State Social Services Dept., 1526 K St.

Each agency will arrange adoption of a Korean or Vietnamese orphan through the Holt Adoption Program, an international adoption agency.

Please give me information regarding singles groups in the Lincoln area.

—L. L. Wilcox, Wahoo

ACTION LINE: The Cornhusker Singles Dance Club meets every Friday evening from 9-12:30 at the Elks' Lincoln Lodge No. 80, 131 Centennial Mall North. Elmer A. Prenosil, coordinator, said yearly membership is $10 allowing you to get into the dances for $1.50. Otherwise, charge is $2.50.

Parents Without Partners meets the third Saturday night of each month in Lincoln. You can become a member by writing Marian Salzman, membership chairman, 358 So. 25th St., Lincoln, 68510 or call 435-4419. Membership is $12 a year.

In addition, most local churches have special groups for single members in the church. Check around — you'd probably be welcomed by any of them.

The entrance to the parking lot east of Schramm Hall on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln downtown campus is so high that the bottoms of most cars scrape the cement. There are numerous chips in the cement already and I'd hate to see all the scratches on students' cars. What can be done?

—Kathy Taylor, Lincoln student

ACTION LINE: Capt. Kenneth Markel, university campus security, says the physical plant has been notified and a correction will be made within the week.

Rally Try Cut Short By Market

New York (AP) — The stock market cut short its latest rally effort Tuesday and went back to the slide that has eroded prices sharply over the past several weeks.

Brokers once again put the blame on worries over inflation and the solidity of the international banking structure, as well as uneasiness over general economic prospects.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 15.25 to 663.33, relinquishing most of the 21.74 gain it had recorded in a technical rebound on Friday.

Losers overcame gainers 986 to 454 among the 1,798 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume slowed to 12.75 million shares, from 16.23 million on Friday, and the exchange's own composite index of all its listed common stocks was off .80 to 36.90.

The Dow advanced about 5 points at the outset, apparently buoyed by a carry-over of buy orders from the strong close heading into the three-day Labor Day weekend.

But it turned at that point, and dropped steadily through the rest of the session.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 9-4

Why aren't the lights turned on from the golf course on around to the south boat dock at Holmes Lake on 70th St.?

—Curious Fisherman, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Dick Hilligus, superintendent of parks for the Lincoln Parks and Recreation Dept., said the street lights on the south side of the park had blown a fuse and the Lincoln Electric System is in charge of maintenance. A check with LES showed that they would be bringing light back to the darkened fishing area soon.

On April 1, I was involved in an accident while driving a truck leased from Novo Leasing, 4949 O St. Since I didn't have insurance, I was responsible for the first $100 worth of damage. The money was to be refunded if the other driver was found to be at fault. I've had no word from them. What can I do?

—John Snyder, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A police report shows the accident was your fault. Pete Fitchett, organizational manager for Misle Chevrolet (owner of Novo Leasing), said there would be no refund coming your way.

Where can I get information on transcendental meditation?

—Shelley Speidell, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Write or call the Student's International Meditation Society (SIMS), 1631 F St., phone number 475-7164.

Former SIMS director, Doug Bowen, said meditation classes, designed to teach a mental technique for settling the mind and body into deep relaxation, are offered about every two weeks. The classes are two hours long for four consecutive days. Cost is $35 for a junior high student, $55 for a high school student, $65 for a college student, $125 for a working adult and $200 for the family plan. All prices include lifetime membership in the society.

Is there a local contact for the adoption of Korean or Vietnamese orphans?

—Mrs. George Burkland, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Couples wishing to adopt foreign children must always work through a local agency which researches the family, Pat Bouse, social worker for Family Service Assn., 1133 H St., said.

Either check with her agency or the Catholic Social Services, R.R. 1, Roca, Lutheran Family Services, 4730 Randolph St., or the State Social Services Dept., 1526 K St.

Each agency will arrange adoption of a Korean or Vietnamese orphan through the Holt Adoption Program, an international adoption agency.

Please give me information regarding singles groups in the Lincoln area.

The entrance to the parking lot east of Schramm Hall on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln downtown campus is so high that the bottoms of most cars scrape the cement. There are numerous chips in the cement already and I'd hate to see all the scratches on students' cars. What can be done?

Rally Try Cut Short By Market

New York (AP) — The stock market cut short its latest rally effort Tuesday and went back to the slide that has eroded prices sharply over the past several weeks.

Brokers once again put the blame on worries over inflation and the solidity of the international banking structure, as well as uneasiness over general economic prospects.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 15.25 to 663.33, relinquishing most of the 21.74 gain it had recorded in a technical rebound on Friday.

Losers overcame gainers 986 to 454 among the 1,798 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume slowed to 12.75 million shares, from 16.23 million on Friday, and the exchange's own composite index of all its listed common stocks was off .80 to 86.90.

The Dow advanced about 5 points at the outset, apparently buoyed by a carry-over of buy orders from the strong close heading into the three-day Labor Day weekend.

But it turned at that point, and dropped steadily through the rest of the session.

Cold Snap Threatens Grain Sorghum Crop

By The Associated Press

Farmers can stop worrying about the heat. According to the latest crop report, they can start worrying about the cold.

The Division of Agricultural Statistics reported Tuesday that "cooler temperatures slowed maturity of crops and have caused concern to many farmers as to the possibility of an early frost . . . .

"Immature grain sorghum heads are quite vulnerable to frost at this stage, but temperatures were at the low point (early Monday) for only a brief period of time."

There was some good news to go with the unsettling thought of an early frost.

Irrigated corn remains in fair to good condition throughout the state, and one county reported irrigated corn in excellent condition. That marked the first "excellent" report since the drought began.

Most irrigators have stopped watering, and rain and cooler temperatures have helped farms catch up on soil moisture, the report said.

However, dryland corn remains in mostly poor to fair condition, with only one county reporting the crop in good shape.

Recent rain has brought some greening, and helped the forage content, but not the grain. Silage cutting is under way throughout the state.

In general, about 85% of irrigated and dryland corn acreages are in or past the dough stage. Normal percentage is 100% at this time, the crop report said; about 85% of the crop has dented, 65% is normal.

Spider mites still trouble corn in the Panhandle, but the situation has stabilized in the remainder of the state.

Sorghum, soybean and alfalfa conditions continued to improve, the report said.

Rainfall received throughout the state during the past week, according to the National Weather Service, included:

Burwell	.32	North Platte	.28
Chadron	.02	Omaha	.76
Grand Island	.20	Scottsbluff	.09
Lincoln	.80	Valentine	.11

Precipitation via sections received since the beginning of the growing season, April 1, as compared to longtime averages follows:

Northwest — 7.50 inches (1974); 11.28 inches (normal).
North Central — 10.50; 13.65.
Northeast — 15.10; 16.00.
Central — 12.60; 14.76.
East Central — 13.80; 17.18.
Southwest — 11.20; 12.84.
South Central — 11.40; 14.85.
Southeast — 12.70; 18.43.

Low Temperature Records Bettered

Low temperature records toppled from border to border in Nebraska early Tuesday with North Platte's 26 degrees the state's coldest reading.

The wintertime reading bettered North Platte's old record of 35 set Sept. 3, 1952.

At Grand Island, the National Weather Service said Tuesday's low of 34 degrees was the lowest ever recorded there so early in the season. The previous low for the date was 39 degrees.

Lincoln's 35 degrees Tuesday bettered the old record of 45 for the date, set back in 1891.

Scottsbluff reported a reading of 33 degrees, down from the record of 35 degrees set in 1905.

Norfolk's 34 also set a new record for the date, three degrees below the record set in 1937.

Omaha's 34 was 11 degrees below the previous record established in 1952.

A summary of August weather conditions in the Omaha area reveals the average maximum temperature for the month was 82 degrees while the average minimum was 58.9 degrees. In other words, the average temperature was 70.5 degrees, or 5.1 degrees below normal.

For Omaha, last month was the coldest August since 1964 and the fifth coldest in Omaha's weather history.

Meanwhile, somewhat warmer weather is in the forecast for Nebraska Wednesday with highs in the lower 70s for the east and mid and upper 70s in the west. Low readings in the 40s are predicted for Wednesday night.

Partly cloudy weather is expected Thursday with highs in the 70s throughout the state, according to the NWS forecast.

MERSHON . . . began when he was 18.

Cook Druggist At It 60 Years

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Cook — Same name, same location, many of the same loyal families as customers. And R. D. Mershon is the same home town kid who bought the drug store 60 years ago.

"Straight out of high school," he did lack a squeak or two in the joints which have since shown up. At 78, he is among the eldest pharmacists in the state and is nearly as active as he was at 18.

At least eight hours per day find the affable Johnson Countian putting up prescriptions for customers from half a dozen communities. His store, though by his own appraisal "old-fashioned," has a stock of everything from eyewash to wall paper.

Sodas Missing

Sadly missing, however, are the sodas which were of local fame for decades. They took leave seven years ago at the same time Ralph's heart attack arrived.

"The doc laid down the law — no more nights and no more Sunday work," recalled the oldster. "The old soda tables were removed while I was still in the hospital and it was a good thing. Used to work seven days a week and way past midnight on Saturdays — so late I'd take home the Sunday paper. That was all damn foolishness."

His first few years, Ralph partnered with his father, H. M. Mershon, then bought the store on his own in 1918. He had graduated the year before from Babcock School of Pharmacy in Des Moines, Iowa.

At Front Counter

Until her death 1½ years ago, Mrs. Mershon (Jennie) had been at the front counter while her husband filled prescriptions in back. Their daughter Lois, now Mrs. Walter Mannschreck of Hubbell, had grown up in the business.

Now "chief clerk" with some 30 years' experience is Mrs. Walter Ruhga, while Mrs. Duane Carman also assists. The store is still a Saturday nighter, though only until nine o'clock.

As a pharmacist, the Cook man marvels at the medical progress since he hung up his certificate during World War I. The discovery of sulfas, penicillin and the countless antibiotics "have kept me scratching this old head."

On School Board

The village board and Cook's Commercial Club both were beneficiaries of his time, but some 20 years on the school board was his biggest contribution. He is also active in the United Methodist Church.

A lifelong love of baseball is the closest he's had to a hobby outside of the store itself. Once or twice a summer he makes it to Kansas City to give "my Royals" a personal boost from the grandstand.

Today will officially mark his 60th anniversary in the store, but he plans nothing special. He is content instead with the memories of a decade ago when some 700 persons — twice the population of Cook — turned out for an open house.

"The Missus was with me then and later on we observed our golden wedding anniversary together. We've had our flowers."

Felony Charges May Be Filed In Omaha Fight

Omaha (AP) — An 18-year-old Omaha man may face felony charges in connection with a fight Sunday with the 22-year-old son of Rep. William Scherle, R-Iowa.

John R. Scherle of Omaha was released from a hospital Monday after being admitted Sunday with head injuries. Police said he was injured in a fight outside an Omaha bar.

John Scherle told police he had an argument Saturday night in the bar with the suspect. He said he was met by the man after closing early Sunday. Scherle said the man and several companions knocked him down.

Labor Day Death Toll 8; Crash Tuesday Claims 1

By The Associated Press

Nebraska's Highways claimed their eighth Labor Day fatality early Tuesday morning, with the discovery of a one-car mishap near Lorton, and a 22-year-old Kearney man died Tuesday afternoon in a one-vehicle accident near Kearney.

The Nebraska State Patrol said Dan Ahrends, 19, of rural Talmage, was killed late Monday night when his car left the highway about one-half mile north of Lorton, flew 79 feet threw the air, slammed into a creek bank, then flipped on its top.

Investigators said the victim's father and a brother discovered the wreckage, and theorized that Ahrends may have fallen asleep at the wheel.

Buffalo County authorities said the identity of the Kearney victim would be withheld until at least Wednesday morning, as efforts are made to contact relatives.

However, investigators said the victim was a passenger in a jeep that left a county road about four miles northwest of Kearney, and rolled.

The driver of the jeep, a 20-year old Kearney man, was treated for minor injuries at a local hospital, the released.

Just before the mishap, the victim apparently unbuckled his seat belt to crank down the windshield of the jeep, and had not re-buckled the belt when the accident occurred. The driver was wearing a seat belt.

Ironically, the vehicle had a roll-bar, and was not heavily damaged.

The victim of another Labor Day traffic victim was still being withheld Tuesday night, as the State Patrol was apparently having troubles in locating relatives.

The victim, a woman, died early Monday afternoon, when the semi-trailer she was struck by a Union Pacific freight train at a crossing just east of Lexington.

The deaths upped the state's 1974 traffic toll to 266, compared with 275 on this date last year.

Phone Action Prevented By Commission Absences

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Absences Tuesday prevented the Nebraska Public Service Commission from acting on an unprecedented proposal to grant 200 phone subscribers in Kennard a 60% reduction in basic rates.

Commissioners Duane Gay and James Munnelly agreed to hold the order until Sept. 16 over the objection of Commissioner Eric Rasmussen who said the commission had studied the matter long enough.

Gay, who expressed reservations about the proposal, asked for the delay to give Commissioners Robert Marland and John Swanson an opportunity to vote.

On Vacation

Marland is vacationing and is scheduled to attend an executive meeting of the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissions beginning Sept. 9.

Swanson, who missed meetings in May, June and July of this year, was reportedly at a doctor's appointment after calling in sick for last week's meeting. However, sources said Swansom visited commission offices momentarily while the other three commissioners were meeting.

Swanson lost a primary bid for renomination to the commission and will retire in January when a successor representing the western third of the state takes his seat.

The Kennard case has been pending before the commission since Feb. 26 when subscribers filed a complaint with the commission refusing to pay for local charges until service is upgraded.

A hearing was held and the commission staff determined phone service provided by Blair Telephone Co. was inadequate.

The proposed order directs Blair to give Kennard subscribers a 60% cut in their rates retroactive to Jan. 1, 1974. The order also directs Blair to keep those rates for local service in effect until the commission deems service to be "adequate." It was estimated unofficially that such an order would cost Blair telephone approximately $3,500 in lost revenue for a period from Jan. 1 to the present time. To the ratepayers, the reduction would mean roughly a $2.70 cut in the monthly bill.

Installation Order

The order also directs Blair to complete installation of one-party service at Kennard by March 1, 1975.

The commission order blames phone problems at Kennard on old equipment and poor management decisions by the family-owned firm.

Commission engineer Gerald Sasek said the 60% rate reduction was a compromise figure agreed to by communications chief Herb Sherdon after examining the firm's performance.

Whereas commission standards allow only eight trouble reports per 100 phones, Sasek said trouble reports in the Kennard exchange reached as high as 150 complaints per 100 phones.

While saying Blair's service was "roylaly screwed up," Gay questioned whether a refund would work to the benefit of subscribers. Gay said he has serious questions whether the commission has the authority to refund and whether the refund would inhibit improvements.

Haulers Given Rate Increase

The Nebraska Public Service Commission Tuesday granted intrastate haulers of dry goods a rate increase to compensate for recent wage increases mandated by union contracts.

The increase, effective Sept. 16, allows truckers to tack another 6% on their rates for loads under 5,000 pounds and 3% on loads 5,000 pounds or greater. The order also abolishes a separate fuel surcharge which had been granted truckers.

An analysis by the commission staff determined the increase is justified.

Singers' Son Getting Better

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The 4-year-old son of entertainers Johnny Cash and June Carter was reported improving at Vanderbilt Hospital Tuesday after a serious traffic accident.

The boy, John Carter Cash, was admitted Monday with serious head injuries. State Trooper Billy Mason quoted Cash's sister, Reba Hancock, the driver, as saying the open-top car overturned when it hit a mud puddle near the Cash estate in suburban Hendersonville.

The elder Cash, 41, was ordered by doctors to bow out as host of the local Jerry Lewis muscular dystrophy telethon because of exhaustion.

Fate Of Platte Valley Action Agency May Depend On Evaluation

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Grand Island — Determination of the fate of the OEO-funded Platte Valley Community Action Agency (PVCAA) awaits the release of an evaluation being prepared at the OEO regional office in Kansas City.

At PVCAA's request, a three-man OEO team investigated the controversial agency in July. The preliminary draft of its report is expected to be sent for comment to the agency next week, with the final draft expected about two weeks after that.

Once the Hall County board of supervisors has had a chance to see the study, it will probably call a special meeting to decide whether to follow through with its earlier decision to close down the agency, according to Supervisor Bernard J. Crick of Grand Island.

The seven-member board of supervisors unanimously withdrew its sponsorship of PVCAA in April, charging that the agency was top-heavy with costly administrative jobs and was duplicating existing services.

Sponsorship Necessary

PVCAA cannot operate without the sponsorship of some local government subdivision. Its officers have found the Grand Island city council unwilling to controvert the county board by extending city sponsorship.

The agency also operates in Merrick and Hamilton Counties; the Hamilton County board has also held a hearing and is considering opting out. But most of PVCAA's programs are headquartered in Grand Island.

"It looks like it's either Hall County sponsorship or phaseout," said PVCAA program developer Art Monson.

Jim Kohler, executive director of PVCAA since January, informed the supervisors after their initial decisions that they could not withdraw without going through federally specified procedures for "opting out" of sponsorship — including calling a public hearing.

Rebuttals

He made the following rebuttals of the board's charges:

—While most of PVCAA's programs are unique, some "complement similar service to delivery systems in the area." But "care is taken," he added, "to ensure that complementation does not become duplication."

And, Kohler said, PVCAA "is geared better than any other agency in Hall County to serve the low-income community and to administrate programs and monies earmarked specifically for that community."

—Salaries are a substantial part of the agency's budget because "community action programs are seldom synonymous with monetary assistance," he said. "We deal primarily with the delivery of service and assistance in the form of . . . people helping people to find needed assistance."

—Central administrative salaries account for only 12.1% of PVCAA's monthly $27,982 budget, he said. "I will match these administrative cost figures with those of virtually any other social service delivery system around with no fear at all of feeling even the slightest embarassment at the comparison."

Several of PVCAA's programs, such as Head Start, Family Planning and the alcoholism program, receive no administrative monies whatsoever, Kohler said.

Meeting with the PVCAA board of directors, Kohler said if he had been remiss in any way it was in not establishing better communication with local officials.

Later, on the advice of the county attorney, the board of supervisors softened their position enough to hold a public hearing in deference to the federal opting-out guidelines. Of 11 people testifying at the hearing, 10 were in favor of PVCAA.

Mrs. Billie Wetterer, vice president of the PVCAA board of directors, submitted a petition bearing some 1,500 signatures in support of the action agency.

At the hearing the supervisors were offered five options:

—continue the status quo;
—close down the agency;
—start a new agency with new staff;
—establish a public agency under county control to replace the present private, nonprofit, federally funded agency;

—form a study committee with county input to consider ways of improving the present agency.

Situation Uncertain

PVCAA advocates the study committee, Monson said. "Their (the board's) final word was, 'We'll let you know,' " he said. In the meantime, he said, uncertainty "makes it difficult to make decisions when you don't know you're going to be in existence six months from now."

Until they see the OEO report, the supervisors are "reaching out and trying to get the pro and con" from citizens and elected officials, said Supervisor Crick, whose district encompasses Grand Island's low-income neighborhood and the PVCAA headquarters.

The hearing, however, didn't change Crick's mind about eliminating PVCAA because "most of the people who were there that day were employes," he said. It would take something "extreme" to change his mind, he said.

Crick said he views some of the agency's services as duplicating existing services. He cited its alcoholism program as an example.

He also thinks there are "two or three high salaries there that could be eliminated," and charges the agency with incompetent management of funds.

Bill Left Unpaid

The latter charge stems from an incident in which Lutheran Hospital came to the board demanding that as PVCAA's sponsor it should compel the agency to pay its debt to the hospital for providing food for the Meals on Wheels program.

Crick acknowledged the value of programs such as Meals on Wheels, and the Senior Citizens' Center and bus service, all of which were initiated by PVCAA and then "spun off" under state or local control.

"Anything you can do for poor people is good," Crick said. "People are getting taken care of real nice . . . If we do happen to vote them (PVCAA) out, the first program I would consider taking under our wing is Head Start. That's a real good program."

But Crick said he would like to have the initiation of such programs under local control, and would be willing to consider the alternative of a new agency with "people appointed by the county board to handle government money spent in Hall County."

Another supervisor, Donald C. Marquard of Grand Island, heads the Central Nebraska Council on Alcoholism. He agrees with Crick in asserting that PVCAA is a waste of tax dollars, but denies any duplication between his office's service and PVCAA's alcoholism program.

"There hasn't been any problem," he said, explaining that alcoholism is "such a vast problem that we need everything we have" in combatting it.

'Where's The Good?'

A former defender of PVCAA, Marquard now delcares "there is a quite a bit of tax money coming into the three counties that doesn't seem to be doing a whole lot for the poor people . . . Billions and billions of dollars have been spent on OEO, and I don't know where the good is that's come out of it. OEO is going to have to go."

Adams County, he said, "gets along just as well or better than we do and they seem to be taking care of these people. And one thing for sure, they're not having all the hubbub we're having."

"Quite a few people have contacted us with concern for the Head Start program," he qualified. "We are willing to get behind any of these programs that are worthwhile and see that they survive."

But, Marquard said, "We've found in order to keep these things going we've had to take them over."

Marquard said the board "has never looked favorably" on PVCAA since six or seven years ago when, he said, the agency was involved in "a couple little marches down main street."

Agency Stopped Asking

At first, he said, PVCAA came to the board each year for reaffirmation of its sponsorship. But a federal ruling in about 1970 or '71, he said, purported to make sponsorship permanent unless "opting-out" procedures were followed. PVCAA stopped asking.

Since then, he said, the board had forgotten about its sponsorship of the federal agency until the Lutheran Hospital came forward recently, demanding help in collecting its bill from PVCAA.

That incident, he said, "really started things boiling."

Marquard said he has been reading for two years about counties taking over action agencies and operating them themselves. That, he said, is one of the alternatives to be considered.

Pension Act May Be Less Than Rock-Solid

©The New York Times

By RICHARD D. LYONS

Washington — The Labor Day setting was perfect for President Ford to sign a law that in his words "will probably give more benefits and rights and success in the area of labor-management than almost anything in the history of the country."

The setting was the White House Rose Garden, flowers in full bloom, with white-jacketed waiters serving iced tea and lemonade to the elite of industry and labor who arrived at the executive mansion in long black limousines.

The rhetoric more than matched the scene, with congressmen, union leaders and the President stating repeatedly that the signing of the pension reform act had made it a truly "historic Labor Day."

Complex In 247 Pages

But now that the self-congratulations have abated, a less flowery appraisal of the 247-page act, whose complexities have led it to be dubbed "the full employment act for lawyers and accountants," tends to indicate that it may contain less than meets the rhetoric.

One congressional staff aide said that his office had fielded many telephone calls from constituents who had either retired or were about to retire and who thought the new law entitled them to pensions when it does not.

"A lot of people looking for a panacea are being disappointed," the aide said.

The few critics who comprehend the intricacies of what is formally titled the Employe Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 contend that the law contains serious omissions and deficiencies and that the measure has been oversold to the public.

Specially, the act's provisions dealing with a worker's right to and eligibility for a pension cover only about one-third of the labor force — at least 23 million people but hardly the total body of American labor.

Additionally, the act singles out for exclusion perhaps 10 million workers employed by federal, state and local governments, some church groups such as teachers in parochial schools, and workers eligible for profit sharing, stock dividend and other uncommon retirement programs.

No Guarantee

In fact, the act does not guarantee a pension to anyone.

Since the pension system, with the exception of Social Security, is entirely voluntary, the act merely says that those corporate and union groups having pensions must abide by a certain set of rules. Even the specific amounts of retirement benefits are not set.

One of the most knowledgeable and vocal critics of the reform act is Merton C. Bernstein, who is a professor of law at Ohio State University, a former attorney for the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, which helped draw up the legislation, and an expert in pension legislation.

"It will be a long time before the people realize that they've been had," Bernstein said. "That's the thing that discourages me most."

He cited four areas, as follows, in which he said he felt the act was deficient:

— The Pension Benefit Guarantee Corp., a new federal agency created by the act to insure the pension rights of workers, is in a serious financial situation from the onset and "in very shaky condition." Corporation officials expect to collect $23 million in premiums the first full year of operation, yet, Bernstein said, it might be expected that three times that amount would have to be paid out.

— Some features of the act, he said, now make it more attractive for a company either to scrap its existing pension program or offer none at all to the rank and file of employes, while aiding higher salaried executives to set up their own personal plans.

— The act is so complicated, that it may deter a small company from setting up a pension fund because the fees of attorneys and actuaries would be so great. The notion received some support when a legal publishing house here announced that it was about to start a bi-weekly news letter dealing with the law's intricacies.

— The act involves a notion that workers entitled to benefits in a pension plan are assured of eligibility after only five years of employment. While true on the face of it, Bernstein said, this might mean that a worker would be eligible to receive as little as $75 a year.

"The public has been lulled into a false sense of security," Bernstein said, "because very few people are aware of the shortcomings of the act."

While conceding that the act is not perfect, Rep. Peter A. Peyser, R-N.Y., took the view that the new law would serve "as a stimulus to bring pensions into places they have never been before today."

Maddox Loses Nomination Bid

By The Associated Press

Lt. Gov. Lester Maddox, Georgia's segregationist governor of the 1960s, lost his bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination to State Rep. George Busbee in Tuesday's runoff election.

Busbee, a white who had the backing of black civil rights leader Julian Bond, took an early lead and never trailed.

Busbee, the majority leader of the Georgia House, refused to claim victory, but he said: "It does look good."

Maddox, who was governor from 1966 to 1970, did not concede. But he said, "I think possibly voter apathy — people thinking that we had it made — might have been part of the problem."

Maddox feuded with Busbee throughout the runoff campaign. When asked if he would support Busbee in the general election, Maddox said: "I can't support anyone who hasn't been honest."

Maddox led the 12-candidate field in the Aug. 13 primary, but he failed to win 50 per cent of the vote and was forced into the runoff against Busbee, the second-place finisher.

In the Republican gubernatorial runoff, retired Army officer Harold Dye held a slim lead over Macon Mayor Ronnie Thompson, who has issued "shoot-to-kill" orders to his police force in a crackdown on crime.

With 1,383 precincts reporting, Dye had 10,513 votes to 10,223 for Thompson.

1972 Crash Suits Settled By Airline

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Eastern Airlines has spent $35 million to settle most of the suits arising from the 1972 crash of a jumbo jet in the Everglades that claimed 101 lives.

Settlements ranged from $150,000 to $850,000. The highest settlement went to Kuneko Goldfluss of New York City, whose back was broken and whose husband, Bernard, was killed when the L1011 jet bellied into a swamp 20 miles west of Miami on Dec. 29, 1972.

"I don't want to talk about the money," Mrs. Goldfluss said. "It can't bring my husband back. I try to keep myself occupied, but emotionally, I'm sick."

Ninety-six passengers and five crewmen died in the crash. Another 77 passengers and eight crewmen survived. Some escaped with nothing more than scratches; others are still being treated for injuries.

Court records here show a total of 82 suits were filed. About 60 were settled in Florida courts. The rest are either unsettled or have been transferred to New York for determination of damage amounts.

Eastern, which had $100 million to $150 million in insurance spread among four major firms, admitted liability after the National Transportation Safety Board blamed crew error for the crash.

The board said the flight crew was preoccupied with a burned-out cockpit warning lght and did not realize until seconds before the crash that the airplane had descended from its 2,000-foot altitude.

Ronald Infantino, who would not reveal how much money he received, said, "No amount of money can make up for what happened."

Infantino and his wife, Fara, 25, were returning from their honeymoon when the New York-to-Miami flight crashed minutes before touchdown. Mrs. Infantino was killed.

As the jet slid through the swamp and ripped apart, Infantino was thrown 100 yards and landed in the watery sawgrass. His clothes were torn off, his right arm was slashed and his left arm was broken.

"All I could hear for hours was screaming," he said. "Everybody was screaming — including me."

During a 40-day hospital stay in which he was given skin grafts and treated for gangrene, Infantino met a nurse named Susan, whose fiance was killed in an auto accident the year before. They are now married.

Infantino still travels by air, "but I don't enjoy it any more. I don't take life for granted the way I used to. It's too precious."

Fiery Collision Leaves No One Seriously Hurt

Five persons escaped serious injury about 1 a.m. Tuesday morning in a fiery, head-on collision on Cornhusker Hwy. between N.W. 1st and N.W. 4th.

Police said a car driven by Gregory Sorenson, 23, of 1329 C, and a car driven by James G. Rector, 19, of 1545 R collided; then the Sorenson car then burst into flame.

The Rector auto was eastbound and passing another car when the collision with the Sorenson car occurred, police said. Both cars were declared a total loss, for a combined monetary loss of about $6,000.

Sorenson was treated for a broken foot and facial injuries at Lincoln General Hospital and released. Two of three passengers in the Rector car also sustained minor injuries, but did not require emergency treatment, police said.

Youths Arrested For Burglaries

Six persons ranging in age from 16 to 21 have been arrested in connection with a series of garage burglaries, according to police. No charges have been filed.

Police said they have recovered about 15 toolboxes, three rifles and an assortment of tools from a garage at 3926 Baldwin.

Police made the discovery after answering a call at 3604 St. Paul in which car windows and a boat were spray-painted. Police went to the Baldwin address because a resident there was named as a suspect in the vandalism.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 9-4

Saying Goodbye Can Be Sad Task

STAR PHOTO

STEVE . . . saying goodbye to Snowball.

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Fourteen-year-old Steve Yoesel was one of the saddest exhibitors at the State Fair Tuesday.

He skipped the first day of school to say good-bye to Snowball and Bumblebee.

His two steers were shipped off to Omaha to be slaughtered for the 4-H carcass contest. After the judging, the beef will be sold to slaughterhouses.

No, Steve didn't win any championships. He didn't even rake in any purple ribbons.

'Learned A Lot'

Despite the letdowns, the 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Yoesel (Pronounced Yazel) of Falls City said he "learned a lot" and he'll be back next year to try again.

"I found out they (the judges) are looking for more bodied animals, higher off the ground and longer through the loin," Steve said. "At the time I chose mine, I thought I chose the right ones, but I guess not."

The judges told him his Charolais-Hereford crossbred was too fat and his shorthorn, which had to compete with the mixed-breeds because there was no shorthorn division, was too short and stocky.

Picked Up Tricks

Steve said he also picked up a few grooming tricks from other exhibitors.

Instead of the usual scrub down and brush jobs before judging, many 4-H'ers rub their cattle with a special soap to make their coats soft and shiny, he said.

Some youngsters mix up a potion of alcohol, hair tonic and bay rum for fragrance. Not only do their cattles' coats glisten, but they're nice to sniff.

Winners or not, Snowball and Bumblebee have become pretty special to Steve, his two brothers and little sister, his mother said.

And Mrs. Yoesel knows firsthand just how attached a person can become to an animal.

As a teen-ager, Mrs. Yoesel, then Doris Hillyer, led Cookie, a Guernsey cow, through state fair and Ak-Sar-Ben showrings.

Changes Noted

Over the years, Mrs. Yoesel said she's noted quite a few changes in the beef competition.

"It used to be the short, blocky type steer was what they wanted," she said. "Now it's just the opposite."

Like many 4-H'ers and their parents, the Yoesels wondered aloud if they can afford to keep up with the competition.

Not only will Steve probably loose money on his steers, once the feed bill is paid, but it's getting more and more expensive to purchase the high-grade beef that invariably wins the championship money.

"It gets to be if you don't put a lot of money into and animal, you won't get the good ribbons," Mrs. Yoesel said. "I hope they never lose sight of what the object of 4-H always has been — to learn."

Missouri River Said U.S.'s Most Polluted

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Missouri River between Sioux City, Iowa, and Kansas City, Mo., is the most polluted major waterway in the nation, according to a new U.S. water survey.

But the same survey rated the upper Missouri, between Montana and Sioux City, the cleanest waterway in the country.

The 667-page Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) report studies 35 sections of 22 major waterways.

The Missouri between Sioux City and Kansas City carries heavy loads of viruses, bacteria from animal and human wastes, metals, sulfates, pesticides and other chemicals, the report says.

It lists the major causes as inadequately treated sewage, runoff from animal feedlots, extensive irrigation, packing plant and other industry discharges and soil erosion.

The report lists the five dirtiest waterways as the lower Missouri, the Mississippi River in the Minneapolis area, the upper Arkansas River and the middle Missouri.

The cleanest were the upper Missouri, the Columbia, the lower Tennessee, the Snake, the Willamette, Boston Harbor and the upper Mississippi.

Pollution caused by sewage bacteria has declined over the past five years, but nitrogen and phoshorus pollution—primarily from fertilizer runoff—is getting worse, the report said.

The Missiouri's fecal coliform bacteria level, from human and animal wastes, is 10 times in excess of water quality standards for swimming and drinking downstream in the Omaha area, the report says.

It blamed runoff and discharges from industries and sewage treatment plants.

The report shows less than 50 per cent of major water contaminants are being removed by sewage treatment plants in Sioux City, Council Bluffs, Omaha and Bellevue, Neb., all located on the Missouri.

The report shows a large treatment plant serving 167,500 persons in the Omaha area is removing only 39 per cent of the pollutants.

No Conflict Foreseen With Business — Rocky

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice president-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller said Tuesday he foresaw no conflict of interest between his multimilliondollar business holdings and the nation's second highest office.

"Your basic assumption will be proven wrong, that a great influence exists," Rockefeller told newsmen. "My only constitutional duty would be to preside over the Senate, and the conflict of interest there is rather limited."

However, he added that should any conflict arise, "I would have no problems in taking whatever steps are necessary."

Rockefeller repeated his pledge to comply with the laws requiring financial disclosure during confirmation hearings before Congress — save for certain unspecified details of his personal fortune.

"I keep that option open, but I feel the public is entitled to a full and clear disclosure," Rockefeller said, in his first appearance at his New York office since his nomination for vice president last month by President Ford.

While an active aspirant for the presidency, Rockefeller once scorned the vice presidency as a standby post and suggested it was not for him.

"That was true 15 years ago, but not at this moment," Rockefeller said Tuesday.

The former New York governor reiterated an endorsement of a statement by Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., that former President Richard M. Nixon had been hanged and ought not to be drawn and quartered. But Rockefeller added:

"That doesn't mean that whatever appropriate steps need to be taken shouldn't be taken."

That, he declared was a matter to be decided by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

'Trouble Light' Banned; Judge To Order Recall

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington — A federal judge Tuesday ordered a permanent ban on the manufacture, distribution and sale of the household "trouble light."

U.S. District Judge George L. Hart Jr. also said he will require the manufacturer, the A. K. Electric Corp. of New York, to recall all unsold lights and provide a refund or replacement to consumers who request it. The company has sold nearly 200,000 of the lights.

Hart, who last Thursday asked news executives at the major television networks for help in publicizing the danger of the trouble light, Tuesday praised the news media for their "magnificent cooperation" and said there was no need to further alert the public.

Attorneys for the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission asked Hart to keep the case open so they could evaluate the effect of the publicity and come back to court for further help if they were not satisfied.

Hart replied that he would order the distributors of the light to report to the commission for the next 10 weeks on how many lights were returned to stores.

The product, which is cimmonly used in household and automobile repairs, consists of a long card attached to a light bulb protected by a metal cage.

The hazard in the light results from the soft plastic handle which may allow the user's hand to come in contact with the electric current, the commission had charged.

Five-State Crop Said 575 Million Bushels

Topeka, Kan. (AP) — The final winter wheat production in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado and New Mexico may reach 575 million bushels, the Santa Fe crop report for September says.

This compares with the record crop for the five states in 1973 of 708.5 million bushels.

York Man Is Charged In Accident

York (AP) — Charges stemming from a fatal hit-and-run accident last Wednesday were formally filed against a rural York man Tuesday morning.

York County Atty. Joseph McClusky said he filed the charges in York County Court against Howard Gnauden.

McClusky said the charges filed included: motor vehicle homicide, driving while under the influence of intoxicants, leaving the scene of a personal injury accident and careless driving.

Gnauden's pickup truck was impounded following the death of Arthur Harig, formerly of Superior.

Harig, who had been in this area looking for work, was struck and killed last Wednesday as he hitch-hiked along U.S. Highway 34 about 5½ miles west of here.

Gnauden was released under a $1,000 bond, and a preliminary hearing on the charges was set for Sept. 25, according to McCluskey.

Final Rites Set For Boy Killed On Rope Swing

Hershey (AP) — Services are scheduled at the First Baptist Church in North Platte Wednesday for Bruce Nason Housman, 11, rural Hershey boy who strangled in a rope swing Sunday.

Walt Mullikin, county attorney and coroner, said the boy caught his head in the loop of the rope.

Mullikin said young Housman was using a single strand rope tied to a tree to swing from a pile of baled hay. The boy was playing alone at the time.

Bruce was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Housman, who live 5½ miles southeast of Hershey.

Other survivors are a brother, two sisters and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Jepsen of North Platte and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd James of Hayes Center.

ETV To Air Amnesty Show

A black veteran, convicted felon, business executive and a member of Veterans of Foreign Wars will discuss amnesty for draft evaders and deserters from the Vietnam War on "Perspectives on Amnesty," a special program scheduled for 9 p.m. Sept. 18 on Nebraska ETV.

The program was produced by the United Ministry in Higher Education in Milwaukee, Wis. Sponsors include Wisconsin churches and social groups.

Charges Result From Shooting Incident At Fair

A 26-year-old man was charged Tuesday with two felony counts of shooting with intent to kill in connection with an incident at the State Fair last Friday.

Lancaster County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront set Oct. 16 for preliminary hearing for Henry B. Johnson, who was released on $5,000 bond.

Johnson was specifically charged with shooting with intent to kill William J. Kanaley, a carnival worker, and M. B. Ibach, a state trooper from Chadron.

According to officers, a man was allegedly spotted waving a pistol around in the midway area and when asked by officers to turn over the gun he fled, turned and shot four times.

The man, who began to run after firing the shots, was apprehended by officers before leaving the fairgrounds.

Arson Investigated

Davenport, Iowa (UPI) - The Davenport Police and Fire Departments were investigating the deliberate setting of a fire in a men's restroom in City Hall here.

Cold Snap Threatens Grain Sorghum Crop

By The Associated Press

Farmers can stop worrying about the heat. According to the latest crop report, they can start worrying about the cold.

The Division of Agricultural Statistics reported Tuesday that "cooler temperatures slowed maturity of crops and have caused concern to many farmers as to the possibility of an early frost....

"Immature grain sorghum heads are quite vulnerable to frost at this stage, but temperatures were at the low point (early Monday) for only a brief period of time."

There was some good news to go with the unsettling thought of an early frost.

Irrigated corn remains in fair to good condition throughout the state, and one county reported irrigated corn in excellent condition. That marked the first "excellent" report since the drought began.

Most irrigators have stopped watering, and rain and cooler temperatures have helped farms catch up on soil moisture, the report said.

However, dryland corn remains in mostly poor to fair condition, with only one county reporting the crop in good shape.

Recent rain has brought some greening, and helped the forage content, but not the grain. Silage cutting is under way throughout the state.

In general, about 85% of irrigated and dryland corn acreages are in or past the dough stage. Normal percentage is 100% at this time, the crop report said; about 85% of the crop has dented, 65% is normal.

Spider mites still trouble corn in the Panhandle, but the situation has stabilized in the remainder of the state.

Sorghum, soybean and alfalfa conditions continued to improve, the report said.

Rainfall received throughout the state during the past week, according to the National Weather Service, included:

Burwell	.32	North Platte	.28
Chadron	.02	Omaha	.76
Grand Island	.20	Scottsbluff	.09
Lincoln	.80	Valentine	.11

Precipitation via sections received since the beginning of the growing season, April 1, as compared to longtime averages follows:

Northwest — 7.50 inches (1974); 11.28 inches (normal).
North Central — 10.50; 13.65.
Northeast — 15.10; 16.00.
Central — 12.60; 14.76.
East Central — 13.80; 17.18.
Southwest — 11.20; 12.84.
South Central — 11.40; 14.85.
Southeast — 12.70; 18.43.

Low Temperature Records Bettered

Low temperature records toppled from border to border in Nebraska early Tuesday with North Platte's 26 degrees the state's coldest reading.

The wintertime reading bettered North Platte's old record of 35 set Sept. 3, 1952.

At Grand Island, the National Weather Service said Tuesday's low of 34 degrees was the lowest ever recorded there so early in the season. The previous low for the date was 39 degrees.

Lincoln's 35 degrees Tuesday bettered the old record of 45 for the date, set back in 1891.

Scottsbluff reported a reading of 33 degrees, down from the record of 35 degrees set in 1905.

Norfolk's 34 also set a new record for the date, three degrees below the record set in 1937.

Omaha's 34 was 11 degrees below the previous record established in 1952.

A summary of August weather conditions in the Omaha area reveals the average maximum temperature for the month was 82 degrees while the average minimum was 58.9 degrees. In other words, the average temperature was 70.5 degrees, or 5.1 degrees below normal.

For Omaha, last month was the coldest August since 1964 and the fifth coldest in Omaha's weather history.

Meanwhile, somewhat warmer weather is in the forecast for Nebraska Wednesday with highs in the lower 70s for the east and mid and upper 70s in the west. Low readings in the 40s are predicted for Wednesday night.

Partly cloudy weather is expected Thursday with highs in the 70s throughout the state, according to the NWS forecast.

Holstein Residents Seek Damages

Hastings (AP) — A June 30 leak in an anhydrous ammonia tank at Holstein has resulted in the filing of a civil suit against the owners of the tank. A group of seven Holstein residents filed the suit asking $2,560 in damages for loss of vegetation, nursery stock, lawns and flowers. Named as the defendant in the action, which was filed in Adams County District Court, is the Juniata Farmers' Cooperative Association.

Over $200,000 Pledged During Telethon

Omaha (AP) — Donations of more than $200,000 were pledged in Nebraska and western Iowa during a 20-hour telethon for muscular dystrophy. Spokesman Ken Kontor said the telethon, broadcast nationally and carried over station KMTV, raised $200,278, compared with $164,285 last year. Kontor said the national total was more than $16 million.

Felony Charges May Be Filed In Omaha Fight

Omaha (AP) — An 18-year-old Omaha man may face felony charges in connection with a fight Sunday with the 22-year-old son of Rep. William Scherle, R-Iowa.

John R. Scherle of Omaha was released from a hospital Monday after being admitted Sunday with head injuries. Police said he was injured in a fight outside an Omaha bar.

John Scherle told police he had an argument Saturday night in the bar with the suspect. He said he was met by the man after closing early Sunday. Scherle said the man and several companions knocked him down.

MERSHON . . . began when he was 18.

Cook Druggist At It 60 Years

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Cook — Same name, same location, many of the same loyal families as customers. And R. D. Mershon is the same home town kid who bought the drug store 60 years ago.

"Straight out of high school," he did lack a squeak or two in the joints which have since shown up. At 78, he is among the eldest pharmacists in the state and is nearly as active as he was at 18.

At least eight hours per day find the affable Johnson Countian putting up prescriptions for customers from half a dozen communities. His store, though by his own appraisal "old-fashioned," has a stock of everything from eyewash to wall paper.

Sodas Missing

Sadly missing, however, are the sodas which were of local fame for decades. They took leave seven years ago at the same time Ralph's heart attack arrived.

"The doc laid down the law — no more nights and no more Sunday work," recalled the oldster. "The old soda tables were removed while I was still in the hospital and it was a good thing. Used to work seven days a week and way past midnight on Saturdays — so late I'd take home the Sunday paper. That was all damn foolishness."

His first few years, Ralph partnered with his father, H. M. Mershon, then bought the store on his own in 1918. He had graduated the year before from Babcock School of Pharmacy in Des Moines, Iowa.

At Front Counter

Until her death 1½ years ago, Mrs. Mershon (Jennie) had been at the front counter while her husband filled prescriptions in back. Their daughter Lois, now Mrs. Walter Mannschreck of Hubbell, had grown up in the business.

Now "chief clerk" with some 30 years' experience is Mrs. Walter Ruhga, while Mrs. Duane Carman also assists. The store is still a Saturday nighter, though only until nine o'clock.

As a pharmacist, the Cook man marvels at the medical progress since he hung up his certificate during World War I. The discovery of sulfas, penicillin and the countless antibiotics "have kept me scratching this old head."

On School Board

The village board and Cook's Commercial Club both were beneficiaries of his time, but some 20 years on the school board was his biggest contribution. He is also active in the United Methodist Church.

A lifelong love of baseball is the closest he's had to a hobby outside of the store itself. Once or twice a summer he makes it to Kansas City to give "my Roylas" a personal boost from the grandstand.

Today will officially mark his 60th anniversary in the store, but he plans nothing special. He is content instead with the memories of a decade ago when some 700 persons — twice the population of Cook — turned out for an open house.

"The Missus was with me then and later on we observed our golden wedding anniversary together. We've had our flowers."

Labor Day Death Toll 8; Crash Tuesday Claims 1

By The Associated Press

Nebraska's Highways claimed their eighth Labor Day fatality early Tuesday morning, with the discovery of a one-car mishap near Lorton, and a 22-year-old Kearney man died Tuesday afternoon in a one-vehicle accident near Kearney.

The Nebraska State Patrol said Dan Ahrends, 19, of rural Talmage, was killed late Monday night when his car left the highway about one-half mile north of Lorton, flew 79 feet threw the air, slammed into a creek bank, then flipped on its top.

Investigators said the victim's father and a brother discovered the wreckage, and theorized that Ahrends may have fallen asleep at the wheel.

Buffalo County authorities said the identity of the Kearney victim would be withheld until at least Wednesday morning, as efforts are made to contact relatives.

However, investigators said the victim was a passenger in a jeep that left a county road about four miles northwest of Kearney, and rolled.

The driver of the jeep, a 20-year old Kearney man, was treated for minor injuries at a local hospital, the released.

Just before the mishap, the victim apparently unbuckled his seat belt to crank down the windshield of the jeep, and had not re-buckled the belt when the accident occurred. The driver was wearing a seat belt.

Ironically, the vehicle had a roll-bar, and was not heavily damaged.

The victim of another Labor Day traffic victim was still being withheld Tuesday night, as the State Patrol was apparently having troubles in locating relatives.

The victim, a woman, died early Monday afternoon, when the semi-trailer she was struck by a Union Pacific freight train at a crossing just east of Lexington.

The deaths upped the state's 1974 traffic toll to 266, compared with 275 on this date last year.

Phone Action Prevented By Commission Absences

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Absences Tuesday prevented the Nebraska Public Service Commission from acting on an unprecedented proposal to grant 200 phone subscribers in Kennard a 60% reduction in basic rates.

Commissioners Duane Gay and James Munnelly agreed to hold the order until Sept. 16 over the objection of Commissioner Eric Rasmussen who said the commission had studied the matter long enough.

Gay, who expressed reservations about the proposal, asked for the delay to give Commissioners Robert Marland and John Swanson an opportunity to vote.

On Vacation

Marland is vacationing and is scheduled to attend an executive meeting of the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissions beginning Sept. 9.

Swanson, who missed meetings in May, June and July of this year, was reportedly at a doctor's appointment after calling in sick for last week's meeting. However, sources said Swansom visited commission offices momentarily while the other three commissioners were meeting.

Swanson lost a primary bid for renomination to the commission and will retire in January when a successor representing the western third of the state takes his seat.

The Kennard case has been pending before the commission since Feb. 26 when subscribers filed a complaint with the commission refusing to pay for local charges until service is upgraded.

A hearing was held and the commission staff determined phone service provided by Blair Telephone Co. was inadequate.

The proposed order directs Blair to give Kennard subscribers a 60% cut in their rates retroactive to Jan. 1, 1974. The order also directs Blair to keep those rates for local service in effect until the commission deems service to be "adequate." It was estimated unofficially that such an order would cost Blair telephone approximately $3,500 in lost revenue for a period from Jan. 1 to the present time. To the ratepayers, the reduction would mean roughly a $2.70 cut in the monthly bill.

Installation Order

The order also directs Blair to complete installation of one-party service at Kennard by March 1, 1975.

The commission order blames phone problems at Kennard on old equipment and poor management decisions by the family-owned firm.

Commission engineer Gerald Sasek said the 60% rate reduction was a compromise figure agreed to by communications chief Herb Sherdon after examining the firm's performance.

Whereas commission standards allow only eight trouble reports per 100 phones, Sasek said trouble reports in the Kennard exchange reached as high as 150 complaints per 100 phones.

While saying Blair's service was "roylaly screwed up," Gay questioned whether a refund would work to the benefit of subscribers. Gay said he has serious questions whether the commission has the authority to refund and whether the refund would inhibit improvements.

Haulers Given Rate Increase

The Nebraska Public Service Commission Tuesday granted intrastate haulers of dry goods a rate increase to compensate for recent wage increases mandated by union contracts.

The increase, effective Sept. 16, allows truckers to tack another 6% on their rates for loads under 5,000 pounds and 3% on loads 5,000 pounds or greater. The order also abolishes a separate fuel surcharge which had been granted truckers.

An analysis by the commission staff determined the increase is justified.

Singers' Son Getting Better

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The 4-year-old son of entertainers Johnny Cash and June Carter was reported improving at Vanderbilt Hospital Tuesday after a serious traffic accident.

The boy, John Carter Cash, was admitted Monday with serious head injuries. State Trooper Billy Mason quoted Cash's sister, Reba Hancock, the driver, as saying the open-top car overturned when it hit a mud puddle near the Cash estate in suburban Hendersonville.

The elder Cash, 41, was ordered by doctors to bow out as host of the local Jerry Lewis muscular dystrophy telethon because of exhaustion.

Fate Of Platte Valley Action Agency May Depend On Evaluation

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Grand Island — Determination of the fate of the OEO-funded Platte Valley Community Action Agency (PVCAA) awaits the release of an evaluation being prepared at the OEO regional office in Kansas City.

At PVCAA's request, a three-man OEO team investigated the controversial agency in July. The preliminary draft of its report is expected to be sent for comment to the agency next week, with the final draft expected about two weeks after that.

Once the Hall County board of supervisors has had a chance to see the study, it will probably call a special meeting to decide whether to follow through with its earlier decision to close down the agency, according to Supervisor Bernard J. Crick of Grand Island.

The seven-member board of supervisors unanimously withdrew its sponsorship of PVCAA in April, charging that the agency was top-heavy with costly administrative jobs and was duplicating existing services.

Sponsorship Necessary

PVCAA cannot operate without the sponsorship of some local government subdivision. Its officers have found the Grand Island city council unwilling to controvert the county board by extending city sponsorship.

The agency also operates in Merrick and Hamilton Counties; the Hamilton County board has also held a hearing and is considering opting out. But most of PVCAA's programs are headquartered in Grand Island.

"It looks like it's either Hall County sponsorship or phaseout," said PVCAA program developer Art Monson.

Jim Kohler, executive director of PVCAA since January, informed the supervisors after their initial decisions that they could not withdraw without going through federally specified procedures for "opting out" of sponsorship — including calling a public hearing.

Rebuttals

He made the following rebuttals of the board's charges:

—While most of PVCAA's programs are unique, some "complement similar service to delivery systems in the area." But "care is taken," he added, "to ensure that complementation does not become duplication."

And, Kohler said, PVCAA "is geared better than any other agency in Hall County to serve the low-income community and to administrate programs and monies earmarked specifically for that community."

—Salaries are a substantial part of the agency's budget because "community action programs are seldom synonymous with monetary assistance," he said. "We deal primarily with the delivery of service and assistance in the form of . . . people helping people to find needed assistance."

—Central administrative salaries account for only 12.1% of PVCAA's monthly $27,982 budget, he said. "I will match these administrative cost figures with those of virtually any other social service delivery system around with no fear at all of feeling even the slightest embarassment at the comparison."

Several of PVCAA's programs, such as Head Start, Family Planning and the alcoholism program, receive no administrative monies whatsoever, Kohler said.

Meeting with the PVCAA board of directors, Kohler said if he had been remiss in any way it was in not establishing better communication with local officials.

Later, on the advice of the county attorney, the board of supervisors softened their position enough to hold a public hearing in deference to the federal opting-out guidelines. Of 11 people testifying at the hearing, 10 were in favor of PVCAA.

Mrs. Billie Wetterer, vice president of the PVCAA board of directors, submitted a petition bearing some 1,500 signatures in support of the action agency.

At the hearing the supervisors were offered five options:

—continue the status quo;
—close down the agency;
—start a new agency with new staff;
—establish a public agency under county control to replace the present private, nonprofit, federally funded agency;
—form a study committee with county input to consider ways of improving the present agency.

Situation Uncertain

PVCAA advocates the study committee, Monson said. "Their (the board's) final word was, 'We'll let you know,'" he said. In the meantime, he said, uncertainty "makes it difficult to make decisions when you don't know you're going to be in existence six months from now."

Until they see the OEO report, the supervisors are "reaching out and trying to get the pro and con" from citizens and elected officials, said Supervisor Crick, whose district encompasses Grand Island's low-income neighborhood and the PVCAA headquarters.

The hearing, however, didn't change Crick's mind about eliminating PVCAA because "most of the people who were there that day were employes," he said. It would take something "extreme" to change his mind, he said.

Crick said he views some of the agency's services as duplicating existing services. He cited its alcoholism program as an example.

He also thinks there are "two or three high salaries there that could be eliminated," and charges the agency with incompetent management of funds.

The latter charge stems from an incident in which Lutheran Hospital came to the board demanding that as PVCAA's sponsor it should compel the agency to pay its debt to the hospital for providing food for the Meals on Wheels program.

Crick acknowledged the value of programs such as Meals on Wheels, and the Senior Citizens' Center and bus service, all of which were initiated by PVCAA and then "spun off" under state or local control.

"Anything you can do for poor people is good," Crick said. "People are getting taken care of real nice . . . If we do happen to vote them (PVCAA) out, the first program I would consider taking under our wing is Head Start. That's a real good program."

But Crick said he would like to have the initiation of such programs under local control, and would be willing to consider the alternative of a new agency with "people appointed by the county board to handle government money spent in Hall County."

Another supervisor, Donald C. Marquard of Grand Island, heads the Central Nebraska Council on Alcoholism. He agrees with Crick in asserting that PVCAA is a waste of tax dollars, but denies any duplication between his office's service and PVCAA's alcoholism program.

"There hasn't been any problem," he said, explaining that alcoholism is "such a vast problem that we need everything we have" in combatting it.

'Where's The Good?'

A former defender of PVCAA, Marquard now declares "there is a quite a bit of tax money coming into the three counties that doesn't seem to be doing a whole lot for the poor people . . . Billions and billions of dollars have been spent on OEO, and I don't know where the good is that's come out of it. OEO is going to have to go."

Adams County, he said, "gets along just as well or better than we do and they seem to be taking care of these people. And one thing for sure, they're not having all the hubbub we're having."

"Quite a few people have contacted us with concern for the Head Start program," he qualified. "We are willing to get behind any of these programs that are worthwhile and see that they survive."

But, Marquard said, "We've found in order to keep these things going we've had to take them over."

Marquard said the board "has never looked favorably" on PVCAA since six or seven years ago when, he said, the agency was involved in "a couple little marches down main street."

Agency Stopped Asking

At first, he said, PVCAA came to the board each year for reaffirmation of its sponsorship. But a federal ruling in about 1970 or '71, he said, purported to make sponsorship permanent unless "opting-out" procedures were followed. PVCAA stopped asking.

Since then, he said, the board had forgotten about its sponsorship of the federal agency until the Lutheran Hospital came forward recently, demanding help in collecting its bill from PVCAA.

That incident, he said, "really started things boiling."

Marquard said he has been reading for two years about counties taking over action agencies and operating them themselves. That, he said, is one of the alternatives to be considered.

Pension Act May Be Less Than Rock-Solid

©The New York Times

By RICHARD D. LYONS

Washington — The Labor Day setting was perfect for President Ford to sign a law that in his words "will probably give more benefits and rights and success in the area of labor-management than almost anything in the history of the country."

The setting was the White House Rose Garden, flowers in full bloom, with white-jacketed waiters serving iced tea and lemonade to the elite of industry and labor who arrived at the executive mansion in long black limousines.

The rhetoric more than matched the scene, with congressmen, union leaders and the President stating repeatedly that the signing of the pension reform act had made it a truly "historic Labor Day."

Complex In 247 Pages

But now that the self-congratulations have abated, a less flowery appraisal of the 247-page act, whose complexities have led it to be dubbed "the full employment act for lawyers and accountants," tends to indicate that it may contain less than meets the rhetoric.

One congressional staff aide said that his office had fielded many telephone calls from constituents who had either retired or were about to retire and who thought the new law entitled them to pensions when it does not.

"A lot of people looking for a panacea are being disappointed," the aide said.

The few critics who comprehend the intricacies of what is formally titled the Employe Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 contend that the law contains serious omissions and deficiencies and that the measure has been oversold to the public.

Specially, the act's provisions dealing with a worker's right to and eligibility for a pension cover only about one-third of the labor force — at least 23 million people but hardly the total body of American labor.

Additionally, the act singles out for exclusion perhaps 10 million workers employed by federal, state and local governments, some church groups such as teachers in parochial schools, and workers eligible for profit sharing, stock dividend and other uncommon retirement programs.

No Guarantee

In fact, the act does not guarantee a pension to anyone.

Since the pension system, with the exception of Social Security, is entirely voluntary, the act merely says that those corporate and union groups having pensions must abide by a certain set of rules. Even the specific amounts of retirement benefits are not set.

One of the most knowledgeable and vocal critics of the reform act is Merton C. Bernstein, who is a professor of law at Ohio State University, a former attorney for the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, which helped draw up the legislation, and an expert in pension legislation.

"It will be a long time before the people realize that they've been had," Bernstein said. "That's the thing that discourages me most."

He cited four areas, as follows, in which he said he felt the act was deficient:

— The Pension Benefit Guarantee Corp., a new federal agency created by the act to insure the pension rights of workers, is in a serious financial situation from the onset and "in very shaky condition." Corporation officials expect to collect $23 million in premiums the first full year of operation, yet, Bernstein said, it might be expected that three times that amount would have to be paid out.

— Some features of the act, he said, now make it more attractive for a company either to scrap its existing pension program or offer none at all to the rank and file of employes, while aiding higher salaried executives to set up their own personal plans.

— The act is so complicated, that it may deter a small company from setting up a pension fund because the fees of attorneys and actuaries would be so great. The notion received some support when a legal publishing house here announced that it was about to start a bi-weekly news letter dealing with the law's intricacies.

— The act involves a notion that workers entitled to benefits in a pension plan are assured of eligibility after only five years of employment. While true on the face of it, Bernstein said, this might mean that a worker would be eligible to receive as little as $75 a year.

"The public has been lulled into a false sense of security," Bernstein said, "because very few people are aware of the shortcomings of the act."

While conceding that the act is not perfect, Rep. Peter A. Peyser, R-N.Y., took the view that the new law would serve "as a stimulus to bring pensions into places they have never been before today."

WINNER ... Busbee with wife, Mary Beth.

Maddox Loses Nomination Bid

By The Associated Press

Lt. Gov. Lester Maddox, Georgia's segregationist governor of the 1960s, lost his bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination to State Rep. George Busbee in Tuesday's runoff election.

Busbee, a white who had the backing of black civil rights leader Julian Bond, took an early lead and never trailed.

Busbee, the majority leader of the Georgia House, refused to claim victory, but he said: "It does look good."

Maddox, who was governor from 1966 to 1970, did not concede. But he said, "I think possibly voter apathy — people thinking that we had it made — might have been part of the problem."

Maddox feuded with Busbee throughout the runoff campaign. When asked if he would support Busbee in the general election, Maddox said: "I can't support anyone who hasn't been honest."

Maddox led the 12-candidate field in the Aug. 13 primary, but he failed to win 50 per cent of the vote and was forced into the runoff against Busbee, the second-place finisher.

In the Republican gubernatorial runoff, retired Army officer Harold Dye held a slim lead over Macon Mayor Ronnie Thompson, who has issued "shoot-to-kill" orders to his police force in a crackdown on crime.

With 1,383 precincts reporting, Dye had 10,513 votes to 10,223 for Thompson

1972 Crash Suits Settled By Airline

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Eastern Airlines has spent $35 million to settle most of the suits arising from the 1972 crash of a jumbo jet in the Everglades that claimed 101 lives.

Settlements ranged from $150,000 to $850,000. The highest settlement went to Kuneko Goldfluss of New York City, whose back was broken and whose husband, Bernard, was killed when the L1011 jet bellied into a swamp 20 miles west of Miami on Dec. 29, 1972.

"I don't want to talk about the money," Mrs. Goldfluss said. "It can't bring my husband back. I try to keep myself occupied, but emotionally, I'm sick."

Ninety-six passengers and five crewmen died in the crash. Another 77 passengers and eight crewmen survived. Some escaped with nothing more than scratches; others are still being treated for injuries.

Court records here show a total of 82 suits were filed. About 60 were settled in Florida courts. The rest are either unsettled or have been transferred to New York for determination of damage amounts.

Eastern, which had $100 million to $150 million in insurance spread among four major firms, admitted liability after the National Transportation Safety Board blamed crew error for the crash.

The board said the flight crew was preoccupied with a burned-out cockpit warning light and did not realize until seconds before the crash that the airplane had descended from its 2,000-foot altitude.

Ronald Infantino, who would not reveal how much money he received, said, "No amount of money can make up for what happened."

Infantino and his wife, Fara, 25, were returning from their honeymoon when the New York-to-Miami flight crashed minutes before touchdown. Mrs. Infantino was killed.

As the jet slid through the swamp and ripped apart, Infantino was thrown 100 yards and landed in the watery sawgrass. His clothes were torn off, his right arm was slashed and his left arm was broken.

"All I could hear for hours was screaming," he said. "Everybody was screaming — including me."

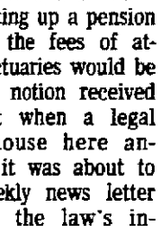

During a 40-day hospital stay in which he was given skin grafts and treated for gangrene, Infantino met a nurse named Susan, whose fiance was killed in an auto accident the year before. They are now married.

Infantino still travels by air, "but I don't enjoy it any more. I don't take life for granted the way I used to. It's too precious."

Youths Arrested For Burglaries

Six persons ranging in age from 16 to 21 have been arrested in connection with a series of garage burglaries, according to police. No charges have been filed.

Police said they have recovered about 15 toolboxes, three rifles and an assortment of tools from a garage at 3926 Baldwin.

Police made the discovery after answering a call at 3604 St. Paul in which car windows and a boat were spray-painted. Police went to the Baldwin address because a resident there was named as a suspect in the vandalism.

Fiery Collision Leaves No One Seriously Hurt

Five persons escaped serious injury about 1 a.m. Tuesday morning in a fiery, head-on collision on Cornhusker Hwy. between N.W. 1st and N.W. 4th.

Police said a car driven by Gregory Sorenson, 23, of 1329 C, and a car driven by James G. Rector, 19, of 1545 R collided; then the Sorenson car then burst into flame.

The Rector auto was eastbound and passing another car when the collision with the Sorenson car occurred, police said. Both cars were declared a total loss, for a combined monetary loss of about $6,000.

Sorenson was treated for a broken foot and facial injuries at Lincoln General Hospital and released. Two of three passengers in the Rector car also sustained minor injuries, but did not require emergency treatment, police said.

Saying Goodbye Can Be Sad Task

STAR PHOTO

STEVE . . . saying goodbye to Snowball.

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Fourteen-year-old Steve Yoesel was one of the saddest exhibitors at the State Fair Tuesday.

He skipped the first day of school to say good-bye to Snowball and Bumblebee.

His two steers were shipped off to Omaha to be slaughtered for the 4-H carcass contest. After the judging, the beef will be sold to slaughterhouses.

No, Steve didn't win any championships. He didn't even rake in any purple ribbons.

He admits he's a bit disappointed with a red and a white ribbon, but he figures hundreds of other 4-H'ers didn't win top honors either.

'Learned A Lot'

Despite the letdowns, the 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Yoesel (Pronounced Yazel) of Falls City said he "learned a lot" and he'll be back next year to try again.

"I found out they (the judges) are looking for more bodied animals, higher off the ground and longer through the loin," Steve said. "At the time I chose mine, I thought I chose the right ones, but I guess not."

The judges told him his Charolais-Hereford crossbred was too fat and his shorthorn, which had to compete with the mixed-breeds because there was no shorthorn division, was too short and stocky.

Picked Up Tricks

Steve said he also picked up a few grooming tricks from other exhibitors.

Instead of the usual scrub down and brush jobs before judging, many 4-H'ers rub their cattle with a special soap to make their coats soft and shiny, he said.

Some youngsters mix up a potion of alcohol, hair tonic and bay rum for fragrance. Not only do their cattles' coats glisten, but they're nice to sniff.

Winners or not, Snowball and Bumblebee have become pretty special to Steve, his two brothers and little sister, his mother said.

And Mrs. Yoesel knows firsthand just how attached a person can become to an animal.

As a teen-ager, Mrs. Yoesel, then Doris Hillyer, led Cookie, a Guernsey cow, through state fair and Ak-Sar-Ben showrings.

Cookie, who died last winter at the ripe old age of 22, left a legacy of ribbons and awards, including a championship purple rosette at the 1953 Ak-Sar-Ben Dairy Show.

Changes Noted

Over the years, Mrs. Yoesel said she's noted quite a few changes in the beef competition.

"It used to be the short, blocky type steer was what they wanted," she said. "Now it's just the opposite."

Like many 4-H'ers and their parents, the Yoesels wondered aloud if they can afford to keep up with the competition.

Not only will Steve probably loose money on his steers, once the feed bill is paid, but it's getting more and more expensive to purchase the high-grade beef that invariably wins the championship money.

"It gets to be if you don't put a lot of money into and animal, you won't get the good ribbons," Mrs. Yoesel said. "I hope they never lose sight of what the object of 4-H always has been — to learn."

Charges Result From Shooting Incident At Fair

A 26-year-old man was charged Tuesday with two felony counts of shooting with intent to kill in connection with an incident at the State Fair last Friday.

Lancaster County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront set Oct. 16 for preliminary hearing for Henry B. Johnson, who was released on $5,000 bond.

Johnson was specifically charged with shooting with intent to kill William J. Kanaley, a carnival worker, and M. B. Ibach, a state trooper from Chadron.

According to officers, a man was allegedly spotted waving a pistol around in the midway area and when asked by officers to turn over the gun he fled, turned and shot four times.

The man, who began to run after firing the shots, was apprehended by officers before leaving the fairgrounds.

Arson Investigated

Davenport, Iowa (UPI) - The Davenport Police and Fire Departments were investigating the deliberate setting of a fire in a men's restroom in City Hall here.

Missouri River Said U.S.'s Most Polluted

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Missouri River between Sioux City, Iowa, and Kansas City, Mo., is the most polluted major waterway in the nation, according to a new U.S. water survey.

But the same survey rated the upper Missouri, between Montana and Sioux City, the cleanest waterway in the country.

The 667-page Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) report studies 35 sections of 22 major waterways

The Missouri between Sioux City and Kansas City carries heavy loads of viruses, bacteria from animal and human wastes, metals, sulfates, pesticides and other chemicals, the report says.

It lists the major causes as inadequately treated sewage, runoff from animal feedlots, extensive irrigation, packing plant and other industry discharges and soil erosion.

The report lists the five dirtiest waterways as the lower Missouri, the Mississippi River in the Minneapolis area, the upper Arkansas River and the middle Missouri.

The cleanest were the upper Missouri, the Columbia, the lower Tennessee, the Snake, the Willamette, Boston Harbor and the upper Mississippi.

Pollution caused by sewage bacteria has declined over the past five years, but nitrogen and phoshorus pollution—primarily from fertilizer runoff—is getting worse, the report said.

The Missiouri's fecal coliform bacteria level, from human and animal wastes, is 10 times in excess of water quality standards for swimming and drinking downstream in the Omaha area, the report says.

It blamed runoff and discharges from industries and sewage treatment plants.

The report shows less than 50 per cent of major water contaminants are being removed by sewage treatment plants in Sioux City, Council Bluffs, Omaha and Bellevue, Neb., all located on the Missouri.

The report shows a large treatment plant serving 167,500 persons in the Omaha area is removing only 39 per cent of the pollutants.

No Conflict Foreseen With Business—Rocky

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice president-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller said Tuesday he foresaw no conflict of interest between his multimilliondollar business holdings and the nation's second highest office.

"Your basic assumption will be proven wrong, that a great influence exists," Rockefeller told newsmen. "My only constitutional duty would be to preside over the Senate, and the conflict of interest there is rather limited."

However, he added that should any conflict arise, "I would have no problems in taking whatever steps are necessary."

Rockefeller repeated his pledge to comply with the laws requiring financial disclosure during confirmation hearings before Congress — save for certain unspecified details of his personal fortune.

"I keep that option open, but I feel the public is entitled to a full and clear disclosure," Rockefeller said, in his first appearance at his New York office since his nomination for vice president last month by President Ford.

While an active aspirant for the presidency, Rockefeller once scorned the vice presidency as a standby post and suggested it was not for him.

"That was true 15 years ago, but not at this moment," Rockefeller said Tuesday.

The former New York governor reiterated an endorsement of a statement by Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., that former President Richard M. Nixon had been hanged and ought not to be drawn and quartered. But Rockefeller added:

"That doesn't mean that whatever appropriate steps need to be taken shouldn't be taken."

That, he declared was a matter to be decided by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

'Trouble Light' Banned; Judge To Order Recall

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington — A federal judge Tuesday ordered a permanent ban on the manufacture, distribution and sale of the household "trouble light."

U.S. District Judge George L. Hart Jr. also said he will require the manufacturer, the A. K. Electric Corp. of New York, to recall all unsold lights and provide a refund or replacement to consumers who request it. The company has sold nearly 200,000 of the lights.

Hart, who last Thursday asked news executives at the major television networks for help in publicizing the danger of the trouble light, Tuesday praised the news media for their "magnificent cooperation" and said there was no need to further alert the public.

Attorneys for the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission asked Hart to keep the case open so they could evaluate the effect of the publicity and come back to court for further help if they were not satisfied.

Hart replied that he would order the distributors of the light to report to the commission for the next 10 weeks on how many lights were returned to stores.

The product, which is commonly used in household and automobile repairs, consists of a long card attached to a light bulb protected by a metal cage.

The hazard in the light results from the soft plastic handle which may allow the user's hand to come in contact with the electric current, the commission had charged.

Five-State Crop Said 575 Million Bushels

Topeka, Kan. (AP) — The final winter wheat production in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado and New Mexico may reach 575 million bushels, the Santa Fe crop report for September says

This compares with the record crop for the five states in 1973 of 708.5 million bushels.

York Man Is Charged In Accident

York (AP) — Charges stemming from a fatal hit-and-run accident last Wednesday were formally filed against a rural York man Tuesday morning.

York County Atty. Joseph McClusky said he filed the charges in York County Court against Howard Gnauden.

McClusky said the charges filed included: motor vehicle homicide, driving while under the influence of intoxicants, leaving the scene of a personal injury accident and careless driving.

Gnauden's pickup truck was impounded following the death of Arthur Harig, formerly of Superior.

Harig, who had been in this area looking for work, was struck and killed last Wednesday as he hitch-hiked along U.S. Highway 34 about 5½ miles west of here.

Gnauden was released under a $1,000 bond, and a preliminary hearing on the charges was set for Sept. 25, according to McCluskey.

Final Rites Set For Boy Killed On Rope Swing

Hershey (AP) — Services are scheduled at the First Baptist Church in North Platte Wednesday for Bruce Nason Housman, 11, rural Hershey boy who strangled in a rope swing Sunday.

Walt Mullikin, county attorney and coroner, said the boy caught his head in the loop of the rope.

Mullikin said young Housman was using a single strand rope tied to a tree to swing from a pile of baled hay. The boy was playing alone at the time.

Bruce was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Housman, who live 5½ miles southeast of Hershey.

Other survivors are a brother, two sisters and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Jepsen of North Platte and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd James of Hayes Center.
